"You are...you are making a very scary face, there, Murderface, and I have to say I am, ah, feeling the heebie-jeebies from it." She giggles nervously at her own joke, before shaking her head. "But this has to be done, no matter how much you glare at me and wish me dead. I know this seems like I am taking advantage of your mercy by saying this now, but I have to tell you this - because everyone else has been keeping you in the dark."

The Russian gestures towards Midori's motionless form. "She tried to save you, like she did in Siberia. And she gave herself again, just like she did then. By all rights, she should be dead, but the Blessed Lady interceded. Again, like last time. But those are just not the parallels here, Murderface. There is one more, one more aspect in the circle that you are missing."

You look at her, and murmur the answer that comes to your mind, feeling it turn rancid and bitter in your mouth.

"I was betrayed."

"By me." Kharn gestures to herself now, one clawed hand over her breasts. "Someone close to you, someone who fought side by side with you and called you comrade. Someone who called you friend." She smiles, a sad and wan thing. "Of course, I do not pretend to be as close to you as Mami was, nor I am the perfect friend Sakura is to you, but I saw you as someone I...I needed to protect. Until...until I could not control my baser urges any longer."

"My nature is to fight, Murderface. To seek opponents stronger than me, more powerful than me, and cross blades with them. To revel in that dance of death and desperation, until I am covered in blood and brandishing a trophy skull to the skies in triumph. Friend or foe, it does not matter whence the blood flows or the skulls be reaped from - it only matters that it does." Kharn hangs her head for a moment, before looking up to stare at you directly.

"Life is a series of cylical incidents, Murderface. Life itself is a cycle. We find ourselves repeating our own mistakes, even if we tell ourselves that we've learned from them. Often, it is because of someone else, someone weak and cowardly. Other times....well, it is easier to blame God, I think. God or karma or an unfeeling, cruel universe. But it happens, and sometimes all we can do is close our eyes and hope we do not lose too many teeth in the process of having our faces smashed into reality."

"Do you...finally understand, Murderface? Or do I need to spell it out to you?" She laughs, a shameful kind of laugh, like the sort a friend would make after spitting out a very cruel, shameful joke.

How do you react?

I would hazard a guess that she is telling us that Mami is doing this because it is in her nature to do so.

Not that she is a betrayer but rather there is something deep in her psyche that drives her to this decision.

Mami pretends to be this because she wants to think she has improved from whatever she was in the past. But she never really did. Much like Kharn pretended to have moved past her bloodthirsty days, it never really happened.

IT'S SIMPLE

Midori almost died and needed to be saved last time around because Kharn was being a shitty betrayer

But this time around, when history repeated itself, Kharn wasn' there toi betray, but Midori ended up getting rekt anyhow

By Kharn's infallible murder logic, someone else must have been there to cock shit up

And the only person in the position and in the power to pull that off is Mami, Jesus Christ

No, it does make sense. Chiaki wouldn't kill Midori, not even her fragments would after all that has happened since then.The Blessed Lady wouldn't since she's in cahoots with Midorin. Ergo, someone with practically unlimited access to 9th Officio shit and alo huge, horrendous amounts of power must be the culprit.

This time around it wasn't Kharn, and the Rank leaders were all in cahoots with Midori, so the only person left over is Mami. It's like Sherlock says: if you rule out all impossible avenues, whatever is left over, no matter how incomprehensibly stupid or improbable, must be the correct answer.

It couldn't have been just anyone with the abilities of an infiltrator. They lack the sheer mindfucking power that Mami had to have to make this kind of impact once inside. Plus, if Mami softly asks to, nobody sees her either, or at least swiftly forgets that they did. As i said, nobody but her has the kind of All Area Access necessary to pull this shit off.

... and if you forgot, Wendy is Mami's bitch. Literally. Anywhere Wendy walks into, Mami could have been trailing ten steps behind, cloaked by her Callidus assasin servant.

Mami betrayed Wendy too, in that barrier. And she knows it. That is why she went and removed the Ribbon that Wendy wore around her neck as a symbol of Mami's dominance; she broke her trust and betrayed her sub, so she regarded herself as undeserving of bein her dom anymore.

Mami knows that she's a sinner. And after Midoris infodump-blast, now she knows she became one for completely retarded reasons, too.

Chiaki gained power through a gamble with a dead girl possessing a crazy girl.

MAGICAL GIRL NOIR QUEST
THE DEATH OF CHIAKI MATSUDA

☐ Magical Girl Noir Quest Deculture 01/15/16(Fri)09:22:24 No.44789678 Archived

You find yourself speechless. More unable to trust yourself to speak and less of having no adequate reply or rejoinder, what with your teeth gritting hard enough for them to feel as if they're about to break apart in your mouth. Your blood pounding in your ears, in your head hard enough to trigger the beginnings of a migraine, a migraine you'll have to alleviate with a handful of painkillers - or a mouthful or two of whiskey. Perhaps both at the same time.

"...What do I have to gain to accuse Tomoe Mami, Murderface?" Whether she took your silence as your own capitulation, or a sign that your temper was about to boil over, you will never know - but the misery in Kharn's voice drives a cold knife through your heart, drenching your temper in ice. "Your love of Tomoe Mami - stronger than that of the bond you and Hanegawa share - is no hidden mystery to me. Nor to anyone else. To accuse her of such a thing - even to cast suspicion at her - it is to court death itself. Moreso in my case - a traitor accusing another of treason."

"I live at your mercy, and by all rights, die at your behest." She laughs, a harsh and bleak sound. "You can execute me here right now and no one, not even Souji, can accuse you of any wrongdoing. That is how worthless I am in the Officio's heirarchy. But yet I still stand here, and I will not take back the words I have spat in the face of your forgiveness."

>>44789678

You force yourself to look back at Kharn despite the crimson mist of anger clouding your vision. Ignoring the twin stabs of searing pain once more making their presence known on your back.

"Tomoe Mami did this. No one else." She repeats again, her sunless eyes meeting your gaze.

How do you react?

Reposting from last thread:
It couldn't have been just anyone with the abilities of an infiltrator. They lack the sheer mindfucking power that Mami had to have to make this kind of impact once inside. Plus, if Mami softly asks to, nobody sees her either, or at least swiftly forgets that they did. As i said, nobody but her has the kind of All Area Access necessary to pull this shit off.

... and if you forgot, Wendy is Mami's bitch. Literally. Anywhere Wendy walks into, Mami could have been trailing ten steps behind, cloaked by her Callidus assasin servant.

Mami betrayed Wendy too, in that barrier. And she knows it. That is why she went and removed the Ribbon that Wendy wore around her neck as a symbol of Mami's dominance; she broke her trust and betrayed her sub, so she regarded herself as undeserving of bein her dom anymore.

Mami knows that she's a sinner. And after Midoris infodump-blast, now she knows she became one for completely retarded reasons, too.

So concluding from this, further bulletpoints:

1) Interview Wendy to confirm suspicions
2) Interview Coobs (don't forget to remind him that he lied about not knowing where Chiaki's amnesia came from, that's some plan he hatched together with Malal the smarmy cunt)
3) Kick him in the nuts and make him tell Chiaki in which basement they have dumped Mami off so she can cry on her lonesome for her misdeeds (fucking implying moon, my fat ass she's on the moon)
4) Interview Mami
5) Make hard decisions all on your lonesome.

Just a shadowrun of mine, but here's what happened:
- Mami realized she did something wrong
- she shot herself in the soulgem, or Coobs "retired" her
- "gone to the moon" is just an mgnq equivalent of "returned to the cake planet".

"I...I believe you." You hear yourself say. Voicing out your own betrayal in a voice that can only ever be described as weak. Feeble. Pained. "...But I don't know if I want to."

It doesn't make sense. It SHOULDN'T make sense. No proof, no motive - and for fuck's sake, the mental gymnastics that the Russian is asking, no, PLEADING for you to make to present her case as anything even remotely feasible is something that

But now that she's given voice to it - now that she'd all but forcibly planted that seed of doubt in your mind - it seems to be doing its best to hook its roots deep in your brain, burrowing into your skull.

For fuck's sake, before Kharn had started on her desperate charade - and it did stink of desperation as much as it did fear, which gave it a sick kind of legitimacy when you realize that she is, indeed, risking death once more just by saying it in your presence - the thought of Mami being a suspect had been the farthest thing from your mind.

Even in your wildest dreams you wouldn't have suspected her. It was just something unthinkable, instinctively repellent, the very concept making your skin crawl and your guts clench. And for you, someone who'd made her reputation being suspicious of nearly everyone around her to the point of paranoia...to be able to trust someone that much that to consider them above consideration of any kind of wrongdoing, especially with something as heinous and as unforgivable as this--

...

"I know it is unthinkable." Kharn murmurs, and you blink as you remember that you're not alone, still. "I know just how...heretical it all sounds. Tomoe Mami- OUR Tomoe Mami, being capable of such treachery." The Betrayer looks stricken, weary. "But I will not swallow back the truth and lie with my silence."

You nod, unable to say anything or even reply. This...

To say that you feel as if your world is slowly crumbling to bits around you is an understatement.

It feels like it's burning. Everything you love, being reduced to ashes all around you, and you're in the middle of the blaze - sitting on your chair and telling yourself that everything's fine.

Silence. Nothing but the sound of Midori's own peaceful, somnolent breathing.

"May...may I be excused, Warmaster?" You hear Kharn ask after what seems like an eternity later. Without taking your eyes off Midori, you nod, and you hear her exit the room, pausing for just a moment before closing the door behind her. Her lethal footsteps fading, leaving you once more to your own thoughts.

Mami. It's...you still can't believe it. You don't want to believe it.

But...

What do you do?

You decide to confront Kyuubey first, while you still have sanity left in you. While you still have your wits about you.

Because you know that you might not be in shape to talk to anyone else later, due to your plans of getting completely and utterly wasted as soon as you step out of your Incubator's office.

You're not sure how indulging your alcoholism is going to even help you deal with the thoughts running rampant in your brain right now, but damn if you're not going to try and force it.

Stumbling out of Midori's room - but only after giving the still-silent, still-sleeping Callidus one last hopeful look, a forlorn hope that she'd wake up right then and there and tell you how everything is going to be alright again - you begin to make your way to the mutant cat bastard's office.

But before you could even get two steps into the corridor outside Midori's room, you're immediately stopped by the guard detail outside. The armored Magical Girl squad, backed up by the two Culexus in their Anima Speculum hardsuits - all of them wearing your Officio's insignia like some sort of fucking girl scout badge as they impede your progress.

"Where are you going, Miss Matsuda?" One of them, the obvious leader, barks through what looks like some sort of fancy gas mask. Hiding her features from you. "You're not allowed past this point. If you require something, please summon the nurses with the Nurse Call button by your bedside."

This...this isn't the fucking time for this.

How do you respond?

[]I'm going to confer with my Incubator about Officio business. Please let me through.
[]Tell her that it's none of her business and they can go fuck themselves. Then push right past, ignoring them completely.
[]Let off some steam by grabbing the leader and smashing her into her nearest stooge. See if it makes you feel better.

For a brief moment, you imagine yourself lashing out. You see yourself immediately lunging forward, engulfing the leader Magical Girl's masked face with your palm, before smashing her brains out all over the nearby wall with the meaty crack of splintering bone. Then, with your other hand grasping the slackening corpse in your grasp, you pivot on your bare heel and bludgeon her nearest crony - your wings tearing their way out your back in wet, juicy rips.

It's an oddly comforting daydream. One that would have improved your mood, if it hadn't already been raped and stabbed to death in a dingy back alley and dumped there for the rats to eat whatever's left of it.

So instead of bringing that split-second fantasy to reality, you instead let out the breath you've been holding, and force your voice into a low, room-volume murmur. One that seemed to sound even more threatening than usual - even with you willing civility and politeness in your tones, despite you feeling the complete fucking opposite.

"I'm going to see my Incubator, confer with him about Officio business." Just like the watch-wearing dildo you've become, you think to yourself with an inward snarl. "...Please let me through."

"I apologize, but that's not possible." The unmurdered Leader replies quickly and curtly. "We have orders to ensure that you stay in your quarters to recuperate, Miss Matsuda. We were already pushing it with letting you visit the quarters adjacent to yours - to let you make your way to the Incubator's Sanctum is out of the question. I--"

The armored Magical Girl is cut off as one of the Culexus clears her throat, the polite sound turned into something akin to a tank changing gears by her helmet's vox-speakers. You then hear a click - the tell-tale sign of a private channel being engaged - and after a moment, the Leader glances towards her leather-clad team mate before nodding. Turning back to you with a frown audible in her own words.

"Well. Apparently, letting you go visit your Incubator isn't entirely out of the question, Miss Matsuda." The Leader visibly tenses as she seems to ready herself, slipping the sling off of her gun and clicking the safety off. Her trigger finger straight and resting against its guard. "You are allowed to call upon Kyuubey, but only with us escorting to his door. From there we'll wait until your meeting is over, and then we'll escort you back to your quarters."

...Christ, really? In your OWN fucking Officio? You're going to have escorts in your own Officio? What the fuck do they think you're going to do, go on a fucking rampage or something?

The entire security detail seems to freeze at that, but you hear a nearly-muted snigger come from one of the Culexus, the noise sounding more like an asthmatic wheeze more than anything else. But it's there. "Funny now that you mention it..." The Leader begins, but you don't let her finish her sentence, simply choosing to continue your stumbling journey. The follow you soon after that, an entire squad marching beside you, making everyone else traveling in the opposite direction stop and flatten themselves against the nearest wall to prevent themselves from impeding your progress.

It's...certainly strange, to walk through your own Officio like some sort of guarded criminal. You're sure that it's happened to you before, but like every other memory of those simpler times, you've fogotten about it. It's...a lonely reminder, one made even worse by the fact that everyone seemed all too eager to avert their eyes from you. Focusing on anything else BUT you, even deigning to plant their eyes on the ground, or on the spot above your head, or even the ceiling.

And to think that you were once loved enough that they'd been falling all over each other trying to get you to notice them.

Probably the whole turning into Satan thing, but you can't really be sure about this nowadays.

At least, you hope so.

Soon enough, you find yourself in front of the doors leading to Kyuubey's Office. True to their word, the security detail doesn't follow you inside - simply standing in stiff formation with their backs towards the entrance. Your last sighting of them as the doors close being one of the Culexus flashing you a thumbs-up sign.

...Well. Anyway. You turn around and make your way into Kyuubey's Office, where his inner sanctum is - throwing a glance at the receptionist's table where Mami had once sat behind - and immediately stumble into what seems like a meeting in progress.

One that seems to be between Rea Ashford, your Vindicare Rank Leader, and the mutant cat bastard himself.

The blueprints of what looks like a very well-defended military fortress or bunker flashed on the LCD-covered walls and floors of the sanctum itself.

"...Entry isn't the problem, it's breaking out that's going to be the challenge." You hear the bespectacled blonde Vindicare murmur, her eyes glinting as she pointed towards something labelled 'Lunar Base Airlock'. "From what Miss Vintage has told me, they have self-propelled drop pods for emergency planetfall, but they go into full lockdown mode once the base goes on full alert. And it will be, even if we try to be quiet about the rescue attempt."

"What about teleportation?" You hear Kyuubey muse. "I'm sure that--"

"Teleportation wards go right up along with full alert. Nothing gets in and out of there." Rea shakes her head. "Unless, of course, Miss Vintage furnishes us with the access codes, but I'd rather not have her risk it. Tensions are running high, especially with the attack."

"There must be something we can do." The Incubator frowns. "We can't just let her get executed-"

Rescue? Planetfall? Executed? You frown, not really understanding what they're going on about but not liking the sound of it all the same. What's going on?

Both Rank Leader and Incubator blink as they seem to finally notice your presence. After a moment, the Incubator turns away from you to tap something on his keyboard - and the blueprints disappear, replaced by what looks like an aerial view of Mitakihara. At the same time, Rea turns to snap off a textbook salute at your direction. You return it immediately, still puzzled but somewhat comforted by that gesture of normalcy.

"Matsuda, good to see you're finally up and about." You hear Kyuubey say. "I was wondering when you'd come up and meet me, but I realize that your trauma from Regalia needed days of recuperative rest." Those crimson beady eyes staring into your soul as they swivel towards you. "Well, nevermind that. What can I do for you?"

Before stepping into Kyuubey's office, you'd hoped to re-establish some sense of normalcy in your life by...well, shooting him. Or something. Yes, you had something to talk to him about - something about him allowing Malal to use your fucking brain as a condom and just fuck your memories out whenever she felt like it - but that's secondary to how desperately you want things to feel like normal again.

This whole thing with Mami, it's...it's knocked you off center, shaken you to your very foundations. Even when you yourself know it's bullshit, from Kharn's baseless accusations to the huge leaps of logic the Russian was pleading for you to ignore. So yes, you needed something to snap out of that, else you'll be completely fucking useless to anyone for longer than you think.

But now those hopes have been all but dashed as you stumbled into what sounded, at first, like an altruistic rescue mission. Probably some Ninth Officio girls captured or trapped behind enemy lines, or something. Until you saw the blueprints being flashed on the screen-walls, and overhearing some key details. Key details that you can't help but ask about.

"Who's getting executed?" You ask in an incredulous snarl. "Where? What the fuck are you planning? What the hell is happening to my Officio?"

Kyuubey looks at you, then at Rea. The diminutive Rank Leader meeting your Incubator's crimson gaze with a silent one of her own, before she nods and rips off another crisp salute towards the both of you. You return it again, and the twintailed blonde immediately leaves the Sanctum, the doors sliding closed behind her.

>> ☐ Deculture 01/15/16(Fri)14:36:03 No.44793765

"Approximately five days ago," Kyuubey begins as soon as Rea is out of view and earshot, "We received a notification from the First that Tomoe Mami, during what appears to be a casual sparring match - enacted an assassination attempt on the First Warmaster, Amane Hazuki. While it fortunately ended in failure, the attempt itself caused the murder of one of the First's reserve members, as well as inflicting considerable damage to the base itself."

Your eyes snap open in complete and total shock. W-what? Mami? Trying to assassinate the FIRST Warmaster? That's...that's got to be a fucking joke!

The mutant cat bastard nods. "She was subdued before she could do any more harm, and was tried a few hours later. She stands guilty of the following charges: attempting to harm an Officer of the First Officio Assassinorum, attempting to harm the Warmaster of the First Officio, murdering the Warmaster of the First Officio, and a host of others that I probably don't need to mention, as they're mostly permutations of the same thing, really."

Kyuubey taps something on his keyboard, and a grainy picture of what looks like an unconscious, trussed-up blonde - her once-pristine Magical Girl costume in bloody tatters - flashes on the screen. "She is sentenced to die tomorrow evening, and we are cordially invited to see her made an example of."

You shake your head, feeling all blood, all warmth, drain from your body.

No. No, not Mami. This isn't real. This isn't fucking real.

This has to be some sort of nightmare. Some sort of bizarre alternate dimension you got dragged into by Pinky, or...or...

No. Just no.

You're not losing her. Not Mami. Not the only other person who stuck with you no matter what, made even you believe that you could be something better than the washed-up Magical Girl you've always been.

You manage to tear your eyes away from the image on the screen long enough to glare at Kyuubey.

HOW? WHY?!

NO! No, this is -- this is the fucking last STRAW! This entire fucking morning has been one goddamn knife in your back after another! First Midori, then Kharn, and now this--!!

"Calm. Down." Kyuubey repeats, his voice as placid and as level as ever. "We can panic and succumb to any maudlin emotion as we like, Matsuda, but that never does anyone any good. It certainly won't help us divine the reason just why Tomoe Mami tried something so...audacious in the first place."

You shake your head at Kyuubey, before turning back to the image. As painful as it was to look at, it...well, it gave you some relief that she was still alive, at least for now. At least until her execution. Which means you can still see her. You can still talk to her.

And you can hear her tell you how Kharn was so fucking wrong about everything. About Midori. And then you'll--

"You'll what, Matsuda?" Your Incubator's stare is piercing, right through the soul. "You'll break her out? Intercede in her own execution, opposing the First's judgment, which in itself a crime worthy of execution as well? Is that what you'll do?"

How do you respond?

Is anybody else getting numb to all these twists? Like the story is just getting yanked away from any major objective (collecting golden weapons) by random asspulls. Mami suddenly showing up and betrays us, Midori dying, and now this feel less like part of the story and more like ADHD. Like Deculture randomly thought they were neat ideas without thinking through the consequences. Is the Church Arc going to be another Prophet Arc?

Well it all makes sense now.

Mumi was something akin to an undercover agent for the First. The probably have sleepers in the Officios as well.
Meanwhile the First Officio is in fact a cult dedicated to You-Know-Who.

Thats ironic actually. Pinky and her Church gets all the blood-thirsty and mentally retarded ones while the Satan-Worshippers actually were an Officio on their own which only the best of the best make it into and so they dont have to be bothered by shit OR Pinkys shit they are on the moon.
Only acting once it became apparent that its not Homuficer has appeared but the Transcended One.

Wendy was an useful tool for Mumi.
Mumi found out Chiaki is about to become the Transcended One and fuck it up for everyone.
Mumi goes to try and REMOVE MEGUCA but due to Midoris Mindfuckery finds out what the real deal is and that the First being a Cult of Homuhomu is probably being used and lied to by Homuhomu herself.

This is why she attacked the leader of the first.

TL;DR:
-The First one is a den of HomuHomu-Cultists
-They want to get rid of Chiaki on Homuhomu`s Orders because either she awakened as the Devil but retains her sense of self instead of being just a Homu Expy.

She did do that one, but we blasted Mami in the face with all of our hot memories.

Which is why we need her alive.

And then she continued, "This world did not exist, nor will it ever be known as more than mere words spoken, for the unthinkable was thought, and the undoable was done, and the universe was refitted to make the unthinkable thinkable, and the undoable doable." It doesn't matter what the First really is.

I personally think that they're a scrap heap, a literal back burner, that the Incubators put people on that have grown dangerous and strong enough to become a threat to their rule, but it's irrelevant.

We don't have enough information on the First to make any guesses, and all of them round up to the same thing anyway: don't stick your dick into the hornets' nest.

So you just put the First out of your mind for now and think about things you can thing about and now for sure. Those being:

1) Mami now carries the sidename The Traitor
2) Kyuubey still pretends not to know this.
3) Kyuubey still has about eight other cases of lies to answer for.
4) Kyuubey is, right now, trying to distract Chiaki from this very thing in order to save his own ass.

To be more specific, and according to Decu ask.fm: The biggest witches (WPN level) came from ripples in reality in Pinky soulgem. The First has to fight them daily, and because the witches have not reached their full power, they are not really at WPN level, but still are pretty hard, and fighting in space give The First advantage. Its pretty easy obvious if you think about it.

Why would Malal refuse to join the First when she was invited?
Why would she refuse to join a bunch of people that had more weight behind them than some of the other Warmasters?

Because of her Visions she knew what was happening with the First and that joining a bunch of Homu-Cultists that are actively working towards fucking up the Universe without knowing it has no benefit to her goal: Preventing that everything gets fucked up by her own set of retarded plans.
For the very same reason she was wary of Mumi. Might have even been aware about it that Mumi was working/part of the First.

The First is OBVIOUSLY aware of Pinky being the real deal and of her Grief Seed floating in space, so why haven't they acted against the biggest threat to humanity and the universe itself yet?
Because someone feeds them lies.
And who has only shown herself once or twice despite everything APPARENTLY going tits up for her? You guessed it: Homuhomu. The reason she only has appeared just once is because everything is going swell for her and that she has the First under her thumb.

And remember that someone else managed to not only casually fuck Kharn up in her prime but also Murderface.
Who else would be able to do that than one of Powerhouses of the First?

Everyone got played like a fiddle.

How the hell do you kill a witch with the powers of a deity? They didn't do anything about Pinky because they don't want to, but because they couldn't. Nothing the First has will damage or hurt Pinky. But they could do something about the witches that form around it.

But that's the thing though. They didn't know. They might or might not have been aware of it. Shit it might even have been due to Malal that they didn't find out. Other than QB and Kaneda no one else knew who Murderface really is. Or they were aware and didnt curbstomp her at Homuhomu`s behest because she was sure that at some point one of her past versions would eventually grow unstable and turn into a vessel for Homuhomu herself.

Homu is the devil.
Chiaki/Murderface is the Anti-Christ that was supposed to be Homu made flesh in this world. Just like Pinky/TheBlessed Lady Homuhomu priobably is unable to interact with the world in a very direct manner.
Heck, it wouldnt surprise me if Coobs AND Malal were hoping to use Murderface/Homuclone against not only Pinky but Homucifer herself, aka the one who is controlling the first.

I don't buy Mumi's failed assassination attempt. This is either a trap by the First or Mumi deliberately failed the attempt to set her own agenda.

The way her attempt was done reeks of "So the story is I make a reckless assassination attempt uncharacteristic of me because Midori's exposition turned my world upside down." A serious Mumi would bide her time for a better set-up, after a lot of manipulation.

This is all set up for us to bring our Golden Weapons to the Moon.

Which means we have to go anyway, since that's where all the action and answers gonna be, but it'd pay to watch out for round two of Mumi Knows Best.

You throw the question right back at him. Right back at his furry mutant cat bastard face.

In response, he shakes his head again, before bringing up the blueprints once more. This time, shifting it around so the view is less of a flat series of schematics and more of a three-dimensional representation.

"Then you may have also overheard how it is impractical - even suicidal - to attempt such a thing?" The quizzical tone in Kyuubey's voice is enough to set your teeth on edge. "Setting aside the fact that opposing the will of the First is considered treason, and calls for not only the execution of the perpetrator but also their Officio as well - the lunar base itself is heavily shielded, heavily warded, and heavily GUARDED. Not just by menials or security personnel, but active First Officio personnel. This includes former Warmasters, officers-in-training, as well as the First Warmaster and her retinue."

So? You shake your head, even though you feel a cold sweat break out on your back. It says riht there, there's probably no more than twenty active Magical Girls on the moon base at any given time--

"Tweny of the most powerful Magical Girls in any Officio, Matsuda, and that's no exaggeration." Kyuubey looks at you. "Twenty Maerorus, all trained and capable to take down Witches by themselves. Witches that often nearly reach the size and strength of the last Walpurgisnacht, sometimes even outclassing it." The Incubator glances back at his own array of screens.

"But supposing you can get past all that security, past the strongest Magical Girls alive, with Tomoe Mami still alive in your custody - there's still the matter of safely achieving planetfall. And as you heard, teleportation is out of the question. The drop pods may be of some help, but you need the access codes for it - and those are very zealously guarded."

Ngh. But...there has to be some way--

"No, there isn't." Kyuubey cuts you off. "It's a fool's errand. As much as I'd like to have Tomoe Mami back here with us, I can't in good faith risk that many lives and Officio resources trying to retrieve an agent who is, by Officio Law, guilty and deserving of her sentence." He shakes his head, before letting out what sounds like the most emotive sigh he'd ever let out of his tiny furry cat bastard lungs. "Only a devil would have a hope of pulling something like that off."

You turn to look at Kyuubey. The mutant cat bastard not meeting your gaze, his attention focused on the array of monitors in front of him.

"Our - or should I say, YOUR - attendance to her execution is mandatory, by the way. I suggest you make your own preparations. Being invited to be in the personal audience of the First Warmaster, even during these tense times, is a privilege." He pauses here to look at you. "With our reputation quite compromised by this, your being there to denounce Tomoe Mami and her rash actions may also go a long way to preserving relations with the First, and restoring their faith in our loyalty." He nods at you. "So be sure to make yourself presentable, Matsuda."

...Right. You'll...you'll make sure to.

"Good. I'm glad we understand each other." He holds your gaze for a moment longer before turning back to his work. "I suppose you have something else to ask me? If so, make it quick, I'm rather busy at the moment."

QB WANTS Chiaki to go Full Transcendent One when she gets to the Moon, in order to break Mami out.

Probably they can afford to reap all of the Officio's down to an Incubator and a small handful of Magical Girls.

They can just activate the First Officio Reservists, and that'll be enough to cover all anti-Witch operations on the planet and the Moon until Magical Girl populations are rebuilt.

The simple fact that Mami is not on the moon, and by bypassing a questioning of Wendy the anons in this thread managed to basically condemn Chiaki to walk right into whatever trap the incubator has laid out for her.

Mami's a loose cannon and has zero relevant connection to the First, at least in this matter of attempting to murder Chiaki. Everything Kyubey said right now is a coverup, which I told you all in the LAST thread, after figuring out that Wendy was the inside man that Mami made use of to get at Chiaki in the silent room.

The First is a red herring, one that is so big that it blinds everyone of the truth, that being that Mami had a little whoopsie that wasn't as little as Kyubey would have liked it to be. So he needed a bigass decoy.

Mami is not on the moon. Mami attempted to kill nobody but Chiaki and Midori. Mami is in some 9th Officio basement crying her eyeballs out.

Find Wendy, mine her for info, and maybe Chiaki can still get the necessary amount of sense into her head to not completely become the Incubators puppet again.

Wendy knows that she dragged Mami into the god damn Silent Room. She's well aware, and she knows exactly what Mami did too, because, well.

Remember that scarf that Wendy always wore?

One of Mami's yellow ribbons was always underneath it. They had it going on. But when Mami busted out and fucked them all up, she removed the ribbon. Wendy may have been knocked out but once she touches her own neck and adds one and one together she can very well figure out what the hell went down.

So, let me get this straight:
1) Mami's gone crazy on Chiaki and Midori but feels guilty now (that's probably true)
2) She made a mess and alerted the First, so QB had to find a distraction (yeah, why not)
3) So in his wisdom he wants Chiaki to fly to the moon, probably reveal her identity as Homusatan Reborn and incriminate an entire 9th officio in the process (whut?)

Is that right?

There is a simple fact that you have not considered: when all is said, even if Mumi execution it´s not real, Chiaki is obliged to go to The Moon to "witness" it. All in all, we are traveling to the First Base even if we don´t want to Good thinking, anon! But I have a hunch that if Mami is being kept in a silent room (on the moon, on Earth, whatever), contacting her through Wendy's dream magic may be impossible.

MAGICAL GIRL NOIR QUEST
THE DEATH OF CHIAKI MATSUDA

☐ Magical Girl Noir Quest Deculture 01/20/16(Wed)09:25:24 No.44895427 Archived

Yeah, you have something else to ask him.

"Then ask it, Matsuda. Or - wait a moment - I think I know what you're going to ask." Your Incubator pauses in his unnatural touch-typing to swivel his round, beady-eyed head towards you, the two spheres of crimson embedded in his skull piercing through yours.

"Let me guess - you were about to ask, with the same absolute lack of respect and basic communication skill that you've always spiced our conversations with - what possible right did I have in authorizing Malal inserting memory-wiping failsafes in your mind, in the worst-case scenario that you remembered who you TRULY were?"

That's...you blink at Kyuubey, momentarily taken off-guard by the clear, almost palpable tone of mounting aggression and anger in your boss' voice. That's...pretty much what you were about to ask, yeah. But you're supposed to be the angry one here! You're the one whose mind was getting fucked with his okay! What fucking business does he have being angry when--

BANG. Loud as a gunshot and brighter than the resultant muzzle flare, one of the flatscreen LCD monitors on Kyuubey's desk array explodes in a sudden shower of sparks and broken glass, cutting you off and making you take a step back.

What the...? What the fuck did just happen?

Suddenly, it's here that you feel it. A pressure. A crushing, stifling heaviness bearing down on you as Kyuubey jumps off of his hilariously-oversized chair, landing lightly on the floor beside his desk on all fours. Stalking towards you slowly, with infinite feline grace.

And for the first time - you find yourself rooted to the spot, frozen, like a deer caught in headlights.

>> ☐ Deculture 01/20/16(Wed)09:26:41 No.44895443

>>44895427

Kyuubey has never been intimidating to you. How could he be? A furry white creature, in the shape and form of a featureless, harmless cat. A form you've always held in snarling contempt, and had made abudantly clear with multiple and recurring attempts of murder. A form that you've kicked, shot and levied a whole range of crippling physical abuse at, whenever you lost your temper or simply wanted to enact a little bit of vindictive cruelty whenever Mami wasn't around to see it.

A form that had shrunk away from you in a recoiling flinch when he saw firsthand what you've become.

But now--

"I was hoping that your colorful, if somewhat brief experience Warmaster had at least taught you something about accountability, Matsuda." Kyuubey's quiet, level voice echoes sharply in your mind, clear as a bell. "Being accountable - responsible - for livelihoods other than your own. LIVES other than your own."

He stares up at you. "If that were indeed the case - and it's regrettably clear that it isn't - then I wouldn't have to explain why I let Malal do what she did. I wouldn't have to explain to my Warmaster WHY I made such a decision, in language that a child would understand."

It's only through force of will that you manage to break whatever spell that the cat had rooted you to the floor with - at least temporarily - and you manage to gasp out a protest. One Kyuubey doesn't seem to hear, or if he does, he ignores it.

"Imagine, Matsuda, that one of your trusted officers finds a bomb in some conflict-ridden hotzone. A bomb that you can certainly use against your enemies, or perhaps even monetize in some way that would turn a profit for you."

>> ☐ Deculture 01/20/16(Wed)09:27:45 No.44895450

>>44895443

"But something is wrong with the bomb. An inherent flaw in its wiring, perhaps, has its timer continuously counting down to detonation no matter what is done. It can't be fixed - it can't be dismantled - and if the countdown does reach its terminus, then everything burns. Not just your life's work, not just the people working underneath you - everything, in a cataclysmic explosion. Everything reduced to ash, everything rendered useless."

"All your other officers are telling you to do the sensible thing, to bury the bomb or jettison it somewhere where its explosion would harm no one. You have no obligation towards the bomb - you have many like it, some more obedient, more profitable than others - just that this one is more dangerous than most. And for a moment, you almost decide to do so - until your most trusted advisor tells you that she has a way to indefinitely delay the bomb's explosion, or at least until a way is found to repair that deadly flaw."

Kyuubey pauses in his lengthy tirade to sit back on his haunches, still staring straight into your soul.

"A failsafe, to reset the countdown whenever it gets too close to its terminus. Something that could be considered cruel, but then again, you do not owe the bomb any favors, you do not owe it any mercy. And you are certainly much more interested in keeping your own struggling organization afloat rather than become the minder of something that could spell the doom of civilization itself - even though at the time you simply had an inkling of its devastating capabilities, and were not told of the entire story. All you had to go on was a favor owed, and a promise to be kept."

He must have seen the look on your face for him to let out a sigh, one that makes him shrug his tiny shoulders, the feline gesture oddly human.

"Matsuda, I allowed Malal to do what she did because it was the only recourse that was available to me at the time. The only recourse that didn't involve having you taken out and shot, or dumped back into the nightmare Tomoe Mami found you in." And then, all at once, the pressure lifts from your shoulders. "It was also the only recourse that Malal would permit me to take - with her calling in all the favors I owed her. And despite everything I've learned from my brothers, everything I've learned from this world, everything I had resembling common sense - I went through with it. Even when you posed a danger to my Officio - and, after your more recent transformation, the entire universe. Apparently."

He stares at you. "Did you really think I allowed it simply because I thought it was amusing to see you stumble around, unable to remember even your own name after your last episode? Did you honestly think I would enjoy something like that?"

How do you react?

It's even more than that I think, bear with me for a moment.

I'm assuming here that Malal told Coobie all the information that he needs. So he knows that Chiaki has to get the golden weapons (otherwise he wouldn't encourage us to get them in the first place), otherwise universe is screwed. Now, for the rest ot the magical world it looks like one crazy incubator tries to equip satan with powerful weapons, who would allow that really. The First finds out and 9th is bacon. So my take on QB's action is: go nuclear, even if it means going against his brothers. He's an incubator with nothing to loose. And that's good, because we're desperate too.

You...well, you were struck silent by seeing Kyuubey visibly and palpably pissed at you for the first time in your life, but now you're quiet because you can't really -say- anything.

It's not that what he's saying makes an entire world of sense - in fact even you can point out that with his resources, his staff and even fucking MALAL at his side at the time, he could have gone a less memory-rapey route, or at least worked up to it.

But when framed like that, you can see how he arrived at that conclusion. You don't like what he did, sure, but at least you understand why he did it.

And from his explanation, it seems that Malal did quite the job in twisting his furry little arm into it, to the point of breaking it off. And if there's anything an Incubator hates, it's admitting that he got flimflammed and bamboozled - moreso if the culprit was someone other than a fellow Incubator. So no chance of him lying about that, or shifting the blame onto the dead.

So you let him know of your capitulation - or at least, grudging agreement for now - with something you know he'll appreciate: your silence. And he seems to be doing just that, the oppressive mood from earlier lifting, slowly being replaced by something that oddly feels like confession.

Contrition, even, of a sort, which is bordering into the morbidly surreal, especially coming from something as emotionally sterile and coldly pragmatic as an Incubator.

"Of course, I had my doubts, and for a while I resisted her attempts to strong-arm me into relenting. As I'm sure you'll agree, even without taking recent events into consideration, that simply getting rid of you would have been the cleaner, faster resolution." Kyuubey shakes his head, his long ears flapping with the movement.

"But Malal was insistent to the point of monomania. She seemed to have some kind of large, overarching plan in mind, a series of long, over-elaborate gambles that would play out over varied periods of time - from minutes to years, or at least that's what I managed to glean from her own shielded, surface thoughts." He looks at you. "And most of them revolved around you, or someone who would associate with you in some way or form."

The mutant cat bastard pauses for a moment, turning towards his monitor array - and the damaged one still sparking, still smoking as it hung brokenly from its pivot arm - before looking back at you. "She called in every favor, every debt I owed her. Not only to allow her to do what she deemed necessary, but...well, to allow you to flourish. To ensure your safety and professional growth to a point, without overtly influencing your career track as a working agent in this Officio."

You open your mouth to say something here, and he holds up a paw. "No, before you say it, I did not take it upon myself to treat you any different as I would any contractee. I sent you on tasks and missions that any other Magical Girl under my employ would have to undertake to earn her salary AND her keep. I was only made to promise that I wouldn't relegate you to manual, menial labor, nor would I prevent your rise in the ranks simply to keep you out of danger. I was only to treat you as a regular contractee despite your irregular origin."

They could have told us of what we did, even if they couldn't tell us how we felt or what we were thinking.

And everything points to us having a great career when Malal was still around, then after she was gone, we had a few legendary exploits with absolutely pathetic performance in between.

We could have learned just what kind of a fuckup we were, and how badly we screwed up right before getting another memory wipe.

Then, your becoming Warmaster--

"--is Tomoe Mami's fault, and hers alone." Kyuubey replies curtly. "Had it been up to me, I'd have overruled her decision and forced Miki Sayaka to take the position. But here we are."

...Yes, here you are indeed. With Mami about to face execution by the First of all things, and you...well, the least said about you the better.

Christ, you murmur to yourself, shaking your head in disbelief. Your knees weak and your head swimming as you try to absorb everything that's been told to you. Feeling an insane need to laugh and cry at the same time, at the sheer absurdity of everything you've ever heard.

This is some shit all right.

Kyuubey is silent for a few more moments before speaking again. "For what it's worth, Matsuda, I did my best to convince Malal to give you peace after the first failsafe was set off. But she was adamant that you'd be able to endure that kind of trauma. Something about your...legacy of being hardheaded, I often heard her telling herself, while she watched you suffer."

You have no other reply than to sink slowly down on the floor, planting your ass on the cold plastek and hugging your knees to your chest. Burying your face into your arms.

"I'm sorry, Matsuda." You hear Kyuubey speak again. "We Incubators are not known for being emphatic, but I would surmise hearing all that didn't help any." There's a note of guilty sheepishness in his voice, one you hear clearly along with his nearly-silent footsteps. After a moment, you feel him sit down beside you. Seemingly trying to commiserate through proximity, like a confused middle manager would to a harried subordinate.

How do you react?

We need to check if the Dolls are still around an if they can do this op since we fucked them up pretty good when we went partial TTO.

Also we need to ask QB if a cloned Mami body could be switched in, or if the execution method involves the Soul Gem and we need to figure out a way to replace that.

What if we get the Dolls to bait a Walpurgisnacht-class Witch into crashing into the Moon Base and make it look like Mami's Soul Gem was destroyed in the attack?

No. No, it didn't help any, you murmur as you lift your head just enough to look down at your Incubator. But...well, you suppose you just wanted to hear it from him.

Maybe you just wanted to hear someone say sorry to you and actually mean it.

"I see." Kyuubey replies after a moment. "Matsuda, I--"

You never let him finish his sentence. In a gesture you feel would never have been appropriate except for this particular insteance, you reach out with a hand to touch him - and predictably, he flinches. But instead of shrinking further back or simply just breaking a hasty retreat, Kyuubey seems to stand his ground - not only tolerating yourtouch, but allowing you to pet the soft, bristling fur on top of his head and give it a good scritching with your nails.

"..." The Incubator is deathly silent as you subject him to his treatment, and is silent still, even after you've finished indulging yourself. As you stand up, whoever, it's there that he seems to find his tongue again. At least, he would have, if you didn't pre-empt him this time.

So what's the plan? You ask him as you brush your awkwardly-long hair out with your fingers, before throwing the majority of it over your shoulder with a quick flick of your wrist.

"...Plan? Plan for what, Matsuda?" He asks, clearly puzzled. "I just explained to you why you've been a blank slate for as long as you can remember. If you're asking me what my plan to survive being shot in point-blank range, well, it's mainly by running back up here and having housekeeping dispose of my remains before the ants get here. If that's what gets it out of your system, then--"

No, no, not that. You shake your head irritably. His plan to break Tomoe Mami out of wherever shithole the First Officio is holding her in. Because that's what he was hinting about, right? All that 'only a devil can pull it off' bullshit?

Because while you may not be the sharpest knife in the drawer, you know a fucking hint when it's dropped on your lap like that.

Kyuubey stares at you from his spot on the floor, before something approaching amusement colors his words. "...Well. Perhaps I was trying to insinuate something like that, hoping you'd pick up on it, what with your obvious intimacy with Tomoe Mami, but..." He shakes his head. "Matsuda, now that I think more on it, I question the wisdom of actually doing so. This is The First we're talking about. Any other Officio and this would not even be up to debate. But to defy my older brother's ruling, and to oppose his wards..."

The mutant cat bastard glances about his office. "We are not only talking about your destruction if you are caught, Matsuda, but my Officio as well. The First does not tolerate insubordination. It is tantamount to rebellion to him, and he punishes such sins by wiping the slate clean. Purging the existence of the Incubator as well as any contracts he made, to ensure that no one will be around to remember or to avenge."

Huh. Well, at least he's thorough, you smirk. Wondering briefly if you wanted to risk opening your Inventory, to try and rummage for some smokes. Or at least a bottle of whiskey. You know you promised Midori, but with everything you've had to deal with, you feel that you deserve to indulge on some deliberately bad behavior to balance your suffering out.

"Very thorough. He'll even have his Magical Girls - each one an Officio on their own, mind - hunt down any transferees or officers on loan to other Officios, and purge their existence as well. Cutting threads, Matsuda, to ensure nothing can be traced back, that no lingering taint of corruption exists."

The Incubator's words trail off into silence, the hesitation clear in his voice. Clearly conflicted on what he wants to do and what he says he wants to do.

How do you respond?

[]I'll take the fall for it. Just give me a plan. Something to go on, unless you want me to do what I do best and just show up with a gun in my hand.

Also, QB already said that with the First's thoroughness, it won't matter if we take responsibility or not. Haruka is a traitor to her own Officio (the 3th). She revealed the infiltrators in the 9th after Malal & Co parched back her mind. Kharn wanted to execute her for this, seeing that it was something innoble, but QB decided to keep her to track witches and make a fortune in Wall Street. I don´t jnow how the other Officios see her (or even if they know about her), but among the 9th, she is indeed a traitor

It's just that I needed to confirm exactly what you were talking about, before telling you that YOU'RE WRONG.

"Mantling" in TES only happens because the entire universe is, in fact, the dream of a sleeping god. And dreams can get fuzzy on details. It's hard for the god's subconscious to keep apart the dreamed characters' identities - so if events approach a climax in a manner that's vaguely similar to something that happened before, it is possible for a pivotal character to switch identities (and thus, power) by fooling the god's subconscious through literally acting similar to the identity they want to Mantle.

None of this applies to either canon PMMM or MGNQ, as this universe isn't a sleeping god's dream.

From where do you get that? QB only mentioned that she was the leader of a group that tried to kill Murderface, but never mentioned that Haruka was already inside. From what I remember, there was groups of megucas from the 3th that refused to join and became rogue, so Kharn, Murderface and Malal hunted them down. One of this groups was Haruka´s group. What´s more, Hat-Chan mentioned in ask.fm that Haruka was convinced by a group of rebels to lead into killing Murderface, wich ultimately ended in Haruka being haunted by Pinky, the same state that she was when Malal found her

For Gods' sake people, keep the violence-boner in your pants, because you're currently in the process of getting rused again. I mean, Kyubey basically just sweet-talked Chiaki into suicide, and in the same breath told her that murdering her had been what he had in mind for her since day one... and now that the last mental leftovers of her patron saint Malal are gone, he has no reason to keep her alive since she managed to break out of even that kind of failsafe and nobody can put a failsafe that strong back.

It's a suicide mission in the most literal sense of the word, it's actually supposed to be suicide and little else.

Yeah, guess what: it's not Mami's execution.

It's Chiakis.

In case you forgot, we had been told (by Kyubey) that Mami went to the Moon BEFORE Midoriquest 2 happened. It was a lie, obviously. Mami never went there, she stayed on Earth and busted into the silent room with Wendy's help when Wendy and Midori entered it, to pull her traitorous shenanigans.

Evidently, whatever Mami pulled, Kyubey had been working for / with her.

This means that he was either complicit or approved of the murder attempt that Mami tried to pull on Chiaki.

So what he's selling Chiaki right now is just continuing the same old con with hopes of making Chiaki put the noose on herself.

Do you have any problems with my logic or are you just shitposting? Because I don't believe I made any errors in that.

Mami gone during Midoriquest and not avaliable for backup because she's supposedly on the moon = true.
Kyubey telling people that she is on the moon = true.
Mami backstabbing Chiaki and Midori with Wendy = true.

So from that point onwards, you can pull whatever logical conclusions you want to pull, but I'm going with the idea that the character who took over the role of Mephistopheles (an actual Devil's Advocate) from the original Faust and just, right now, admitted that he wanted to see Chiaki dead from day one, still wants to see her dead. Not so far fetched, right?

Except that if she does end up there and pulls what she just basically agreed to she'll just be swiftly disposed of, which is exactly the kind of plan I see Kyubey working out. Like, five magical girls worth an officio in fighting power each taking on the giant problem child he's been dragging around all this time? Sounds like an incubator kind of plan.

You'll take the fall for it, you immediately reply. You'll take full responsibility. The Ninth won't be implicated - it'll just be you, acting on your own, lone wolf gone mad style. Wreaking havoc inside the First's moonbase, causing enough chaos for a prisoner to escape.

Kyuubey just needs to give you a plan. That's all you need. Something to go on in the face of the most powerful - and probably the most overrated - Officio around. Unless, of course, all Kyuubey wants you to do is to do what you do best, and just show up with a gun in your hand.

"That's..." Your Incubator looks up at you, incredulous. "Matsuda, I realize up to now that you've relied upon plans and strategies haphazardly thrown together one minute before midnight, and it's been working out with moderate success. And I'll admit, that takes quite a bit of skill, as well as luck, and that's nothing to sneeze at. But I reiterate, this is the First." He shakes his head. "They are not the typical kind of Magical Girl you're used to dealing with, or blowing the kneecaps off of. They're of a completely different breed."

Then that gives them a generous enough handicap, you counter. Of course, you can't help but feel unnerved by this too - you've always known him to be smugly confident about nearly everything in his own quiet, alien way, even if sometimes you can't help but feel that you're just imagining it. To have him admit another Officio's superiority this blatantly, well...you start to wonder if you're rushing into things a bit too quickly.

Then again, if you were the type to actually think things through properly before doing them, everything that had happened up to this point probably would have gone over a bit better, rather than how they actually did.

>> ☐ Deculture 01/20/16(Wed)14:10:21 No.44899124

After a moment, Kyuubey speaks. "I...I can't believe I'm saying this, but I'll...I'll see what I can do, Matsuda. I have no guarantees on whether I'll have something that'll work, or if I'll have anything feasible at all, but I'll try." He lets out another sigh. "You must understand that this my talking earlier about attacking the First, of mounting an assault, they were all just hypotheticals. Nothing concrete, just a mental exercise that proves to be entertaining every now and again, and frustrating the rest."

That'll be enough, you tell him. But in the case he doesn't come up with something, you have some deniable assets of your own that you can probably use here, tools that you can use without them being traced back to you.

Your Incubator seems to look uneasy here, and for a moment you thought you saw his fur briefly stand on end. "I...I see. Well, that may prove useful here, Matsuda. But like I've been saying, even if you do somehow manage to shoulder all responsibility for this endeavor, there's no guarantee that the First will see the rest of the Ninth as completely innocent. Casualties may not just be expected, but a certainty.

That's...nh. That's true. That's the last thing you want to happen, of course - you've no plans to risk anyone else's life but your own. But perhaps if you just make it clear enough that you're the one behind it all, to establish that you are working completely solo and without the support of the Ninth, then--

"Perhaps, perhaps." Kyuubey quickly nods. "Like I said, there are no guarantees one way or the other. They are thorough, yes, but perhaps if you project a strong enough identity, something other than the Warmaster of the Ninth, then maybe they wil leave the Officio - and Midori - alone."

You stare at Kyuubey for a while longer, narrowing your eyes at him.

Fucking scheming bastard cat, you knew he was going to trot out Midori in front of you sooner or later.

"I'm simply being the scheming, conniving superior you've always imagined me to be, Matsuda." Kyuubey seems to smirk here. "But as far as planning is concerned, I would like you to at least think it through, once you've made the trip and you're standing in the hallowed walls of the First Officio's base. Make your decision then and there - and we'll deal with the consequences of whatever choice you take."

...Yeah. Alright. You give Kyuubey a small nod, wondering if for once, you've managed to convince your own Incubator of doing something he would really rather not do than the other way around.

It's a strange feeling.

"I never thought there'd actually come a day that I'd be seriously contemplating rebellion against the First," Kyuubey says as he makes his way back to his desk, the broken monitor glowing as it seems to repair itself right then and there.

"Well, perhaps it is a long time coming. I had an inkling that one of us - the Seventh, the Eighth, or myself - would be the one to challenge our eldest brother into a fight we could never hope to win." He chuckles here. "And to think I was the one who did his best to follow the First's footsteps, to live up to the expectations set by him. There's a certain irony here, I think."

Who's to say Mumi, one of the best and actually still owning a Golden Weapon couldn't find her way in(or have a guide from the First) from the Moon right through the Akashic Realm which is possibly a dimension wholly made of witch barriers ?

Worse still, there could be Magical Girls on the Moon who could send her straight into that barrier and pull her back to the Moon.

You misremembered the most important thing: The more Chiaki gives in to TTO, the more control TTO gets over Chiaki. This is not how Mantling works in TES, but it IS what happens whenever Chiaki came close to "remembering" - which we can all assume you've completely forgotten.

The problem with your logic is that, as QB reiterated, the First is still likely to see any violence committed by Chiaki as a sign of rebellion by the Ninth, and will kill every Magical Girl in the Officio and execute QB via atmospheric immolation.

Once, Mami attempting to murder the First Warmaster, can be happenstance. But from how thorough the First has been portrayed to be, he will assume that second is enemy action, and will execute the entire Ninth.

Your idea depends on QB willing to risk his entire Officio and himself to being branded traitors.
It IS far-fetched, and a really stupid idea.

>They are thorough, yes, but perhaps if you project a strong enough identity, something other than the Warmaster of the Ninth, then maybe they wil leave the Officio - and Midori - alone.
Wait, so Coobies is suggesting that we pretend to be TTO or something? Even Chiaki herself identified TTO as someone with her face! That can´t possibly work! And if not TTO, then what identity? Identity, that, by the way, will "casually" have the face of the Warmaster of the 9th

It's because Wendy and Mami had a close relationship that Mami exploited in the barrier.

In case you didn't notice that, in that one storypost where Mami bowled into the barrier and busted everyone to the floor, while everyone was either knocked out or tied up with her ribbons, she went over to Wendy and removed the ribbon her bottom was wearing around her neck.

That's a collar, basically, because Mami and Wendy had it going on BDSM style. She always wore that collar, that collar is the reason Wendy always wore a scarf, so people couldn't see it. But of course, it's still Mami's ribbon, with all the magic bullshit that entails.

The way I see it, either Mami had Wendy cloak her into the barrier or simply used the ribbon around Wendy's neck like a fishing line to draw herself into the barrier along it. Not to mention that Wendy was at least as slavishly devoted to Mami as those girls that had willingly given her their soul gems to use as fucking ammo for the golden musket. I'd implicate her in anything.

Deniability.

If someone kills the Warmaster in her hospital bed people will ask a lot of questions. Before you go >natural causes or >make it look like the barrier killed her after all, no, Warmasters don't die without a fight ever. EVER.

If the Warmaster goes on an attempted murderspree on the Moon and gets wasted in turn (or at least so the official story goes) nobody will bat an eye. Hell they'll probably say she deserved it.

Why would deniability matter? Only the incubators are powerful enough that they might do something about killing a Warmaster, but they don't care. Megucas don't care because who cares about some other officio and they don't matter because Incubators can always contract. Mundies have never mattered and will never matter.

If Kuubi wanted Chiaki dead as much as you say he wants, he would not care about anyones opinion over it.

No, there's Megucas that would be very upset and also very powerful. The entire Rank leader block and the Equerry in the 9th, basically the whole top floor, would flip its lid. Kyouko and in turn Sayaka would lead the charge, with Kharn hot on their heels, babbies or no. Because nobody buys it that the incubator was too fucking stupid to have the highest degree of safety for his comatose Warmaster.

The outside security was literally a redshirt squad. If Chiaki woke with murderrage, as has happened and only cooled off because of Kyouko, she would have busted out her wings and her dolls would have rendered the security team a smear across the ground. The sec team was only there for apperrance purposes, to seem as if he was giving a fuck, while providing warm bodies to get pulped (that he didn't have to pay for to equip) in case of bad stuff happening. If he had actually given a fuck he'd have made up a security team from his own officio, or simply made Kyouko room with her.

But she already did that, in the barrier. The Golden Weapon Spectres were like beyond-first-tier dangerous and she swatted all of them down just by letting her inner Homusatan out.

Here's another reason for Kyubey to take her to the moon: he knows that trying to get her killed will lead to unbelievable collateral damage, on the kind of level that would have him prefer to have her not even on the same planetary body as him and the rest of humanity. The moon is plenty empty enough for ultra-meguca to have a beatdown without wiping out a couple hundred million lives in the crossfire.

2 problems with that: one, is the fact that Chiaki wasn´t herself, so is safe to nassume that "that"Homusatan is not

Chiaki, and two, if is really Chiaki, then is clear that she lost her mind when she goes full Devil, and that means that even if she wins the battle, she doesn´t have to do as we want, because is like another personality.

I still wasn't proven wrong on any of the facts I provided, mind. If anything you have an issue with the conclusions I draw, I'd like to see the ones that you would draw. To quote from further up:

Mami gone during Midoriquest and not avaliable for backup because she's supposedly on the moon = true.
Kyubey telling people that she is on the moon = true.
Mami backstabbing Chiaki and Midori with the help of Wendy = true.

So from that point onwards, you can pull whatever logical conclusions you want to pull, but I'm going with the idea that the character who took over the role of Mephistopheles (an actual Devil's Advocate) from the original Faust and just, right now, admitted that he wanted to see Chiaki dead from day one, still wants to see her dead. Not so far fetched, right?

I never heard of that theory. The good thing about my theory is that it can be verified in three threads at the very most, at a very low effort, in a course of action that is now practially assured (visiting Wendy).

And I am just pulling basic logic out of the drawer. I'm not going out on a limb when I say that the Incubator is evil, that's the entire premise of the franchise. I also see how you failed to show up any mistakes I made.

I know my theory sounds outlandish because it goes against what major characters have told to Chiakis face, but the fact of the matter is that all the characters that have done so have been proven time and time again as massive fucking liars. Namely Kyubey.

Try to disengage from the forced perspective of Chiaki and look at the quest world a little more objectively. There is no reason to trust the alien. There is every reason to double check, verify and look for alternate ways to get out of this shit.

Hell, what I'm personally banking on is that finding Mami chained up in some 9th officio basement will send Chiaki into such a rage that she'll muscle down on the Incubator and tell him that if he doesn't want his real body to be flayed from existence by her dolls he should try not treating the reincarnation of the boogeyman of his species like a play puppet. Because if Kyubey has proven himself to be anything, its selfish and mercenary, even towards the rest of the incubator race.

Not at all. The situation will develop into something we cannot predict from where we stand right now before that point. I suppose it all depends on what Chiaki aka us will be able to choke out of the Incubator.

If he can be made to actually support Chiaki, maybe all that we'll have to do is have him call up the First and blow off the assassination plot, given that Chiaki can be assumed to be in control of her powers and not about to go ahead and wipe out the Incubator race. At least as long as Kyubey stops trying to fuck with her.

After that, well, it seems like Chiaki ran out of enemies by now. All that's left is to go ahead and scour the world for the other Golden Weapons, now that she's actually in control of her officio like she ought to have been from thread 100 or so, and after that's done start the endgame with Madoka. I know that someone in the First has like five, maybe Chiaki can fight her for them in an honor duel.

If he does not support Chiaki after she has found out what he plotted against her, well... at that point all I can see happening is that she will sic her dolls on him until nothing is left of his existence anymore. From that point onwards we're really cooking with gas, since that would mean more or less declaring war on the Incubators, and I am not sure if I would prefer this one or the other option because while the former one pleases my sense of right and wrong, this one here pleases my sense of blood and justice.

>If anything you have an issue with the conclusions I draw, I'd like to see the ones that you would draw.

You asked for it:
- the're two Mami clones, the first is earthbound, the seconds lives on the moon
- Mami that's about to be executed is the real Mami, the one that tried to off us is Candeloro.
- there's actually no moonbase.
- there's actually no moon.
- we're still in the barrier in Regalia.
- we're still in Midori's illusion.

All three of your fact are actually a one single fact: that Mami is known to be somewhere where she wasn't. Going from that to that QB master plan is a long shot at least. Don't get me wrong, I don't think you're theory is necessarily wrong. It's just far from 1000% future canon.

You know, you basically described the plot of MGS on a whole and also the cold war right there. Protip: anyone with a brain will not make any overt moves against you while that thing is operable, and I don't see Homu going out of comission any time soon, at least not before she found all the golden weapons.

Come to think of it, this actually sounds like the safest option to fight the First. Anything else would be putting them on equal footing, this would force even them to back the fuck off and consider what the hell they're up to. Raw power is cute and all but Madoka and Homura literally run this reality, you don't argue with reality warpers who managed to get both control of their powers and control of their mental faculties.

You assume that QB is trying to assassinate Chiaki right now, that he has a plan to do so with the First, and that the First will stay his hand from sending everything at his disposal at the entity that killed his entire race.

All your facts can just as easily support:
Mami used one of the First's Teleporters.
She attempted to murder the Warmaster of the First in an attempt to eliminate the other Homura who could be used by TTO, after she received Midori's memory dump.

The facts that you hold up as being so crucial to your ideas are not in doubt, just as that there are spirits inside the Golden Weapons not in doubt.
But the conclusions you draw are so outlandish, based on information known both in and out of character.

>Mami gone during Midoriquest and not avaliable for backup because she's supposedly on the moon = true.

The Moon has teleporters. Mami can hop from the Moon, to Earth, and back, without issue. Unless we have someone with evidence that Mami was on the Moon and in Chiaki's barrier at the same time (which we don't) the two aren;t mutually exclusive.

>Kyubey telling people that she is on the moon = true.

Yup.

>Mami backstabbing Chiaki and Midori with the help of Wendy = true.

No, that's supposition.

Remember, we already know that using a target device you can teleport from the regular wolrd into a barrier, the Akashic Realm, etc: Tiny Pete's Teleport Device.

Mami put a Ribbon around Wendy's neck, as a condition for her staying in Mitakihara without Mami killing her.
Mami teleported from the Moon into Chiaki's barrier using the ribbon as a target.

> I'm going with the idea that the character who took over the role of Mephistopheles (an actual Devil's Advocate) from the original Faust and just, right now, admitted that he wanted to see Chiaki dead from day one, still wants to see her dead. Not so far fetched, right?

It is when he's thrown away EVERY OPPORTUNITY PRESENTED TO HIM ON A PALTTER TO OFF CHIAKI. He turns down killing her while unconscious with the helpful nearby disposal hired goon squad he can blame and then liquidate, and isntead uses some cockamamie plan that will either fail and have Chiaki surive, or succeed and have him killed in retaliation? Yep, pretty far fetched.

Fact: Mami had a way to track Wendy

MAGICAL GIRL NOIR QUEST
THE DEATH OF CHIAKI MATSUDA

☐ Magical Girl Noir Quest Deculture 01/30/16(Sat)10:48:33 No.45108800 Archived

You are a Magical Girl, and you appear to be contemplating suicide.

Not any kind that you've tried before, obviously. Not that beautiful lie of passing peacefully and painlessly into the dark, dreamless ether with a belly full of painkillers and whiskey - a lie you had to find out the gut-wrenching, acid-retching, vomit-coated truth about, as your own magically-enhanced physiology somehow seemed to catch wind of your intentions and forced your stomach to pump itself out, all over your apartment floor. Those blessed, ignorant days when you were too drunk to remember that you have to crush your soul gem into powder in order to put yourself out of your own stinking misery.

Not the kind with you having your own gun for dinner either, a death you've quietly found to be nose-scrunchingly distasteful despite having come close to doing it yourself more than a handful of times. Distasteful not because of the obvious mess it'll make, but how you've always considered it the most flagrant display of indignity one could ever do to one's own gun. To eat your own gun after years of forcing other people to choke on it - you might as well start using the thing as a fucking hammer for your soul gem instead. It'll be much less shameful than being found in the cold dead grip of someone who couldn't even off herself properly.

No, this kind of self-termination is the sort only Kharn would dream of: the blaze of glory suicide. To get your ticket violently punched while kicking the biggest, meanest beehive you could ever find, and this one is the fucking Empire State Building of beehives.

The fact that you're rescuing someone from said beehive certainly adds a layer of heroism to it, but it does little to change the fact that you are about to get royally skullfucked by zombie ninja bees from outer space, with nuclear-powered stingers the size of combat knives.

The First Officio. The most powerful group of Magical Girls in the world, where Warmasters plucked from their own Officios end up to undergo...further training. Training that apparently turned them from the stellar Magical Girls that they already are, being Warmasters and everything, and into something that could conceivably solo a Walpurgisnacht-level Witch on their own - that is, if they could be spared from their offworld assignment, where they fought Walpurgisnacht-level witches on a daily basis. Preventing these space-borne monsters from making planetfall en-masse as they spawn from the gigantic Grief Seed hiding behind the moon.

Or at least, that's the official story. You have your own suspicions about the First, just like everyone else. One of the most popular being that they're simply the First Incubator's nuclear option in case one of the Officios underneath him stepped out of line and needed purging, down to the last girl. Nothing like the clumsy, protracted murder that Kharn perpetrated on the Third - a purge by the First would be quick, clean, and merciless. There wouldn't be anything left of the unfortunate Officio to bury, much less remember its failures by.

...That's a thing, you find yourself mulling over as you make your way to your vault. Your guard detail thankfully absent, having been diverted somewhere else by your own Incubator.

Kyuubey did tell you about that being the Ninth Officio's eventual fate if you do try to spring Mami out of there, not that it needed to be said. It won't just be you being hunted down - the rest of the Ninth will suffer the sanction of the First, too, and you're not that stupid to not be able to imagine how that'll go.

Christ. It's come down to this, then, hasn't it? Being made to decide on whether to let one of the few people you wholeheartedly and completely trust suffer execution - or to condemn your Officio, more than a thousand Magical Girls foolish enough to look to you for leadership - to a cleansing purge so thorough their families would probably be included in the ritual genocide.

There's a third choice, though, you remember as the vault doors clank open and then slide closed behind you. A third choice that Kyuubey himself seemed to hesitate in suggesting. One that would involve you taking on the role that you were unceremoniously shoved into a Silent Room to prevent yourself in taking it in the first place. The reason why Malal had embedded memory-eradicating failsafes in the liquor-pickled slush you call your brain, to stop you from remembering.

It's a valid option, of course. One that could possibly take all the heat away from the Ninth Officio, especially if you play your part hard enough. Hell, you play up things just enough and you'll get EVERYONE'S attention, with every single Officio combing the earth just to hunt you down. Which isn't all that bad of an exchange, considering the tradeoff.

Just that - you're not sure if you actually want to own the goddamn wings and the dress and everything else that much. You don't know if you want to be known by that kind of image, when you finally get your fifteen minutes of fame.

...This is fucked. You're not supposed to be the one deciding all this, you grumble to yourself as you look down on your collected Golden Weapons. Each one glistening in its custom foam inset, or glowing from its rack. The latest addition, a golden hequin staff still marked with Oriko's - or Ahriman's - blood - noisily crackling with pent-up energy, intermittently rattling against the metal loops holding it in place.

You shouldn't be the person whose decision has the life of more than a thousand magical girls hinging on it. And you're not even going to think about that whole world-destroying stuff that's been getting spat at your direction with increasing frequency.

Speaking of those decisions, though...what the fuck do you do with these things?

You can certainly bring them all along with you. Even if you change your mind about causing a ruckus up in the moon, having your collection within Inventory reach isn't something to sneeze at, especially when it comes down to the wire.

But then - and you hate to even consider the scenario - your own Officio will be left without these as a last-ditch defense option, in case the First does go full retard. It's just as suicidal as you rescuing the blonde from certain death, but at least someone - anyone - using them could hold the First off long enough for an evacuation. Hell, they may even take down a few with them.

[]Start clearing out your vault into your Inventory.
[]Take a choice few. No need to take them all.
[]Just take one along with you.
[]Leave them all. Save your goodbyes.

There is a fourth choice that we should consider:

Use the Dolls to lure one of the Walpurgisnacht-class Witches to strike at the Moon Base itself, then have them put Mami in the platypus suit and whisk her away in the confusion and sudden explosive decompression.

And then we can be all "Hey, it wasn't me. I was standing right next to you when the Witch attacked, remember?"

The staff likely contains Yuma, who's probably trying to tell us something important. She might be able to help with this plan.

We STILL haven't checked that, since Ahriman self-destructed her soul and the next most likely candidate to inhabit the Staff is Yuma.

Let´s be honest: The First posses Golden Weapons without a doubt. Also they are like 1000000000 times more powerful than our girls. If they want to fuck the 9th, they will do it without much trouble. We have better chances of achieving this if we go full Stan and have all of them with us

I doubt that will work. Decu stated in ask.fm that the WPN-class witches are not at full power when they emerge from the Grief Seed of Pinky, wich gives The First an important advantage. Also, most likely the witch won´t make it to The Moon because The First will intercept it before it can. So this plan has no options to be viable

So Chiaki doesn't suspect it, but its pretty obvious this whole "execution" of Mami is to lure Chiaki out of the 9th all the way to the moon. We're gonna be walking into a trap, and Mami's the bait.

Mmmmm... well, maybe. But, that probably would require the cooperation of Pinky to work (and we all know that she is an unstable ally, to say it in a soft tone). Even if she agrees, there is a very high probability that she will release a fuckton of WPN-class witches only to laugh at us, and let´s not forget that The First is neccesary for the protection of the world: without them, this ultra-powerful witches will have free tickets to arrive at the planet, and by pure power and numeric force they will destroy the world. So, as much as I would love to burn The First to ashes, we have to thing in long-scale terms before shaking your head in disbelief as you empty your vault into your Inventory. Summoning your Shield back onto your arm with a snap of air pressure and snarling gears, and then proceeding to manhandle each weapon into the pocket of static reality that the strange time-stopping device has always allowed you to access.

What the absolute FUCK were you thinking? You're going into the fucking belly of the beast here - no matter what you decide to do up there on the moon, you need to be prepared, and in that kind of space where the potential hostiles can probably bend reality over a barrel and rape it without breaking a sweat, you'll need every edge you can get.

But more than that - one of the reasons you started collecting these things was to make sure no one else fucks themselves over by wielding them. For you to even consider letting someone else use them, even in that kind of emergency...no. Just no. There are desperate measures, and then there are measures that go past desperate and into the realm of pure bloody-minded insanity.

So, all they go into your Inventory. Muramasa being the first, because it's the one you've always secretly despised, even if Kirika had been cooperative the last few times you used it.

Then the bangles, which warmed up in an almost affectionate kind of way the moment you touched them, reminding you of a cute white-haired girl, her tanned features hidden in the shadow of her voluminous hood.

After those, the chainaxes - the heavy, brutish, savagely-toothed things that your predecessor had wielded with a grace that you know you'll never be able to replicate.

>> ☐ Deculture 01/30/16(Sat)12:16:32 No.45109985

>>45109978

Then the staff - the latest addition to your collection. Still sparking, still shaking in its rack. You give it the barest flicker of attention before tossing it into your Inventory. Even without touching it you know the spirit inside wants to talk - which you'll indulge, but not right now. Not when you have other things to worry about.

Then, finally, your gun. The Desert Eagle, the very first Golden Weapon you acquired. Where every other weapon had been taken from its previous user, this one was given to you, with the pink-haired demon grinning as she shot you in the head with it. All to wake you up from a Callidus illusion, of course, one that would have seen your client raped in front of the Internet had you been a moment slower.

...Hnh. Strange, you murmur to yourself as you hold the blocky, oversized handcannon in your hand. The weapon feeling cold and dead in your grip, as opposed to the usual warmth that blossomed from the handle outwards the moment you touched it. As if something vital inside the weapon had died - or, less morbidly, had stopped recognizing you as its owner.

Goddammit, this is why Chiaki doesn't get vital info until the last second: she ignores people when they want to tell her something important, then blames them for not telling her something important.

We know that the Staff wants to talk, that they usually help us when we actually listen to what they're saying, and then we casually throw her into stasis.

Of course people are pissed at Chiaki and don't want to tell her important shit.
She ignores them when they try to help and blames them when she inevitably fucks up because she didn't listen to what they were trying to tell her.

This is...hnh. Normally you'd just pass off any erratic behavior involving Golden Weapons as...well, something that's just about them, being physics-breaking fucking things that they are. It's a great coping mechanism, and had allowed you to grab some shuteye whenever they started acting up.

But this is the Desert Eagle. YOUR Desert Eagle. Your gun. Golden Weapon or not, it's been a reliable, dependable weapon ever since you started using it, and it's never let you down since, even with the whole...being a vessel of the souls of your past incarnations or some shit like that. It's gaudy, it's oversized, it shoots and hits like a fucking battleship cannon - but it's yours. And up to now it's never behaved this way, and that's enough to worry you.

You close your eyes and try to contact the three spirits residing inside your Golden Eagle. Slowing your breathing and willing yourself calm to be able to allow yourself to get pulled into communion with your past selves.

You open your eyes a moment later, and see the truth. Your brow furrowing in confusion at what you see.

The mirrors are empty. All of them, not just the fourth. The mirrors where Dildoes, Braids and Murderface would be staring at you from, each one smirking, smiling and glowering in turn - all empty. Not even reflecting anything, even when you step closer to them.

"They're gone," A voice coming from your right pipes up, and you turn to see yourself in the fourth mirror. ...No, not quite yourself, but a younger, healthier-looking you. With the bobcut and everything, but also a Mitakihara Middle School uniform instead of your costume. "Gone, and probably not coming back until they feel like it. Which could be a very long time, so I wouldn't hold my breath."

We can't depend on Time Stop when the enemy we're facing has access to both Magical Girl and Witch powers.

We saw with Kirika that someone else who has Time powers can still operate within our Time Stop, so we need to know if any of the First have Time powers by looking them up in the Magical Girl Registry (mostly likely some of them do).

That's the argument point, though.

You have some who feel that it's just as good as when it started. You have some who feel that the quality's still high, but the story's been dragged out for too long and/or started collapsing under its own weight. You have some who feel that the (number of) conspiracies, background activity, shadowruns, etc have made the story too difficult to follow. And so on and so on.

Early on, it might have passed for noir if you squinted, and the freewheeling "let's throw everything in because fuck it" approach to blatantly ripping off characters and stuff was tons of fun.

But it's become big and unwieldy, with characters and writeups and worldbuilding encrusted onto it like barnacles on a whaling ship. I liked the concept of magical girl officios as magical guns-for-hire for, answering the world's call for wetwork. It was an interesting spin on the concept.

But now we're bogged down in some sort of big epic fantasy thing to save or destroy the world.

It's like I booted up Max Panye, and it turned into a Bioware RPG with a cynical narrator.

>The shield on your arm - the device that stops time itself around you - is behaving strangely. It's clicking, as always, and you feel it grow warmer with each passing second - but there's something strange in the way it clicks. Like the gears are catching against something, unable to function.

Just in advance, how many of you want to risk killing everyone to save the Mami. Cause as much as I like her, she had a good reason to try to kill us, even though she now knows better, she's fucked. Even if we save her she'll spend the rest of the quest in hiding. Or she'll kill herself to prevent us from fucking everything up AGAIN.

This is most likely a trap where they try to kill us/take our golden weapons.
Saving Mami is something we should do because it will allow us to garner support from the MGs in other offificios and therefore increase our chances to win the inevitable war.

If it turns out that it's not a trap we should let Mami die and avoid any possibility of Malals vision coming true.

You spit out the blindingly obvious at the fourth mirror. Of course you know why they left - you just didn't think they'd actually do it. Even Braids - and you remember her as someone who stuck around even when the other two had begun acting up after your sudden transformation.

"Yes, it's always disappointing when people do that, don't they?" Your younger self shakes her head mournfully, soft unchapped lips curling into a frown. "She - by that I mean Braids - put up quite the fight, but the other two dragged her away. Said they didn't want to involve themselves with someone who clearly had other ideas - ideas different from what had already been agreed on. You know, the whole not-actually-turning-into-the-Devil kinda idea."

YOu didn't fucking turn! You snap at the mirror reflecting your unspoiled, unscarred self right back at you, a mockery of everything you've put yourself through and at the same time a melancholic reminder of who you once where. You're still...you're still yourself! Even with the fucking wings, and the goddamn dress, and everything else, nothing's changed--

"Really? Can you truly and honestly say that?" Your reflection cuts you off, in a voice unmarred by whiskey or cigarette smoke, with words said from a throat unscarred from too much coughing and retching acid. "Look at me. Look at yourself, Chiaki, and tell me nothing's changed with a straight face. Let's see if you can manage that at least."

You glare at her, and repeat yourself, word for word. Word fucking perfect. Forcing yourself not to brandish your gun or shoot the mirror for emphasis, because really, what good would that do for anyone?

It'd make you feel better, sure, but that's beside the point, isn't it?

"...Well. Alright, then." Your younger self grins nervously, seemingly caught off-guard for the first time. "Either you're woefully ignorant or just that deluded, but you seem convinced that nothing's changed. Hold on to that." She pauses for a moment, as if listening for something, but shakes her head and resumes speaking. "Still, as you can see, they're convinced that you've screwed the pooch somehow, and decided to stop helping us."

Yeah, you can see that. So what do you do, then, to get them back? How do you get your past selves to return and keep doing the three stooges thing?

Your reflection in the mirror shrugs. "Not really sure on that point. I mean, they're free to come and go whenever they want, this gun is kind of the receptacle of all your previous incarnations. Just that they were the most prominent, seeing as they each represent a significant point in time in the life of Akemi Homura - or in this case, Chiaki Matsuda." She points to herself. "I guess you're just stuck with me until they decide it's worth coming back."

...Great. Fantastic.

Your younger self frowns deeply. "Fuck you. You think this is fun for me? You think I asked for this? I'm not even supposed to be in here, fuckface! If you didn't hand off your goddamn soul gem to that blonde bitch, I'd still be--"

She stops in mid-sentence, her crash so abrupt that you look up at her in alarm - but all you see is your reflection letting out a sigh, her shoulders drooping as she presses her forehead against the mirror's surface.

"...Sorry. This...self-loathing thing's not easy to deal with." There's a thud as your reflection gives the glass seperating the both of you a kick. "How in the world do you deal with this? You hate yourself as much as we hate carrots, for fuck's sake. Maybe even more than that. What did we ever do to us? Do we piss on our cornflakes every morning? Do we do that?"

Heh. Cigarettes and whiskey, mostly, you tell her.

"Right. Well. That explains it. Somewhat." The raven-haired girl wearing your unscarred features smiles. "Anyway, alright, we're a bit short-staffed at the moment, so all you get is me. And normally we'd have to really get to know each other for us to help each other better, but seeing as these are special circumstances let's cut through that red tape." She grins. "Any time you think someone's full of shit - and it doesn't take a Culexus to see that you have lots of walking, talking sackfuls of the stuff in your near future - I'll tell you if they are."

What, like a truth detector?

"Exactly like a truth detector." She nods, proudly. "And I know my shit when it comes to that, so you can trust my analysis a hundred percent. Just don't have me use them on everything you hear - it's going to be very obvious to them that you think they're full of shit, and you don't want that to happen - but for the really important bits, where you want to make sure they're on the level? I can check that for you."

Yeah? That sounds...well, handy. Should be good to know if someone's deliberately jerking you around, or what.

How's she going to do that, though? Reading their minds or what?

"Oh, no, I can't do any of that. It's more of just analyzing what they're saying, body language, that kind of thing - AND then cross-referencing their statements with the patterns and consistencies I've discovered throughout other timelines." She taps her temple with a finger. "Remember all those migraines you keep having? That's your brain trying to keep up with ten thousand years' worth of hoarded information and memories. With me, I can cross-check what someone's saying with what I can dig up about them, and tell you if they're bullshitting you based on what I find."

Now that sounds REALLY handy.

"Yeah? Well, don't break out the champagne just yet. Remember I'm not omniscient, and what I dig up may not always apply to what's happening now." Your younger self smiles sheepishly. "This timeline's pretty janky in some spots and twisty in others, and that's gonna affect my analysis some, but the big picture's still the same, so you can trust me. Maybe...ninety-eight percent? Something like that."

...Alright. You'll take it. Better than nothing.

"Riiight." She bites her lip as she looks down at you, before nodding. "Just...in the interest of clarity, I suppose? Don't ask me to verify anything you might not want verified. Okay? There's a reason why some psychologists kill themselves, you know."

The cute schoolgirl wearing your face and trademark haircut smiles at you, a small, melancholic thing made rancid with pity. "I was hoping that wouldn't be the first thing you'd have me verify." She reaches up to adjust her glasses, the lenses briefly becoming opaque, hiding her glowing purple eyes from view. "Miss Valnikov Kharn said this to you, right? Earlier during the day?"

You nod to confirm this. A moment later, she lets out a sigh. "Do you really want to know? Because I can just discard this verification before it finishes if you change your mind--"

A glare is all it takes for her to shut up, and it's only after a few more moments that she nods. "Sorry. Had to backtrace everything, seeing as it was sometime before. But...well, I warned you." Your younger self shrugs, before taking off her glasses and folding them neatly in front of her.

"Miss Valnikov Kharn was telling the truth."

...Like a burning green crack through your brain. Searing through the lies, stabbing right into your soul.

So Mami...Mami really did--

"I'm sorry." Your younger self murmurs, hanging her head. "You asked. I told you. I'm sorry."

That'll be enough for now, you tell her. You doubt you can take much more of this in one sitting.

Thanks, Smartass.

"Yeah? Well, you're WELCOME, you walking PR shitsto--" Your younger self is poised to spit venom back at you, when she realizes something. "...Wait. That's...that's my nickname? Smartass? Like...the others?"

Yeah. Kinda fits, doesn't it?

"It...I guess it does. It's crass, but not like Dildoes is an exemplar of subtlety." She smiles, before tapping her temple with a finger again. "Right, you must be busy. Just remember, if you want me to check for bullshit, I'm here."

Right. You'll remember.

...Something about what she said, though. About what she'd still be, if you hadn't handed off your Soul Gem to Ahriman.

"I...I wasn't really sure what I was getting at, myself." She shrugs. "Maybe...oblivious, I guess? Someone who didn't need to take all of this so seriously?" She taps the mirror seperating the both of you with a knuckle. "I don't know. I remember being a balljointed doll way back then, if it makes any sense."

A what?

"Yeah, crazy, huh?" Smartass grins at you. "Must be something before all of this, though. Like a hobby or something. I wouldn't put it past us, we've always been into some heavy nerd shit before we got into this whole business of...obsessing over other girls we can't save."

You glance down at yourself, at your unkempt hospital gown-wearing self, before nodding.

Yeah. You can see that.

"Just take it easy, okay?" Your younger self calls as the dark world around you begins to slowly break apart, giving way to the harsh light of the vault. "And be sure not to forget, whatever you do!"

What? Forget what? What is she talking about?

"Green hair is the danger!"

Freezing your half-naked ass off in its climate-controlled air, the Desert Eagle in your hands rimed with hoarfrost. You brush these flakes away and stuff the gun back into your Shield, before sending the device itself away.

...Right. Anyway. That's the Golden Weapons dealt with, at least for now.

What do you do?

If you run a statistic of option presented vs written in that have lead to a net positive gain in useful information, maybe. Otherwise, nah. Presented options vastly outnumber written in options so you're likely wrong here. So it was three rounds of getting Tiny Pete shot, not getting anything done except wrestle with Mami without any conclusive winner, and being told at the end that yes, the memory dump did make Mami see she was wrong and could have just stopped the fight instead of getting Midori shot.

No, Hat-Chan. We are discussing the usefulness of talking with the Staff spirit, not with everyone.
No one here wants to talk with EVERY character to know about EVERYTHING. We want info about the staff because IS an important piece of what might come in the near future.
The write-in options can turn around completely a situation. The example of Mami´s memory dump is not the best example, because it was one anon who came up with the idea, not something that was ignored during the voting period. And you see what happened with the Tower in Regalia.
You seem to consider the options outside "Decu options" as not relevant or worthless, wich is not the case

>"let's talk to everyone and get their feelings"
Except it's talking with people we need to talk to in order to get the logistics of this plan together. Things we very well likely may not have had time to do, or only a few of the things we needed to do, if we had simply gone straight to the next scene.

Misaka so that we can get Tiny Pete's Recorder and find out what happened inside Regalia in-character as well as what happened after Midori got shot.

Wendy, to find out her part in this, get her away from the Church (which she had been trying to do until they roped her back in after the incident in Regalia), and see if she can speak with Mami so that we can actually coordinate this rescue.

Talk with the Dolls into getting a group of invisible operatives to the Moon and maybe use their powers to enter and leave a Silent Room with Mami.

Talk with the Staff on what it can bring to the table, as well as if it has any warnings to give us. Since not talking with Kirika and getting her cooperation would have made the Akashic Realm mission even harder.

Talking with Yuu would have been the only one to get her feelings, but we kind of needed to do that since she was damaged and needed recuperation time. Now would have been a great time to learn if she's at 100% or is still regenerating, instead of in the middle of a fight with the First.

>>45116832

That doesn't sound so bad. Maybe extremely time consuming, but you laid out a lot of useful options there. My concern is that if Decu doesn't give a nod towards it, it just feels like planning for scenarios that are probably not relevant or planned for to begin with so all that running around and talking will just end up with Vintage porting down to drag us up there for taking too long or something.

>Misaka so that we can get Tiny Pete's Recorder and find out what happened inside Regalia in-character as well as what happened after Midori got shot.
Seeing Misaka just to give her her Murderface dose is a good idea, but going over Tiny Pete's data is superfluous. We have confirmation of what happened (Mami tried to kill us, Midori intervened, Midori ended up going Fulll Vessel).

>Wendy, to find out her part in this, get her away from the Church (which she had been trying to do until they roped her back in after the incident in Regalia), and see if she can speak with Mami so that we can actually coordinate this rescue.
We don't have any evidence that Wendy wants to get away from the church (she even joined to keep an eye on her friend, who also remains a member with no intention of leaving). A phone call to get her to try and contact Mami would be good, but we're too short on time to go chasing her down to do so in person.

>Talk with the Dolls into getting a group of invisible operatives to the Moon and maybe use their powers to enter and leave a Silent Room with Mami.
This is an important thing to do.

>Talk with the Staff on what it can bring to the table, as well as if it has any warnings to give us. Since not talking with Kirika and getting her cooperation would have made the Akashic Realm mission even harder.
"Maybe the staff will help? Maybe Ahriman will suddenly not try and dick us over for like the third time already?" is a wild-goose-chase timewaster.

>Talking with Yuu would have been the only one to get her feelings, but we kind of needed to do that since she was damaged and needed recuperation time. Now would have been a great time to learn if she's at 100% or is still regenerating, instead of in the middle of a fight with the First.
This can be done on-the-fly. We need a quick good-to-go/not-good-to-go, but Yuu will not have anything to contribute to planning assaults on the First. She was never a member of the First.

Finding out what happened in Regalia can tell show Chiaki why Mami did what she did (because Mami told Midori), and that it was a setup orchestrated by the Golden Musket and someone who was feeding lies to Mami, either TTO or Pinky.

>We don't have any evidence that Wendy wants to get away from the church
That was in a write-up written by Wendy. Granted, with the uncertain canonicity now, you may be right.

>Maybe Ahriman will suddenly not try and dick us over for like the third time already?
Ahriman is dead and not in the Staff. We know this because we saw Ahriman's soul self-destruct AND what remained get eaten by Pinky.
So, in-character, we don't know who is in the Staff. Out-of-character, there is very high confidence that it's Yuma.

MAGICAL GIRL NOIR QUEST
THE DEATH OF CHIAKI MATSUDA

☐ Magical Girl Noir Quest Deculture 02/06/16(Sat)09:32:30 No.45252560 Archived

You decide to catch up with everyone first before making any further plans. Let them know you're still alive and everything.

It takes you the majority of the day itself, but it's...productive. Without the security detail snapping at your heels and barking at every move you make, you actually manage to talk to everyone who you think actually gave a rat's ass on whether or not you managed to avoid being worm food.

And to your continuing surprise, said group is actually bigger than you thought, and nearly all of them were more than thrilled at the news - rather than being disappointed like you were expecting.

Misaka, of course - grease-stained, optimistic, white-knuckled Misaka with her inexplicable fixation on having you as her surrogate big sister - was happy to see you. Really happy. Happy enough that she even stopped working on Tiny Pete - the huge armored bastard looking even bigger and meaner than ever before, with one arm completely given over to a huge cannon-looking thing with blue plasma coils - to knock you flat on your ass with a running hug-tackle.

After the earful you got from her for making her worry again (delivered as soon as she managed to stop crying long enough), she eagerly showed you how Tiny Pete's repairs were shaping up. Most of the Russian's excited, caffeine-charged technobabble went over your head, even with Fourth Officio representative Barbara to help clarify things - but from what you see, Misaka has taken the big guy's defeat very seriously and had taken it upon herself to build him better than before. Enough that his entire frame was redesigned and rebuilt from the ground up, with a completely new pattern that Misaka proudly called 'Contemptor'.

The others that you caught up with were less overt with their displays of relief, but still felt genuine, at least from where you were standing at the time. Kumatora, Enishi, even Heartcatch Squad - everyone you've encountered during your admittedly short tour of duty as Warmaster, they all seemed happy that you made it out of the Silent Room alive. They'd apparently feared the worst, even with Kyuubey's - and Mami's - reassurances. They also offered their well-meaning condolences and prayers for Midori's...condition, which you were grateful for enough, even if you had to remind them that she was still alive. Just comatose.

You tried to get in touch with Wendy, too, or at least was about to try when your Vindicare Rank Leader herself, Rea Ashford, stopped you. Apparently Kyuubey had her leading the short-lived investigation on just exactly what went down inside Silent Room Regalia - and just like Kyoko said, she'd been spirited away by the Church of the Golden Land as soon as first aid was applied.

>> ☐ Deculture 02/06/16(Sat)09:35:17 No.45252574

>>45252566

But a few days after the fact, when Rea went over to take Wendy's statement - she was told that the key members of the Church, along with Wendy herself, had left without a word or trace, simply leaving behind trusted staff to take care of things. Even their hideout, which Rea discovered to be some red-light district kind of place, was deserted and boarded up.

You wanted to be surprised at the news, but something told you that you should've expected something like that from the very beginning. Something that also whispered in your ear about how your ex had returned to you in very suspicious circumstances and had generally been - well, suspicious - since the very beginning. But you, with your sudden compulsion to start doing things right by everyone you've wronged in the past, had decided to ignore all those and give what you had another shot. To the point that you considered trying to make a threesome work.

+ But what do I know? + You imagine the voice cackling in your brain, giggling through blood-pinked teeth sharpened into points. + I'm just a crazy voice in your head, after all, Homura-chan. +

...No one could ever accuse you of not doing the wrong thing for the right reasons, but when was the last time you knew what the right or wrong thing was in the first place? Whatever was the truth of what happened, you don't have the time to worry about that now. Not with so much happening right now. Not with so much at stake - not only Mami, but the entire Officio you've come to know as your own.

Anyway. Besides that, you also caught up properly with Kyoko, your best friend still looking a bit distressed about everything that's happened, but also quite improved from your being back in the world of the living, as evidenced by her seemingly catching up on nine days' worth of skipped meals at the cafeteria (where you found her in).

You were hoping to catch up with Sayaka too, but apparently she'll only be getting back the next day - which would be at the time of your trip to the fucking moon. So you stuck with the red-haired Eversor to keep her company, until she has to punch out and for you to limp back to your own recovery room.

What do you do now?

Wendy is Mamis' BDSM fuckslut, like about eighty thousand other sluts on the planet, and Mami had great but stupid ideas about how to fix Chiaki being Satan, that being getting Chiaki dead. But Mami needed an inside man in the Silent Roommate Room Regalia because silent room 2stronk. Since Wendy is her bitch and wears a ribbon of Mami around her neck, under her scarf, at all times, as a symbol of ownership, and it's still Mamis ribbon, with all the magic mumbo jumbo that entails, AND Midori trusts Wendy, she was sent in as a homing beacon of sorts that Mami managed to zipline at because of the ribbon. If Mami hadn't been a baka and Wendy hadn't been a whore of a traitor everything could have gone all right.

But they aren't, so it didn't.

All your theories are based on circumstances and no proof to support them. We have no confirmation of Wendy being allied with Mami. We have no confirmation of Mami using the ribbon as a beacon. We have no confirmation of Wendy running away because she doesn't want to face the consequences of her actions (there are many options for that that doesn't implie that she is a traitor). Until more info is added, you cannot prove any of your theories. And no, Decu's shadowruns are no legitimate proof at all. So until then, you should leave the door open to other options instead of focusing in only one explanation

After scrounging for some emergency alcohol in the depths of your Shield - your best efforts coming up with nothing more than a half-empty bottle of Kong - it's with a slow and limping gait that you make your way to Midori's recovery room instead of your own.

Mainly for two reasons - the first being that she'd have immediately done the same for you had you been in her place, without question, without even hesitation. Second - and this is the one you can't help but smirk at - is that it feels like it'd be less depressing to get the slightest bit wasted around your comatose girlfriend rather than on your own. And on the night that could potentially be your last night alive, at that. If things go completely apeshit.

One painstaking trek from the cafeteria to the sick bay later - stonily ignoring any and all offers from well-meaning staff and fresh recruits for a wheelchair, or even to be carried to where you wanted to go - and you finally reach Midori's room. Still quiet, still cold, and with some of the corridor lights turned down due to it being way after hours - just a bit funereal in its dimly-lit calm. Which...you don't really know how to feel about.

The floor is cold underneath your bare feet as you step into the room, the door closing behind you with a soft and gentle click. The half-empty bottle of warm Kong sloshing in your grip as as you approach the bedside of your once-conscious Callidus.

No change, you decide after a long while of scrutinizing her. Of hopefully examining her for any change or evidence thereof, like an obvious change in position of her hands or feet, or even a hitch in her breathing. Nothing. Exactly as you left her earlier.

Still asleep. Still comatose. Still dead to the world.

She always seemed to wake up immediately if you so much as approached, as if having trained herself to sense your presence even when deeply asleep, to the point of snoring. You'd always thought to tell her to stop doing that, to just sleep and not interrupt her rest just because you're up and about - but you never got around to it.

Well, at least she's making up for all those times you accidentally woke her up now, right?

You chuckle at your own joke here, before gently reaching down to brush your fingertips across her cheek. Finding her skin as reassuringly warm and soft as you remember it.

Exactly. If you are acting as an spy (you know, not being discovered and all that), then what IS the point of letting your presence being discovered?

I want Deculture to just retcon half the quest, have Midroi shot in the silent room at the beginning and have Poochy save the day instead of her all along.
And then Poochy went back to his home planet.

Listen, I disliked Midori before it was popular, too, but Hat-chan's just one vote and I think you're being angry at him because he's visible and makes a convenient target. Midori was the start of the waifufaggotry but at this point, face it, it's part of Chiaki's story that she's attached to her. Being upset about it now will not accomplish anything, so it'd be better to think of where things can go instead of where they've gone, okay, friend?

And she by far does not number among the things that have damaged the quest the most.

And things can go anywhere, that's kind of the point of the entire quest thing. They can go and retroactively change the past if they want to, like that one time in Siberia when we fucked up so hard Decu just had to rewind.

Of course, Deculture's unwillingness to actually host the quest contributed the most. Maybe he's just sick of doing this and trying to hide it? I'd empathize on that point. It's been like four fucking years.

Lorryfaggotry never went as far as a shitty artist being maniacally obsessed over her, and neither did the entire quest take a nice several months long timeout to jack her off. If the Midorifags were as strong on the Lorry train as they were on the Midroi caboose, Chiaki would be too busy being Lorry's personal meido right now.

Well, no, retcons are generally bad, and the whole quest thing should be about influencing where the story is going, not where it's gone. Deculture has issues that keep him from running as much as he'd like to, which I'm sure you can understand, and he definitely wants to see the quest concluded. And really, try and calm down about Hat, okay? It's really not a big deal and those kinds of attacks won't solve anything. When it comes to characters and relationships being jacked off at the expense of the quest there are worse things to be mad about than Midori, artgushing or not.

Does he?
I feel as if he's sometimes just bullshitting. Half of the reasons he puts forth are that "he doesn't feel well", and I get that. You have to be in the right mood for this kind of shit if you want others to enjoy it as well (though I doubt it half of us would even notice). But I feel that it isn't just about his mood and the weather and whatever else anymore. If he truly wanted the quest concluded, wouldn't he try to speed things along? Wouldn't he skimp on those long, monotone segments describing a character's inner thoughts, which would be blatantly obvious from just following the quest? Wouldn't he avoid some of the useless filler, like Chiaki drinking herself to unconsciousness, and just skip to the real meat?

And if he isn't doing what you say, it must be because he doesn't want to. I have the opinion that Decu is a weiter who enjoys taking in the details. I agree that that makes the quest slower, but increases the quality in general (at leadt, in my opinion). Stop protesting about what you can't change and simply enjoy the quest or leave

I disagree that improves the quality. It does improve the quality when it otherwise wouldn't make any fucking sense for the character do what she did, like when Chiaki passed over her gem, otherwise it's completely unnecessary. And stop saying "stop complaining or enjoy it" like a good little drone. I won't leave because that Moon inhabitant got me invested and I want to see it end. I won't fully enjoy it because it takes ages to finish, and because more than half of the time, Decu gets me all excited for absolutely nothing when he announces over twitter.

Not everything written has to "go somewhere". Decu, like many writers, enjoys taking in the details (not because he wants us to enjoy, but most likely because HE enjoys writting that way and visualizing the situation in his head). I am someone who enjoy that, evn if that makes the thread go slower

And here you lose all credibility. Story-wise, no, it does not have to go anywhere. Content-wise, yes, it does have to go somewhere, otherwise there's no fucking reason to put it there in the first place. It doesn't have to progress a plot to have value, it can be a set up to some joke or side-plot, it can be comedic, it can be whatever. But being flowery for the purpose of being flowery is just terrible.

And hell, you can let your reader or even yourself imagine it with much less words. No need to describe, in detail, the inner turmoil, when you can just say that they have an inner turmoil. What goes on in your head as a writer does not matter, what matters is what you let out.

you're joking, but there is legitimately an entire Officio full of that in the setting

>Callidus mostly fill the function of making the Officio money in shadier ways, and countering other Callidus that would attempt to sneak in. They are crouching eastern slavic suburban cliches, impossible to tell from any other person in a tracksuit. They like to squat at fairly high vantage points, however. If they do this in numbers, other classes like to call such a group "a murder of Callidus".

>> ☐ Anonymous 02/07/16(Sun)17:03:15 No.45284611

>>45284179
Actually, I was serious.

Consider for example old folklore monsters from central Europe, kind of like some monsters from the Witcher universe. How cool would it be to have a slav meguca and a slav witch?

Or maybe a meguca/witch based on romantic era literature from that region. I'm sure you could find some tragic meguca fate inspirations from those sources.

And then, she could be crouching in a tracksuit and drink vodka, because that's what slavs do.

Funny you'd actually want that, because other people usually want patterns they can decipher in things. I went for dark souls/bloodborne aesthetics with the 12th because that is someting people will actually get. Nobody picked up on the Witcher jokes in the writeups either, which is probably because the writeups were written before the games were actually famous, but anyway: Slav culture simply isn't very well known in the world aside of tracksuit memes. If you want that, make your own. The Russian Officio is still a big mystery, really.

To illustrate the earlier point, in the MGNW playtest not a day ago, I had the players fight the Witch named Šárka and then said it's the Witch of Sakura Matou (which was partially true), because I can't realistically expect them to know https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/The_Maidens'_War

~~rIncidentaly, MGNW is being playtested right now. We're having a blast.~~

So, we still didn't get to talk to the Dolls.
This is a problem, because we don't know what they're really capable of, or if they can help us on the Moon.

What we've seen of their abilities (invisibility, able to operate within a Silent Room) would be useful to us at the First. Especially if they have some means of disabling the Silent Room, stuffing Mami into the Platypus Suit, and whisking her away back down to Earth, so that we could honestly say under questioning that we did not rescue Mami or commit physical acts related to her escape.

MAGICAL GIRL
NOIR QUEST

☐ Magical Girl Noir Quest Deculture 08/21/16(Sun)09:29:19 No.48914283 Archived

You fell asleep in your costume again.

It might have mattered, long ago. Long ago you might have been relieved to transform out of it after a hard day's work. You might have been relieved to get back to your normal life, as a normal girl, with normal problems.

After a while you just stopped caring. The costume stays on. You don't even sleep much anymore, only in the times when someone gently reminded you of its reinvigorating - if ultimately pointless - benefits to the mind and soul.

Benefits that you never really enjoyed, simply because of the crying, pleading pinked-haired girl dying in your dreams - her cries echoed upon your waking by the shrieking hellscape outside the many-spired prison you've locked yourself in.

You look dreadful, you feel dreadful, and for what seems like the longest time, you find yourself unable to remember just who you are.

It's at the tip of your tongue. It's there, desperately close, but annoyingly out of reach. Like a splinter in your mind.

What is your na--

...

No.

You know who you are. You can't forget. It's impossible for you to forget.

You are who you made yourself to be, after all.

"You're back." A soft, clear voice by your side sighs in relief. You turn slightly from your seat - from your throne - to behold a familiar face, a youthful blue-eyed one. One obscured by glasses and framed with pale blonde locks brushed to meticulous perfection. "We were all getting worried--"

"Not all of us." Another voice interjects, just as clear, but rough enough to sound almost like a dog's ravenous barking. You turn again to behold a tanned face topped with a shock of crimson hair, nearly obscuring one single eye burning crimson with barely-restrained hatred. "I told you she'd wake up eventually, Invidia. You can't keep a dildo like her down for too long."

"Ira, hush. And we talked about that word. If you knew what it meant, you wouldn't--"

[1/2]

>> ☐ Deculture 08/21/16(Sun)09:30:01 No.48914286

>>48914283

"I KNOW what it means, she knows what it means, and I'm still going to call her one because that's what she is!" The tanned girl snaps. "Anyway, never mind that. Boss, you alright? Need anything to shake off the cobwebs?"

The bespectacled girl narrows her eyes at her companion, before turning back to you with a slow shake of her head. After a moment, she smiles at you. "...Yes. Yes, is there anything we can do for you? You were out for quite a while, ma'am. Anything at all..."

You blink at them, two of your seven most trusted servants who'd allied themselves to your cause - before unconsciously reaching up to touch the ribbon in your hair. Your gloved fingers brushing against the soft scarlet strip of silk tied into a neat little bow.

It's still there. Still intact. You haven't lost it.

Good.

How do you respond?

...She should be sitting up right now, asking if she can get you anything, or asking you if you're doing alright. She always seemed to wake up immediately if you so much as approached, as if having trained herself to sense your presence even when deeply asleep, to the point of snoring. You'd always thought to tell her to stop doing that, to just sleep and not interrupt her rest just because you're up and about - but you never got around to it.

Well, at least she's making up for all those times you accidentally woke her up now, right?

You chuckle at your own joke here, before gently reaching down to brush your fingertips across her cheek. Finding her skin as reassuringly warm and soft as you remember it.

[]"I'm sorry."
[]"I'll kill whoever did this to you. I promise."

You make to ask for something - something to eat and drink, to sate two pangs of biological need that you've thought you've long sinced abandoned after your explosive, genocidal apostheosis - when the beginnings of a migraine begin to pound itself dead against the back of your eyeballs. Gritting your teeth and leaning back against your throne's backrest, you press the heels of your gloved hands against your temples.

Mercy, it...it feels like a hangover. Something you haven't felt in years.

Or centuries.

"Ma'am?" Invidia ventures again, and you feel her warm, soft hand briefly coming in contact with the bared skin of your shoulder. You don't mind physical contact - you're certainly not as averse to it as Ira could be sometimes - but for some reason the once-comforting touch made the pain burning behind your eyelids that much hotter. That much pricklier. Enough that you very nearly jumped out of your throne as you recoiled in your seat.

+ Don't FUCKING touch me. +

The pulse came absolutely from nowhere, and with it the hot, acidic venom that sent it stabbing right into the pale blonde simply trying to see if you're all there. But instead of dying a slackened, drooling death for having most of her brain cells fried, the bespectacled girl simply blinks at you, before discreetly pressing a handkerchief to her now-bleeding nose. Black, tarry blood rapidly staining the linen with a dirty crimson.

"My...my apologies for overstepping my boundaries, ma'am. It won't happen again." Invidia says in a small, apologetic voice muffled by her handkerchief, before bowing crisply at her waist and then drawing back. The other girl in the room - the tanned, athletic sort with the red hair - snorts in her own easy chair, before idly turning the page in her comic book. Some sort of girly manga, if you're any judge.

...In the haze of pain currently clouding your vision, you don't remember allowing that kind of thing here, but here we are.

"And WE talked about not trying to do other people's jobs for them, even when they're not around to do it." The one-eyed girl purses her lips to puff a stubborn bang out of her eyes. "Honestly, Invidia, we like that you're eager, but you're not going to score any points with any of us with what you're doing, especially with the boss. Keep that up and you're going to make one of us really angry, and--"

"And I won't like it if you're angry?" The bespectacled blonde, still holding a handkerchief to her nose, turns to spit at the girl. "Is that what you were going to say, IRA?"

There's a moment of silence - blessed silence - before Ira replies. "No, and frankly I'm the last person you should be worried about when I get pissed. I usually just slip out and vent my temper outdoors. But if you get the others worried - especially Luxuria - well." She shakes her head, before smiling at your direction. "You'll have the boss looking for a new candidate to fill a fresh vacancy."

The blonde simply glares at the redhead in stark, offended silence, which prompts the latter to reply again. "What? It's just a NAME, Invidia. We told you that in Orientation. It's not a stereotype we have to live up to."

"...What...whatever." The bespectacled blonde stammers in a huff, before turning back to you. "Um. Well. My apologies again for earlier, ma'am, but really, is there anything I can get you? You don't look very well, if you don't mind my saying so..."

You shake your head, feeling the pain dull to a throbbing sting behind your temples. No, you don't need anything. You'll be fine.

It'd be nice to know just how long you were out, though.

"A few weeks, I think?" Ira calls from her corner as she pulls out what looks like a smartphone from her back pocket. "We thought you were just taking a really long nap for the hell of it, but after the first week we were wondering if we should wrap you up and stash you in a warmer part of the Fortress, in case you were hibernating."

...A few weeks? That long? And no one tried to wake you up?

Ira and Invidia exchange glances before the latter shrugs. "You were snoring, boss. It looked like you needed the rest." A moment later, and she smiles proudly. "But we made sure to take care of things while you were out. Especially, uh, 'that'. We made sure to take care of it, since we knew it was really important to you and everything."

"Oh, yes." Invidia manages to smile this time, the bleeding from her nose seemingly staunched for now. "The sacrifices are fresh, the wards remain secure. 'That' is pristine, so you don't need to worry about it, at least, ma'am."

How do you respond?

Hand over our Soul Gem to an enemy who flat out said she's going to kill us, but will show us the truth of things if we just give her our phylactery.

Keep fighting an ally who believes we've been completely corrupted and who thinks she's getting orders straight from Godoka instead of giving her a psychic memory dump that shows that she's wrong, we're right, and would have (by word of OP) made her stop fighting and ally with us.

Well. They sound pretty confident about getting everything under control while you were indisposed, so you'll take their word for it at the moment. You probably don't need to check up on 'that' too, but...you'll just pop in and check later. Just to be safe.

Just to make sure it's still there.

In this kind of place, in this kind of time, you can never be too careful.

So through the throbbing pain currently boiling between your ears, you thank the both of them for their diligence, and ask them for a sitrep. It's unfortunate that you were gone for as long as you were, so you might as well get yourself up to speed, right?

Your two subordinates glance at each other again, in a long and uncomfortable silence - before Ira breaks it with a long sigh. "Ergh. I was kind of hoping you'd wake up until after the others are back from their assignments, but...well, here we are, I suppose." She levers herself off of her easy chair to join Invidia standing in front of your throne. "Since we're a bit shortstaffed at the moment, though, it's okay if we skip with the visual aids and all that nonsense, yeah? No need for the whole song and dance?"

You blink at her, before shaking your head. ...No. Just a verbal sitrep is fine. There's no need for anything like that.

"Thank you. Now, let's get the small items out of the way first." Ira pulls out her smartphone again, delicately tapping at the screen with a finger. "As you can see, we're the only ones here. Everyone else - that's Avaritia, Acedia, Superbia, Luxuria and Gula - are out on errands. The last checkpoint was yesterday, and apart from Acedia having a run-in with two Black Templar hunting parties and Superbia playing the fool with some of the incense-huffing hippies from the Twelfth, everything else seems to be going smoothly."

Another tap, and a quick scrolling of what appears to be multiple screens, before Ira sucks in through her teeth and looks up at you. "There was a bit of an incident a week back when we had a surprise incursion of the usual vermin in the Fortress' lower levels. Invidia watched over everything while I took care of the matter personally. It's resolved now, but someone'll have to clean up the mess before the stench attracts more of them." She bites her lip here, and you can tell she's doing her best not to append 'and it won't be me' to her last sentence.

...Alright. That's the small stuff, then? What about the big ones?

"I was just getting to that, thank you." Ira replies smoothly, while glancing sidelong at Invidia's direction. The latter gives an encouraging nod to the tanned redhead, a gesture that seems enough to bolster her confidence.

"Well, there are a couple, but the biggest would probably be your...er...your body double, I suppose. The Nameless One? That's what they're calling her, right, boss?"

...Right. You remember her.

Of course you remember her. Annoying, irritating eyesore who couldn't even recognize a way out when you all but offered it to her on a silver platter. A way out. A second chance. All she needed to do was to take it.

Instead, she...she...

Ngh. No. Don't think about that now, you'll give yourself another headache, or make the one you're having now worse.

"Well, she's on her way to Ground Zero, it looks like. Luxuria sent in a report about a couple of hours ago saying that she spotted the Nameless One's thread intersecting with some really big players, and from the looks of it there's going to be some cutting here and there."

Ground...Zero? You blink at her in confusion. You're not--

"The moon, ma'am." Invidia adds helpfully.

Right. Yes. The moon. The large piece of rock with the unsightly pockmark of a mutant cat bastard's lunar base marring its already crater-murdered features.

...So, she's going to try and rescue the yellow one, is she?

Again the back-and-forth stare between your two remaining subordinates. "Honestly, boss? We're not really sure. I mean, we did see the yellow one pretty much throw her to the wolves, right? Her and that other titty monster she was running around with?" Ira shrugs. "I think it's more likely she's just going to watch the execution over drinks and cigarettes, pretty much. Sounds like something she'd do, yeah?"

And then, all of a sudden, you hear it.

A ticking sound. No louder than a whisper, barely audible above your own breathing.

How do you respond?

[]No, she'll save her. I'm sure of that. She's -- I'm -- stupid enough to chance it.
[]Do we have anyone there? We should have someone on site, at least. In case an opportunity comes up.

One Anon oce asked Decu what this world's Homura is (on ask.fm).
He responded with an Image.
I think it was labled something related to the 1st. Although, If someone as the Image, i'd appreaciate it.

Yeah, but that bit of shadowrunning was caused by Decu showing an uncolored sketch of the First's Warmaster, and the costume had some similarities to the homu costume.

Malal said that she was contracted in "One of the most powerful Officios", but failed to discover her. Anons believe that, due too plot and Magical Girls anime trophes (Sailor Moon being one) the Homura of this timeline is the Warmaster of The First, Hazuki Amane. But, there is also the possibility that Decu is playing wiyh us and in reality she is not in that Officio (or at least, she is not Hazuki), only to appear when we less expect her.

So yeah, apart from Malal (and Decu confirming in ask.fm that this timeline Homura and TNO are the only Homuras different from the rest), we really have not direct confirmation of anything else

Just a thought.
They're named after the seven deadly sins. And when there are seven deadly sins, I always think about Fullmetal Alchemist.
In FMA, 7DS were homunculi created to do their master's bidding, but they also were a surrogate family of sorts.
Some anons already pointed out that those to girls bare some resemblance to Mami and Kyouko. What if they were constructed by TTO as a replacement for the companion she once had?

No, you shake your head, and for the first time since you woke up you feel a smile curl your lips. She'll save the yellow one. She'll save Tomoe Mami. You're sure of that. She's stupid enough, foolhardy enough, and most of all naive enough to chance it.

You were all of those things once, after all.

Tick. Tock. Tick. Tock.

"Yyyyes. Right. Well." For a moment it looked as if Ira was about to grin, but impressively enough she manages to keep a straight, if deadpan, face all throughout. "You know what they say - you know yourself the best out of everyone else." She clears her throat. "And before you ask, boss, we don't have anyone near enough to make the jump in time, but if you think we have a window of opportunity here, I can pull a few strings if you like."

Do it, you tell her. Someone should be there. Someone positioned to strike at the Nameless One in the ensuing chaos, to finish what you started. To be able to capitalize on that chance when it presents itself.

Tick. Tock. Tick. Tock.

"Then I'll make my own calls after this, then." Ira says, tapping at her smartphone's screen with a well-manicured finger. "I'm not promising anything major since it's a bit short notice and bypassing the wards in Ground Zero can be a bit tricky, but I can at least guarantee the Nameless One won't exactly have a safe trip both ways."

Right. Is there anything else, then? Because...because you need to check on something else for a bit. Something that needs your attention.

Tick. Tock. Tick--

Invidia raises a hand. "Um, well, I suppose I'll take this chance to ask, ma'am, seeing as I'm the newbie here and I don't think I really caught it during orientation." She clears her throat nervously as you irritably gesture for her to get on with it. "Is...is the Nameless One really that important? If you really need her dead, then why don't we just leave her to her own devices? Surely we don't need to exert that much effort to get rid of just one Magical Girl. I mean..." The bespectacled girl lets out a tiny giggle. "What's the worst she can do, anyway?"

Ira blinks at this, and unsubtly moves away from the other girl.

"Here we go." The tanned girl murmurs quietly, turning away.

How do you respond?

To be fair, the villains in MGNQ know what they are doing, have the perspective to understand what's going on, and the resources to pull it off they way they want, and no one to protect.

We are an amnesiac, drunken, drug addled girl with more firepower than most nations, put into positions we aren't qualified to handle, and left in charge with no training.

You decide to show her. While you're perfectly willing to calmly enlighten her about this particular topic - you're also quite a fan of showing as a method of instruction, rather than showing. Much easier and efficient all around, not to mention it gets rid of any chance of the message being muddled through miscommunication and all that.

By the time you've finished forcing the truth into Invidia's hungry, eldritchian psyche - a few seconds after she'd finally stopped screaming for mercy, tears of blood trickling down her cheeks - you allowed Ira to clean the girl up while you rose from your throne and attended to...'that'. That which you've always taken care to tend to yourself, no matter what you had going on or in the middle of. Every day - or whatever passed for a day in this godforsaken realm - without fail.

Inside your Fortress of Regrets, deep within your Inner Sanctum...

The body of the one you love. Her last remaining human form. Pure. Pristine. Untainted. Plucked from a timeline where she never had even heard of Magical Girls.

Once alive. Now rendered somnolent - soulless - because of her own apostheosis.

When she turned into the thing that only wore her face as a mask, peering through eyes of the deepest black. Smiling with teeth made red with the blood of the innocent.

Her last remaining human form. Kept preserved in a coffin of your own making, to keep her safe as long as the sacrifices were made. As long as the wards are kept secure.

A hollow vassal. Empty, but waiting to be filled.

A forlorn hope, but one you're holding onto.

"I will have you back." You promise her silent, sleeping form, just like all the other times you stood in front of her coffin. "I don't care what I need to do or how many people need to die. I will have you back."

"..."

"And maybe sometime after that," You breathe into the cold air, "...we can talk about you forgiving me for what I've done to you."

"Because I never will."

In one of the earlier threads (I think 2015 recap) when asked about buttstuff, Homusatan answered: "In moderation."

a) plothole
b) buttstuff in moderation is pure

Of course Homura would never do anything to Madoka without consent, luckily we have math to solve this.

Homu=Pure=Buttstuff
Buttstuff*Madoka=Pure, so Madoka must have a value of 1
Given that doing things without consent still is equal to pure, the opposite of that would be unpure, so therefore consent=-Pure
With this we can conclude that Homu*-Madoka=consent

MAGICAL GIRL
NOIR QUEST

☐ Magical Girl Noir Quest Deculture 08/29/16(Mon)09:45:53 No.49056821 Archived

Your name is Chiaki Matsuda, and you are a Magical Girl.

A Magical Girl about to make the trip to the moon - to the FUCKING moon - in order to watch someone important in your life get executed. All for daring to attack the most powerful Officio ever organized.

You're not too sure how you feel about things, to be honest. In fact, you're not even sure what you'll do, say or even think once you see her - the one other person that had stood by you, nurtured you, shed a lot of blood, sweat and tears just to help you get you to where you are now - clapped in irons, presented to the public, and prepared for the slaughter like the animal they'd made her out to be.

It's...you don't know why you're so confused about it. Something like this, something this SERIOUS and involving someone as important as her in your life - it shouldn't even be a question for you. Your reaction would just be as immediate and as direct as your response, and it would end with you pulling out each and every fucking gun, every goddamn bomb in your shield to lay waste to the First and bring her back.

To rescue HER from certain death. The fact that you'd be leaving such a power vacuum behind in doing so - leaving the world vulnerable to whatever the First protected it from - or even the fact that you may not even survive your foolhardy assault - it wouldn't even come up. All you would be focused on would be to bring her back.

Hate. Rage. Fear. Concern. All these and maybe more, emotions you should be feeling right at the moment. All of them valid. All of them appropriate.

All of them human.

>> ☐ Deculture 08/29/16(Mon)09:47:06 No.49056835

>>49056821

But you never expected this...coldness. Not this hesitation.

Not this inexplicable numbness that seemed to fill your body with a nerveless chill, so much so that it took you several attempts to put on your costume.

...Yes, your costume. Or at least a mundane, real-world replica of your actual one, the one that you could easily manifest onto your body with a simple flick of your wrist. One of Kyuubey's demands pre-lunar travel - that you make the journey untransformed, with your Soul Gem in its inactive state. Apparently, you being exposed to such an event while transformed presents a much greater risk of your true nature being found out more than simply going as yourself, so...yeah. That's how it's going to go.

Fine. Whatever. Anything to get him to shut up.

Anything to silence the mutant cat bastard's voice echoing in your mind - especially the bit when he told you how the First would be executing her in the most humane way possible.

He didn't exactly outline the method itself, nor give you any sufficient description for you to make an educated guess - but he stressed that it would be 'virtually painless'.

For the most part, anyway.

+ You don't look so hot, Nameless One. Are you sure you're going to be okay? + Your younger, cuter, frumpy-black-gown-clad reflection says from your bathroom mirror as you start to brush your teeth. + You could just have someone else attend this, you know. Kyoko, maybe. Or Sayaka. I'm sure they'd appreciate the chance to say goodbye. +

How do you respond?

[]No. I'm going. I don't trust anyone else to.
[]Shut up, smartass. Let me brush my fucking teeth.
[]No one is saying goodbye to anyone. Not while I have anything to say about it.

What's with her getup? She's not wearing our costume (which supposed to be a replica of our standard meguca costume). She doesn't wear a Mitakihara Middle School uniform like Smartass did either.

No one's saying goodbye to anyone, you grumble around your toothbrush and the mouthful of toothpaste froth dripping between your lips. Not while you have to say anything about it.

+ Aha. So there's actually some life underneath those eyebags, sallow cheeks and hollowed-out mug you call a face. + Your prettier, more confident self snickers at you, and for a brief moment you contemplate simply smashing the mirror with a headbutt. Only for a moment, though, one that you let slip - along with your reflection's barb - as you let out a dismissive grunt and continue on as normal. Hoping that she'd get the hint that you're not in the mood and just fuck off already.

Fat chance of that happening, though. + I think I heard some actual conviction in that statement, too, even if it did sound like you were trying to talk while giving the world's clumsiest, sloppiest blowjob. + Another snicker, this time bordering on a giggle. + Well, it's a start, at least. Maybe you'll be back to your old self again by the time that it actually matters. +

...More prophecy, you glower as you spit into the sink and continue brushing your teeth. More fucking future-telling. You've HAD FUCKING ENOUGH of it. From cryptic clues and Oriko's - no, Ahriman's - convoluted psychobabble to even Kharn's hackneyed attempt at explaining some sort of cyclical karma bullshit, you have just had ENOUGH of being spat dark futures and dire fortunes at you at every FUCKING turn.

Every single time you try to find out something or do something, it's always some sort of accursed prophecy hitting you in the face and expecting you to cower in fear or get chills up your spine.

Sure, it was spooky and probably even genuinely disturbing the first couple of times - and in those times you bled and hurt and suffered trying to stop them from coming true - but with the handful of people you care about now either missing, or comatose, or about to get summarily executed, they're fast becoming less of something to actually be worried about and more of something that'd set you off in a heartbeat. A fucking rage trigger, or something like that. Yeah.

...As angry as you are at them, though, this is...well, this is Smartass you're talking to. And she promised to be much more honest, much less...cryptic than the others you've tried to get information from. So her telling you that it may be a good idea for Sayaka or Kyoko to go might be a hint.

And so you ask her, after rinsing your mouth out for the second time, and giving your toothbrush one last rinse.

+ Hm? Ah, not really. Don't think too much into it. + She waves a hand. + It's just, you know, she's - yes, I know we're not up to saying or thinking her name right now, so I'm not going to say it - SHE'S important to them, too. Kyoko, Sayaka, you. Always those three constants, besides...you-know-who. + She points towards your right arm, where your Shield should be if you were transformed. + It's especially true in this particular timeline, even when you factor in everything that's happened so far. +

But does she think there's some actual benefit to sending either Sayaka or Kyoko in your stead--

+ No, I already told you. + Your reflection shakes its head, a gesture you personally have done so many times it's a wonder you haven't unscrewed your skull off your neck yet. + It's...it's just me trying to think of someone else other than ourselves, you know? My thought process isn't going towards - if they'll appreciate it and get us points or something, or if it'll unlock some sorta happy or special ending with them involved. No, it's just me thinking that they may want the chance to say goodbye, especially to someone like her. Someone who'd been a big part of their lives. I mean...wouldn't you want to? +

...Yeah, but--

+ There're no buts about it. It's just the way things are. + Smartass lets out a sigh. + Then again, it's probably for the best that they don't go. +

Why?

+ Neither of them are really equipped to handle that kind of thing, in that kind of place. Emotionally and psychologically. + Your reflection gives you a small, tired smile. + This is your show, Nameless One. Our show. And as much as I'd like to foist this off to someone else, maybe live out our days somewhere peaceful with an unlimited amount of alcohol - there's no one else who can do this but us. Alone. Somebody else might get it wrong.+

There you are you depressing fucks! I've been reading through this glorious shitshow for the past week or so (Still working up my courage for part 24, Iori deserved better) and I feel the need to ask: How much worse is this going to get? Because the /k/ shit and 40k shit is really fun nd interesting, especially form a world building perspective, and the story has been really cool and unique so far. But then the horrible, life destroying, "all of your decisions are wrong and horrible" feeling sinks back in. And yes, I know that it's a noir story (even though I'm very unfamiliar with the genre) but if I'm going to keep going through this, I just need to know how much pain I'm in for.

~~Also, will actual yuri happen, or are you just going to fuck with me forever? I don't need to know with who, I just want to know.~~

Mami got the full datadump from Green Green after we manifested. And apparently she was working off data most likely provided from the 1st that chiaki was going off the edge and not, fighting to stay on the level.

After she woke from the dreamscape she went berserk in the moonbase and got captured and is now being sentenced to death. As her Warmaster, we're invited to her execution.

Essentially,
We're sorta the Devil the incubators fear the most in the universe, but we really aren't. For now, anyway. At least Kyuubei hasn't killed us yet.

Mami tried to kill the warmaster of the motherfucking 1st Officio, where every regular mg is like an elite in any other Officio. She was captured and pending execution.

Kyuubei was pondering about a rescue operation, but thought it was exceedingly difficult, not only for the rescue itself but because the Ninth would probably get purged afterwards even if it worked.

So the plan is to get us there, in disguise as not-the-Devil, and then reveal ourselves and blow the place up like if it was Sayaka's kneecaps. However the operation goes, if anyone asks Kyuubei he can say he didn't know about us being fucking Homucifer because if he did he would have killed us. So the Ninth should be safe in any case.

So, you're against using a Homucifer decoy because the fact that she shows up at the same time that Chiaki approaches the Moonbase is enough to make the First assume that Chiaki has gone Full TTO and to purge the Ninth?

While I agree that the First will be on guard and alert, making that kind of logical leap seems a bit far-fetched, even for the paranoid First.

That isn't the issue. The issue is that they'll be prepared for weird shit and be watchign out for it, so a decoy - especially a Clara doll decoy that they might actually capture and be able to do things to - would be useless.

As the real Homusicfer we have an actual chance. The Clara dolls aren't even real to anyone but us.

What are your chances, then? You ask her as you twist the cap off your bottle of mouthwash and start swilling what frankly tastes like liquified plutonium in your mouth. Remembering that once, a couple of lifetimes ago, you decided to do as the Russians do and resort to 'surrogate alcohol'. You wince slightly at the memory, and quickly spit out the poisonous liquid before you're tempted to simply swallow.

+ Well, let's not kid ourselves. As you are now, well, you'll have a much better chance of getting Kyoko into a diet than you actually pulling off what you're planning. Even less when you want to actually survive the attempt. +

Then, is she saying you should--

+ Bring all the Golden Weapons you have? Gear up for war with whatever you can pull out of our Shield? Sure. You can do all those things, and it'd bump up your chances significantly. Not a whole lot, but significantly. + Smartass replies as you finish washing your hands. + But the thing to remember is that these people - the Magical Girls you're about to be fucking with, in their own territory - are serious. They're not the sort that goes down after you look at them funny, or shoot one of their kneecaps out. It'll be like...like--+

Fighting Sayaka? Kharn? Mami? You let off suggestions, and she frowns harder at every single name.

+ Probably worse than all three combined, actually. + Smartass shakes her head. + Well, I could go on, but let's just go with the fact that these are not people to be fucked around with. If you are planning to, then you gotta play for keeps. So that leaves you with one option. +

And that option is what? What should you do?

Your reflection is silent at the face of your query, before she smiles. + You're seriously asking me that? You're Murderface, for fuck's sake. You'll figure something out, you always do. We didn't earn that name for nothing.+

>> ☐ Deculture 08/29/16(Mon)12:24:37 No.49058988

>>49058974

And with that, your reflection fades. Leaving you with your actual reflection, the one that looks just as confused and as pissed off as you currently feel.

You'l figure something out, huh.

Well, fine. It's not the first time you've flown by the seat of your pants.

Something tells you that you should probably scope the place out before making a decision anyway.

But when you do...well, you think you know what Smartass was implying.

You're just not sure if it's something you should even be considering.

"Matsuda?" Kyuubey's voice rings in your ear, sliding in through the cobwebs of your brain - but you've dealt with the Incubator enough to know that he's just outside your office door. "Are you ready? Preparations have been made, everything is settled for our departure." A pause. "Is the fit of your costume just right? Your measurements should be accurate, but we can't account for any rapid changes in physiology you may have undergone during your...incident."

Is he implying...? Fucking mutant bastard cat.

How do you respond?

You pat your hands dry on the fluffy white handtowel hanging from the rack beside the marble sink, while yelling for Kyuubey to give you a bit longer. You have to do something first before you leave.

There's a moment of silence, before your Incubator replies. "We are on a schedule here, Matsuda, if you're not aware. This isn't something we can be fashionably late to, if that's what you're thinking." Despite his emotionless, inflectionless tones, you hear the coiled-up tension in Kyuubey's psychic words. "Five minutes, that's all I'm giving you."

Five minutes. Fine.

Enough time to do just one thing, and you're not in the mood to deal with any of Pinky's bullshit at the moment. In fact, trying to cheat it using THAT would probably set off enough alarms that this all ends up moot, anyway.

So, what do you do? You can only pick one.

With the limited time you have, you decide to grab the Golden Weapons you've managed to accumulate so far. Muramasa, Gorefather and Gorechild, the Bangles, the Staff and the Desert Eagle - all of them, five out of a possible twenty, stuffed inside your Shield after a split-second transformation inside your very own Vault.

The armored goons and lackeys that should have been watching over you and breathing over your neck curiously absent, even in the corridors where they'd usually be milling around. ...Probably forcibly diverted someplace else by the mutant cat bastard.

It suited you just fine, you suppose. Even if...well, even if he did make a big deal of keeping you under wraps last time. Enough to actually stuff you inside a fucking Silent Room of all things.

But no, there's no time to things about that. You have things to do, and a loved one's execution to get to.

So, one by one, you stick each Golden Weapon inside your inventory. Your breath misting in front of you as you begin to arm yourself with the crystallized fragments of an insane goddess' soul.

First the chainaxes - they've always been the most difficult to stuff in there - then, the sword. Then, the bangles. And then your own Desert Eagle.

Finally...the Staff. The latest addition to your collection. Bought with the blood of your comrades and the ashes of someone who just wanted, in the end, to do the right thing. Its hequin-topped length menacing you with stripes of cobalt black running down its shaft.

What do you do?

[]Try and talk to it for a little while.
[]Stick it in there and leave it till later. You need to move, now.

>You pull out your smartphone to check the time. From what you can tell, it hasn't really been that long since you stepped inside the vault - in fact, talking with Yuu didn't seem to take nearly as long as you thought it would. You decide to try and talk to whoever - or whatever's inside of there, now. Knowing full well that Ahriman had been torn clean from it entirely, having forfeited her right to golden immortality by trying to kill you with a last-ditch suicide run. Your fingers curling around the staff in a closed grip, feeling the metal grow warmer to your touch.

Closing your eyes and willing your breathing to slow, you focus your consciousness inwards. Inside the Golden Weapon.

For a moment, nothing. Simply the darkness behind your eyes, and the hum of the Vault's climate control engines pumping out cold, freon-tainted air.

Then...a shadow. A silhouette.

Someone wearing what appears to be a long robe of sorts, long enough to drag along the floor behind them.

Short, too. You can't quite tell, it's way too dark, but from where you're standing it seems like they're someone just a few inches shorter than you.

And...

Cat ears? Are those cat ears you're seeing?

"Where...where am I?" The shadow asks, in a voice as clear as day, free from the corruption of an Anima

Speculum's vox-speaker. "I'm...I don't remember how I ended up here. Hello? Is anyone there? Please, I just want to know where I am at the moment--"

But before you could reach out - before you could even say a single word - you find yourself back in your Vault with an ear-ringing snap. Holding onto the cold, dead Staff with both hands as the world resolves painfully around you, the darkness sloughing off of it bit by bit.

That was...if that was who you think it was, then--

+ --It'll be a good decision to bring her along. + Smartass' voice whispers in your ear, wistful and regretful at the same time. +...shame, though. I thought she'd be out of it by now, after what she did. Nothing's really fair in the end, eh, Nameless One? +

How do you respond?

Why? Why her? She didn't do anything wrong, she didn't deserve something like this, not after everything that's happened--

+ Whoa! Pump your brakes, kid. I'm agreeing with you. See? I'm agreeing. I already agreed with you, 100%, even before you started feeling bad about what happened to her. But...+ You could almost hear Smartass shrug, here. + Like I said, nothing's really fair. I don't know what happened, but it happened, and from what it looks like she's been chosen to replace Ahriman. +

But How?! Why?! She never even touched the damn thing in the first place! Or even so much as showed any signs of being another one of Pinky's fucking patsies!

How the FUCK would someone like Chitose Yuma end up being a fucking Golden Weapon Spirit?!

+ I told you I don't know. But something happened and it turned out that way. + Smartass repeats, the very picture of saintly patience. + Come on. Deep breaths. Don't hyperventilate in your own goddamn vault now, that'd be just pathetic. +

You glare at her - or would have, if you had a nearby reflective surface to shoot daggers at yourself from - but you try to get your breathing under control anyway. The revelation having shaken you more than you're willing to admit.

A few moments later, and you manage to ask Smartass the other question you wanted to ask. Namely, if Yuma had indeed been chosen as the Golden Weapon Spirit of the staff, then why did it seem like she didn't know about it?

+ Because she probably thinks she's still dead. + Your younger, cuter self replies. + She hasn't acclimatized to being what she's become. Still fresh, in the way that a recently-exhumed corpse is. + Another sigh. + Give her some time and she'll be right as rain, ready to help you against the First when the time comes. +

...

+ Now, wipe your eyes and blow your nose, Nameless One. It won't do to meet the mutant cat bastard sniveling like a child. +

Yeah.

The teleporter can be used to teleport around the world, to the Moon, OR to the Akashic Realm.

All right, anons, time to make an inventory of our enemies:

The First Officio

Warmaster: Hazuki Amane. Sister of Haruka and in Decu´s wirds, the spiritual liege of the rest of Warmasters. I remember in ask.fm that Decu stated she is the best of the best of the best. There is a serious possibility that she is this timeline Homura. She is also a powerful seer: http://ask.fm/Deculture/answers/133730405300

In case Hazuki is not this timeline Homura, then most likely she is anyway in The First

Reserve squad: Vintage and http://ask.fm/Deculture/answers/135341690036

Kiryuin Satsuki: In the recappnening thread after 296 it was confirmed

Ryuko Matoi: Yuu confirmed fightning againts some girl from the First with a very revealing uniform. Maybe her?

Nanoha Takamachi: In the written-up Saga of the Sixteenth, Part III: Guns of the First, she appeared. Now, I´m not sure about her canonicity

What, you forgot about that?
The First are the girls that can each purge an entire Officio single-handed.
They fight OMEGA WITCHES all the time, while the rest of the Officio's have to pool their MG's together for the annual Walpurgisnacht and get their asses handed to them each year.

MAGICAL GIRL
NOIR QUEST

☐ Magical Girl Noir Quest Deculture (ID: qyTB36uO) 09/21/16(Wed)10:56:52 No.606883
Archived

Your name is Chiaki Matsuda, and you are a Magical Girl.

And for what it's worth, you're ready to take your trip to the moon.

To the lunar base where the deadliest, most powerful magical girls are stationed. Where the Officio that would only recruit the best of the best - and even then, the candidate would have to pass an even more exacting set of standards to even be considered for a shortlist - had established itself, in order to watch over the world entire. To protect it from whatever threat that would be deemed too much for the other Officios to take on.

You've heard the rumors, you've read the legends. You've even talked to one of its members, a former Warmaster of your own Officio - who, despite her obvious experience and trappings of office, reminded you more of a mousy little secretary with a birdkeeping hobby than anything else.

In fact, if you didn't know beforehand about her station you'd have assumed she was simply a retiree visiting the headquarters for a trip down memory lane. You didn't feel any sort of crushing pressure in her gaze, no hair-raising aura of bloodlust or any of the kind around her. Just a wistful smile, thick glasses and a faint compulsion to toss birdseed at her feet.

...Anyway, what you were getting it was that you're not that impressed with them. You're damn well impressed that they managed to get a base up there, sure, and that none of them have apparently gone insane from being isolated from the rest of the world for that long - but you've never bought the idea of why such an Officio was needed. Why there needed to be that kind of distinction between magical girls.

Most of all, you've never really bought the reasoning why they didn't even get off their asses the last time Walpurgisnacht showed up.

'The last line of defense' your ass. 'Held back in reserve in case something much more serious showed up in the Witch's wake' your FUCKING ass.

In hindsight, you should have probably asked Vintage about that.

You make a mental note to do so, later. Couldn't hurt to ask. It'd probably be improper, and the mutant cat bastard might frown at you for doing so, but fuck it, they can give you that, at least.

They're taking Mami away from you, after all.

>>606883

After making sure you don't currently look like a mess - at least, not any more than usual - you make a beeline to the Incubator's Office from your vault. Your hurried footsteps carrying across the empty hallways, bouncing off the walls. Feeling you with a vague sense of dread and...well, that cold feeling in your gut that this might be the last time you'll ever see this place.

...

Past the cafeteria. Past sickbay. Past the receptionist's table where Mami once sat, four lifetimes ago, to take Kyuubey's visitors.

You called her your blonde goddess of victory then. Cringeworthy as it was, you still believe that. Even after all this time. Even after all you've heard.

Just someone who believed in you. Someone who always had a warm smile for you, and a stack of pancakes you've become hopelessly addicted to.

...

This sucks. All of this.

It really does.

"No argument there, Matsuda." You hear that voice again, and you look down to see your Incubator - Kyuubey - looking up at you from the floor. From the floor of his office, which you don't really remember walking into but most likely have by autopilot. "These circumstances we find ourselves in...they're less than ideal. Sometimes I wonder if we're not all trapped in some living nightmare somehow, and we only need to wake up in order to make all of this go away."

...

"But that's the farthest thing from the truth, unfortunately. No matter how much I'd like it to not be." He shakes his furry little head, his long ears flapping back and forth. "I assume you're ready for our little trip, then, since you're here. And on time, no less." A pause as his eyes focus on you, two little orbs of the most emotionless, depthless red. "The teleportarium is all but ready and just waiting for the final input before it sends us up. When it does, we'll be there in a single moment, and you may experience some temporary discomfort as everything settles. It'll pass quickly the less you move around after translation."

"But before I do enter the final input, is there anything you'd like to ask? I ask this because we may not be able to talk...freely, while in the First's halls."

How do you respond?

[]Yeah, I got something to ask. (Write-in)
[]No. Let's get this shitshow on the road.

Here we go
>[X]Yeah, I got something to ask.

Write-in: Make a Contract

Kyuubey, not dickbutt, not freaky cat thing, not incubator, Kyuubey (You see, be nice to him, he is the most neccecary part of the plan) will have to seek out someone.

Just some girl with untaped potential, nothing more, nothing less. Prefered, a girl who wants to save others, without knowing anything about them.

Give him instructions to make that girl make her wish "I want to be abled to create Soulgem replicas, which would even fool the First, in both appearance and Aura"

The girl can either accept the conditions, or Kyuubey will just fuck off to the next girl.

Once this is done, said girl will have to create a Mami-fakegem.

Let's hope that the wish isn't specific HOW the fakegems are made, else we will be up on the moon, proposing to delay the execution by another week.

Once the deed is done, let Kyuubey contact NECO, since he wants "his own protocol written" or some shit like that.

She will be our Mule for this opperation. So it's prefered to leave her to do the "protocol", so let's leave her oblivious to that fact. As long as she doesn't know it, she won't show anyone the contraband.

Either that, or get someone who also does have the permittion to go to the moon. When in doubt, let Kyuubey himself deliver the package.

Once THAT pact is sealed, we will roll from there, but we will have little oppertunitys to exchange the Soulgems. If shit hits the fan, Timestop during the execution.

I, for one, know that the timestop is totally unreliable, so this is the plan once shit hits the fan.

Additionally, we will have to make a plan B, with our last plan being plan Z, which is: Try to kill everyone of the First. Which by far is the stupidest plan one ever had.
tl;dr :

Create Magical Girl who can fake Soulgems

Exchange Fakegem with Soulgem
In the end, we will also have to severe the connection between Mami's body and her soulgem. But this is by far the least of our problems, so I took on the first part.

From here, I'd like to think that her body will be burned, and that we can smuggle the soulgem back home, where we can remake her body, the same as with Kyoko.

Oh good, I caught the live session this time.

In case no one brought it up on twitter or ask me anything, just wanted to point out that Chiaki collected all the golden weapons twice. Once in Thread 301, and in the last thread.

Kind of a shame, to be honest. If that had been remembered we could have done one of the other options and gotten further ahead.

Salutations, the one of Choice, and also Salutations, the not so Many!

We have contacted the Incubators Tarot, related to this question:

Will Chiaki find peace in her life? Or is that peace unattainable, and the only escape for her is death?

The Incubator Tarot uses the Major Arcana, without caring about Upright or Reversed.

This is what We recieved:

That, which is the Theme: 15 The Devil

That, which is it's Origin: 18 The Moon

That, which is known to them: 17 The Star

That, which is unknown to them: 10 Wheel of Fortune

That, which gets in their way: 1 The Magician

That, which will help them: 4 The Emperor

That, which is the Outcome: 12 The hanged Man

As decided by the majority, We will not be giving it a certain meaning, and instead will let the not so Many decide.

Please, do keep in mind, that Tarot doesn't give a certain answer. Nor do the cards represent what they depict.

If you do not understand Tarot, please contact your closest Tarot Expert, so he may tell you about your demise.

The Outcome pleases the Administrative greatly, as both Tarot experts, and those who don't know how to read Tarot, will have an increase in by at least 135.73125 Percent.

You look down at Kyuubey and make to shake your head, but...something does tug at your subsconscious here, begging for attention. After a moment, you nod your assent, and clear your throat before speaking.

First, Wendy. When - or if - you ever get off the fucking rock he's sending you off to - you want information about where she is and what she's doing. Whatever it takes. Even if he has to resort to calling on that annoying journalist - the one who tried her best to look and sound cute with the cat bullshit - for help.

Second - Midori. You want her--

"Taken care of, no matter what happens. Yes, I know." Kyuubey nods, and even with his usual lack of anything resembling emotion and humanity in his voice, he sounds...oddly tired when he replies. "As ever, Matsuda, you remain painfully predictable when it comes to matters you have an emotional stake on. Admirable, certainly, but someone might just catch on and use it against you."

You stare back down at the mutant cat bastard, wordless. After a moment, he nods again.

"Consider it personally handled, Matsuda. Allow me to at least carry that particular burden for you, what with everything else to worry about. You have my word as an Incubator that no matter the outcome of our little jaunt, Hanegawa Midori will be safe."

Good. That's what you were waiting to hear.

He chuckles here. "Sometimes I find your impertinence annoying, Matsuda. Other times I find it refreshing, calming almost. Thankfully, the latter applies here, despite everything."

...Things are that bad, huh?

Well, of course they are, but you didn't think...for him, anyway--

"By all rights, I shouldn't be. I don't think any of my brothers, had they been in my place instead, would be experiencing this amount of...distress. This unease. This lack of calm." He looks up at you, crimson eyes briefly reflecting the light, before they go dull. "Maybe I have gone truly insane, like they keep saying behind my back..."

Another moment, and he shakes his head. "That's another conversation for another time. Right now, we have an appointment to be punctual to."

As Kyuubey says this, he scampers off towards his array of large-screen monitors, hopping up to the keyboard and quickly hitting a few keys. Immediately the well-illuminated room goes completely dark, with a single glowing circle of blue light etching itself in the middle of the floor. One bordered with mysterious looking glyphs that seem to shift and curl whenever you try to look closer at them.

"Stand in the circle, Matsuda, and I'll begin the teleportation process. ...Try to keep your hands and feet inside the border at all times, or you might end up needing a replacement the moment you land."

...Right. Okay.

You stand there, keeping your arms tight to your side and your hands in the pockets of your skirt.

Kyuubey taps another key at his terminal, and the ring GLOWS. At the same time a high-pitched whine fills the air, rapidly screeching towards its hair-raising crescendo. The static in the air growing thick enough to choke out all sound.

[TELEPORTATION INITIATED] a gravelly voice barks out in the room. [DESTINATION: FIRST OFFICIO LUNAR BASE]

"I've always hated this," You hear Kyuubey snarl as he jumps into your arms. "One last word of advice: if you're going to throw up, try not to get it all over me, Matsuda. Once is enough."

R-right.

And then - just before the whine itself reaches its painful apex, it's here that you see them.

Your doll collection. Standing before you, in the darkness. Their eyes and slitted grins glowing just enough for you to make out their full number. All but one, they did say. All of them motionless. All of them silent.

All of them standing outside the teleportation circle.

In-Character: Chiaki wants to know what the fuck happened, because she doesn't know that Mami appeared inside the Barrier and attacked Midori, because Mami was being tricked by the Golden Musket/The Transcendent One/Homucifer into killing Chiaki

Out of Character: because we know that Midori was able to give a last-second memory dump to Mami that convinced her not only is Chiaki NOT going to end the world even though she has become the Devil Incarnate, but that the only chance to save the world and save Godoka is through Chiaki.

+ No, Good-for-nothing. We cannot go with you. You must face this alone. +

You blink at this, before trying again, pulsing back. + For fuck's sake, just hop on, I'll need you there--+

+ We are your servants, Good-for-nothing, but there are things that even a Good-for-nothing like you must do herself. + IBARI steps forward, her killer's smile frozen on her porcelain face. + Important things. Things you shouldn't leave for cackling, murderous dolls to do, even if they are sworn to do your bidding. + Her smile fades, turning into a dismayed frown. + It'd be a sorry state of affairs if we did all the work for you. +

But they haven't done shit! Except for maybe getting your journal back, but--

+ You forget way too easily, but we've never held that against you, Good-for-nothing. + IBARI shakes her head. + But regardless, this is your show, Good-for-nothing. We cannot interfere, even if we wanted to. ...At the very least, rest assured we will be there to pick up the pieces when the curtain falls. +

And then, just as the glow of the teleportation ring floods everything else--

--the last thing you see is your dolls curtseying as one.

You open your eyes, and see yourself in the same room that you left.

Except...not really. It does look like Kyuubey's office, sure, with the strange oversized plexiglass tiles on the walls, floor and ceiling that also doubled as projection screens, but...colder. Brighter. With the faint scent of what smells like antiseptic in the air, like in a hospital.

There's a small liquid sound beneath you, and you look down to see Kyuubey - your mutant cat bastard boss - throwing up what looks like thick orange juice into a small cat dish. His fur all but frazzled, raised in the same way that startled or alarmed cats would have theirs, along with the tail pointing straight up and everything.

Kyuubey...? You can't help but feel that this is something you shouldn't be seeing.

+ Please look away, Matsuda, and try not to look at me with something approaching concern in your eyes. I already have my fair share of nightmares, thank you very much. + You hear him pulse directly into your mind, in mid-vomit. + Heavens, I do hate teleportation. It'll be the death of me, I'm sure. +

You make to remark, when you hear the doors to the office slide open. Revealing a very familiar and bespectacled face, one that reminded you immediately of the stack of paperwork you've been ignoring ever since everything started.

"Ah, good, you're in one piece!" Vintage, former Warmaster of the Ninth and current Equerry of the First greets you with a big smile, the fat little ball of feathery hate that she calls a raven perched on top of her head. "Good thing, too, the medical staff is indisposed at the moment trying to get our Culexus stable." She reaches you in no time flat, and begins dusting you off with her sleeves.

"Heavens, look at you. You look so normal for a world-ending antichrist that I'm beginning to think it's some sort of joke." She giggles at her own jab, before looking down at your stricken boss. "Ah, poor dear. Always like that, no matter what. Will you be needing anything, Kyuubey? Besides the usual, I mean?"

"No, Karasawa, I'll be fine. Just take Matsuda away before I embarrass myself any further." Your boss chokes out a reply, before another wave of orange juice spills from his mouth. "I'll join you shortly before the execution. I have a brief appointment with my oldest brother myself."

"Alright, we'll see you there." Vintage remarks lightly, before pulling you along. "Come on. We've a while before the proceedings, so I need to introduce you to some people. Try and not look like you're planning on staging an ill-advised assault on this base and we'll do just fine."

...Wait, what? But you're not--

"We're the First, Chiaki-san. THE First. I'm not the kind of girl to slap everyone in the face with that every opportunity I get, but we do deserve our reputation at least." Vintage frowns up at you. "We know the risks of what we're doing. We know what Tomoe Mami means to you and the rest of the Magical Girls down below."

You return her frown, and give it your own personal touch: your signature glare.

They're not total idiots, fine. Then, why all this?

"Because forgiving betrayal and treason is not something we'd like to be known for," She replies quietly, after a moment. "As much as it pains me to even admit it, there's no defending Mami for what she did. She's to be made an example of."

How do you react?

[]There must be something we can do. Anything.
[]Take me to Mami. I have to talk to her. Please.
[]Stay silent, let her fill the silence. She obviously has something more to say.

At this point we're so off rails Malal's plan that it's not funny. The diary `probably doesn't have much useful info.

Also, changing to

On reflection it's a better choice.

You let Vintage continue as she drags you along, out of the room, leaving your mutant cat bastard of a boss to continue filling a water dish with that orange liquid that smells remarkably of blood somehow. Into a corridor that looks just like any other - except for the trasparent plate glass walls and ceiling revealing nothing but the dark, star-dotted void of space outside.

...Christ, you're on the moon. You're ACTUALLY on the fucking moon.

You should take a picture later, to show Midori. Or Misaka-chan. Or hell, even Kyoko. She'd get a kick out of this for sure.

"Yes, she's to be made an example of, because we don't want to be known for letting someone off for a mental breakdown, which obviously resulted in her mistakenly attacking someone she wasn't supposed to," The diminutive former Warmaster spits bitterly. "No, we'd much rather be known for staying up here with thumbs up our asses while the last Walpurgisnacht made a fucking LAKE of blood from all the Magical Girls it'd murdered. Being reasonable? No, of course not, perish the thought. But cowards? Ah, that's our bag, through and through."

So you're guessing she didn't approve of that particular decision, huh.

"No. I thought that was the worst decision we've ever made. Just like this one." Vintage shakes her head. "We were...we were supposed to be the best, dammit. We were supposed to be protecting everyone. Instead we just sat here and watched everyone die."

Then why didn't they?

"Incubator's orders, why else? All of us wanted to go. But he wasn't having any of it, oh no. We needed to stay back, just in case something even worse was in the horizon. We didn't even get to attend the burial ceremonies. I had to bribe my way to even attending Malal's funeral."

The raven-haired woman huffs as she leads you past what appears to be a series of grandly-framed photographs of Magical Girls, each one looking grand and regal with their emblem-encrusted uniforms. Here, a severe-looking young woman with long black hair frowns at the viewer with an aggressive frown and equally-aggressive eyebrows. In another, a cute brown-haired girl with bright green eyes is all smiles as she holds hands with an awkward-looking, bespectacled young man clutching a body pillow with HER picture on it. And in another--

Wait, the body pillow has the girl's picture on it! The girl he's holdng hands with! What the FUCK?

"Anyway, that's...I think that's enough bellyaching for me today." Vintage lets out a sigh, and her grip on your hand loosens the slightest bit as she slows down. "It's...today's not a very good day for me, Chiaki-san, as you can tell. Although I'd wager top dollar it's not a great day for you either." She looks back at you with a tired smile. "Honestly, I'd rather lock myself up in my room with all my illegally-smuggled snacks and simply spend the entire cycle being a useless piece of garbage, but needs must."

That's...er...yeah. Things have been going a bit fast here that you're not sure how to respond.

But back there, when she called you--

"Kyuubey told me." Vintage cuts you off. "Consider me a skeptic when it comes to these things - no, wait, that's putting it mildly. I think it's horseshit, and the Incubators need to stop being superstitious little gits about it." She waves a sleeve-encased hand. "Random mutations due to prolonged warp exposure, nothing else. It just so happened that your mutations matched that of a fictional magical girl deity, from a myth everyone seems to take as bonafide truth nowadays."

Then, the Blessed Lady stuff, she doesn't believe in it...?

"Yes and no," It's here that the former Warmaster's voice takes on a forcibly-patient tone, as if she'd had to explain this a thousand times before. And she probably has. "Blessed Lady stuff - fine, I'm all for it. Some of us need her to cope, and the stuff you see in this job sometimes--well, she provides comfort is what I'm saying. But all the doom and gloom stuff, about the Devil and all that...I think those were just added in by some people with second year syndrome up to the gills."

But what about the...the visions everyone who goes in the Akashic Realm keep seeing? You remember writing that down, so long ago, in your journal. That kinda matches up with things--

"..." Vintage stops in her tracks and looks back at you. "That's...well, that's what gives me pause about this whole thing, but visions - hallucinations - portents - they shouldn't be taken at face value. They shouldn't be a reason for an entire Officio to be put to the sword - and Blessed Lady knows we already murder each other for the smallest of slights." She gives you a pained smile. "But antichrist or not, your secret's safe with me, Chiaki-san. No one else knows."

Right. But...should you two be talking about this here? Out in the open?

Most of all I just want some consequences to stick for once. It's advertised as noir but somehow we always manage to get out slightly better then before. Yuma died but she's back in the weapon. Sayaka didn't witch out. Kyoko didn't die. Chiaki is getting better and takes care of herself more. Now Mami will be saved and all is well again. This ain't noir.

That's you making stupid decisions to get consequences for stupidity.
Film Noir isn't JUST all bad decisions, all bad consequences, all the time.

All won't be well again, since even if we save Mami, any help she can provide will be severely curtailed because the First will still be after her.
And once the First finds out about our wings, they'll still purge the Ninth. Any thoughts of trying to distance ourselves from them in order to protect the Ninth are ignoring the absolute superstitious fear that Homucifer has over the Incubators that are still sane. QB has gone completely batshit insane by the standards of their race, and that's why he's still trying to cover for us.

>> ☐ Anonymous (ID: RfULmMyA) 09/22/16(Thu)08:54:16 No.609420

There's no need to rush the final decision yet. We're doing it on /qst/, we're already forming our opinion of it, we can still do a test play on Anonkun. After that, we can give Decu our feedback and let him decide.

What about doing a chapter of Girls und Titan quest on Anonkun instead? It's still a young series, so moving it to another place won't be as problematic, and most GuTq players come from mgnq anyway.

If a quest truly differs from some play by post RP, a forum CYOA, or crap like that, it's pretty obviously through the features that an imageboard provides and a forum would not (unless you tailor it to SPECIFICALLY provide those features, like anonkun). IDs simply make 4chan less 4chan, and make questing feel less unique.

This should be obvious, but the quest format also outright increases value by weeding out undesirables. Take your classic pnp party at the table, and imagine you get rid of almost all social features of tabletop gaming, and implicitly all the players that come to hang out and not actually play. What you are left with are people interested in creating a good story. This is definitely grognardy, it is elitism, you may not like it, and it really helps makes this thing really good.

Shitposting is not good or bad, it depends on the use. Some of the best 4chan, and more specifically quest moments can be considered "shitposting", as in jokes or nontopics. Even baiting can be good if done artfully or in the right moment.

The problem comes when newbies associate "any shitposting = good" and start, well, shitting up the site.

"I...I have to know more." You manage to say. "I don't...think I have all the facts to make a decision right now."

Vintage looks at you straight, her crimson eyes boring into yours through both your glasses, before nodding. "Good. That's good. I was expecting you to get here with your mind already made up, and that in itself isn't a bad thing, conviction is a virtue after all - but when your decisions carry with it the weight of all the lives in your Officio, you really have to set emotions aside sometimes and do what's prudent. Not right, not wrong, just...prudent."

Something resembling understanding passes between the both of you, before she heads off again, her hand grasping yours. "I can't give you a one-on-one with Tomoe Mami right now, she's in full lockdown and under heavy guard. What I can do is to get you in touch with someone who can help you come to a decision, and provide the assistance that you need."

Really? She can't pull any strings for you? Even just five minutes with Mami will--

"Chiaki-san, we're not exactly a full Officio. We can barely fill three squads at best." Vintage shakes her head. "Everyone knows everyone here, and they know all my tricks." She pauses for a moment here, before correcting herself. "Well, not all, but anyway, my point is there are no strings to pull when there's just one, and the Warmaster's holding all of them."

...Right. Fine. Okay.

So who is this person she's taking you to, then?

"Someone trustworthy. Someone who says they're from your past."

Your past? ...Great. Probably someone with a huge chip on their shoulder, then, looking to get back at you.

Vintage laughs at this, short and harsh. "Hardly. I know her personally and we've done business here and there, maybe tried to kill each other a few times. She's someone who's taken an interest in your unique predicament and wants to help." The former Warmaster looks back at you here. "But with all that said, try to have an open mind when talking to her."

Why's that? You ask blithely, just as the both of you stop in front of what appears to be the room to someone's personal quarters. ...Vintage's, in fact.

"Let's just say she's not the kind of person you get to talk to everyday." The raven-haired Equerry says as she presses a four-number combination on a keypad next to the door itself. The portal opens with a mechanical sliding noise, like a gun being cocked in the dark.

Inside, you smell something...enticing. Familiar.

Pancakes.

Mami's pancakes.

You wouldn't mistake that for anything else.

Your eyes go wide as you turn towards Vintage. She shakes her head, a rueful smile curling her lips, before she gestures towards the room itself.

"Get inside, talk. You have a bit of time before they figure out that something's wrong. Get your information while you can."

Your eyes still wide in disbelief, you step inside. The doors immediately clicking closed behind you as you step into a small but well-furnished abode, one with a mini-kitchen at the back.

No, honestly, it feels like a one-bedroom apartment that shut-ins lock themselves in forever, to be found rotting into the tatami when the police come knocking. There's even a kotatsu laid out in front of an old CRT TV, with a dented Famicom hooked up to it.

You've barely pulled off your heels to step onto the tatami-covered floor when you hear it. A voice from the past - but not YOUR past. From someone else's.

"Ah, you're here. The...Nameless One, right? Please, have a seat. I've made you something to eat while we talk."

Its owner stepping out from behind the partition of the mini-kitchen with a tray of pancakes in her hands. Her features concealed in what looks like dark ray-ban sunglasses and a medical mask, the sort you'd wear if you were sick with hayfever and didn't want to be spreading it around on the job.

Wearing a nurse uniform with the Ninth Officio Assassinorum logo embroidered on the front.

No, it's not Mami. Not by a long shot.

Then, who...?

"Please excuse the mess," The nurse says as she daintily places the tray down on the kotatsu table, before taking a seat herself, her stockinged legs folding underneath her. "Despite all appearances Vintage isn't the neatest person around. When I got here there were empty snack bags and candy wrappers all over the place, it was disgusting!"

You immediately take a seat as well, pulling up close to the kotatsu, crossing your legs and placing your hands on the table itself. Despite the urgency of the situation - as well as Mami's impending execution hanging over you like the veritable sword of Damocles - you find your mouth watering at the scent and sight of the pancakes, drowning out your chosen reactions for the moment. ...Christ, just the perfect amount of syrup, too. Just the right amount of butter. No burnt edges or tearing in any of the tiers, and the consistency--

"Oh, please, go right ahead." The stranger says after a long and awkward moment between the both of you, a gloved hand gently pushing the plate of pancakes towards your side of the table. "You look just about ready to keel over. I made it myself, and I promise it's not poisoned or anything like that."

What do you do?

Pretty low in all honesty. The first is made up of the most capable magical girls of all the officios, and they have sentenced Mami to death. Our chances of getting her out are slim to none. Even if we do manage to fake her death, the guys operating the teleporter will know that we are going back home with an extra person. And things only get worse from there.

I'm not saying that there ISN'T a chance, but I'm certainly not saying that this will be easy. We need a solid plan with multiple backup plans in order to work out.

Well, to explain it once again, the sneaky approch would work best.
We won't be abled to transport a body, so we will have to pull another Kyoko, and recreate the Pancakes from her Soulgem.
Then, we only need to smuggle the Soulgem of the moon, so neither the First, nor the Sin send to kill us grabs a hold of our Goddess.
Backuplans are diplomacy, and if shit hits the fan, use violence to escape, and try to pull the entire blame on yourself, so the 9th doesn't get involved.

Sounds solid enough?

No, of course it doesn't.

How are we going to make a fake Soulgem that can pass as the real thing, especially when there's going to be Callidus and Culexus to try to check the Soulgem's validity?
And how do you even plan to make the switch when we're not allowed to meet with Mami, before or during the execution?

Unless you can come up with something more concrete than wishful thinking, because that's all your "plan" is at this point, don't try to pass it off as something viable.

Because you're insane.

Honestly we might as well pretend to actually be the Fallen and try to kill Mami and make it look like we are working for the First or some shit so that QB can save Mami and take the firsts place.

Like why don't we just fucking goad the Megawitches into attacking while we're at it and escape in the confusion.

Magical girl corpses start to decay or go into a coma if their soul gem is too far away. So if they either don't find a valid soul gem or notice Mami's decay then they will start searching, we will be a priority as we have the most of a link to Mami.

Once they open up our inventory and see our stockpile of guns, bombs and other shit, they will likely assume that we are here with ill intent, and will attack us.

Chiaki tried to empty her shield once, to check it's capacity. It ended in a hangar full of millitary equipment and no empty bottom in sight. I dunno what happened to the Davy Crockett though, I hope we get to use it someday.

+ Smartass? + You look down on the proferred pancakes, blithely wiping your lower lip on your sleeve.

+ Really? You're asking me to...REALLY? + The one Golden Spirit still inhabiting your Golden Eagle lets out a defeated sigh. + Yes, she's on the leve. The pancakes aren't poisoned. You can-- +

You don't even let her finish. You grab the fork and knife and go to town on what might be the last pile of pancakes you'll ever devour. Cutlery clattering against porcelain as you kill - no, MURDER - the stack in front of you with such ravenous, rapacious gusto that your host is rendered absolutely speechless. You even forgot to slow down enough to even ask your questions!

"...Oh. Oh dear." The black-haired nurse hesitantly speaks up as you finally set your utensils down ten seconds later, your plate so completely reaved clean of any trace of pancakes that it seems that there weren't even any in the first place. "If I'd known you were coming up here with that kind of appetite, I'd have made more." She takes what appears to be a Miracle Midori x Murder Mayumi branded tissue box and hands it to you with one hand, before gesturing towards her own lips with her other. "Got some syrup there. Lower lip and some on your cheek, too."

MORE? That's... No. No, that's fine, you manage to force yourself to say, gratefully taking the box of tissues and ripping off a few sheets to wipe away the last vestiges of your own shameful indulgence. One stack is enough. You're trying to cut down. Besides, there's work to do. Yeah.

"Yes, work. That's what we're here for, for better or for worse." Your host shrugs her tiny shoulders. "In any case, I'll start with the introductions, since it's highly likely you're just about wondering who I am." She sounds like she's smiling, here, and by the creases of her medical mask it seems to be the case. "But first, I hope you'll pardon the mask and glasses. I hate looking like I'm trying to be mysterious myself, but this is for both our sakes, I assure you."

...Right. Okay. You were just about to remark that she looks like some sort of celebrity trying to go incognito and failing hard, but sure. Whatever does it for her.

"Thank you." Again, the tell-tale creases giving away a smile, before she goes all business. "Now, Nameless One, I represent a group of individuals - of which I am a member of - who is aware of your situation and want to offer our assistance. I realize we don't have much in the way of time so I'll just say that we are not being completely altruistic; we have a vested interest in seeing you make it out alive here, one way or the other, whatever you decide to finally do." She looks down on her hands for a moment before looking back at you. "We - I - have it on good authority that you will need all the help you can get once this whole business is done, one way or another. That's why I'm here."

>> ☐ Deculture (ID: qyTB36uO) 09/22/16(Thu)14:32:31 No.609979

>>609967

...Well. That's...quite an introduction.

"Honesty's refreshing, isn't it?" Another crinkle of the face mask, a glint from behind the dark shades. "Here's some more, then. Tomoe Mami is here because your worst fears are right - she did betray you. She did try to kill Hanegawa Midori as she tried to rescue you from the grave you've dug yourself into. But either through sheer luck or just...something, instead of dying she managed to hit Tomoe Mami with something that not only caused her to stop, but also gave Tomoe Mami the impetus to murder the Warmaster of the First. Or at least attempt to."

Which is...?

"The truth."

The truth? What kind of fucked-up truth would drive someone crazy enough to do something like this? Something like attacking the most powerful Officio in the world - and its Warmaster, no less! And trying to kill Midori--!!

It's here that your host shrugs. "It's not something I'm privy to at the moment, and believe me, it's not for lack of trying. But..." She tilts her head to the side. "Tomoe Mami. You consider her a hero, yes? Despite this little pockmark on her record?"

...It's much more than a fucking pockmark, but yeah. She's...she's someone who could certainly fit that title, you grudgingly reply.

"My guess is that she was trying to be one to the very end. The truth set her free in a way that she realized that the crazy option was in fact the only option to take. And she took it, even if the odds were stacked against her. Even if it's guaranteed that she would never make it off this rock alive, no matter if she succeeded or not." The mask-clad girl spreads her gloved hands. "A true hero by any definition of the word."

That's...hnh...

But what? What could she have found out that made her do this...?

"Only Tomoe Mami would know, Nameless One. And unless you can rip it out of her mind from here without triggering their awful harridan of an undying Culexus - then the only thing you can do here is to ask her yourself."

How do you react?

[]Have Smartass check her for lies.

I think it could go either way, dependant on how the warmaster felt on the issue of getting involved with the last Walpurgisnacht.

If she supported involvement, then many of them would be on her side for sharing the same view as them.

If she supported the incubator, the girls on base would not support her for the same reason that they are displeased at the incubator.

It could swing either way. And we need to understand that before we progress with our plans.

So, how many people bet that Malal set up this organisation? Considering everything that she's done in the past I wouldn't put it past her. Then again, this also seems like something that Kyuubey would have set up, so I wouldn't put it past him.

That would be hilarious, but the description doesn't really match, she doesn't seem to have much to do up here, and Sanbey still operates on Earth so she's perfectly capable of being still employed with him (maybe she literally acts as his social front now), unless Ahriman actually kills her in the writeups Malal never got around to making.

I mean, the blurb Ahriman made about her being Mami's pupil was very, very vague. No idea what that ever was about.

See, everyone, this is why IDs were a bad idea.

Otherwise your suspension of disbelief holds enough that you can assume that every single totally awful post in the thread is not in fact the work of one person, and aren't obliged by honor to tell them to get the fuck out, and everyone keeps having a good time.

+ Smartass? + You pulse the name again. This time your other self replies not with consternation or annoyance, but awe.

+ She's...she's on the level here, too. Every word, more or less. + You hear Smartass swallow audibly somewhere in the back of your mind. + I...honestly don't think I've ever seen anyone being this honest with us. I mean, everyone usually has something to hide, but here-- +

"Finished talking with yourself?" Your host cuts in, and you blink at her in sharp surprise.

What? How did she find out? Is she reading your fucking mind? What--

"Heavens, no. Not at all. I can't do that sort of thing." The gauze-masked girl waves a hand in giggling dismissal. "It's that silly look on your face, like someone just remembering they left their hot pockets in the microwave all night and wondering whether they could still be eaten or not."
...

It's here that she leans forward, her chin cupped on her gloved hands as her elbows lean against the table. "What, you didn't realize it? I'm sure everyone else is just too polite to say anything!"

That's...er....

A-anyway. Never mind that, you grunt a bit more forcefully than you meant to, trying to shove that embarrassing moment aside. So, whoever she is and whatever her group is all about, they want to help you, is that it? Help you do what, break Mami out of here? What exactly is she offering, and what's the catch?

"No catch," The raven-haired nurse says cheerfully, leaning back and spreading her hands wide. "Like I said before, this isn't purely altruistic, but we're not the sort to bust your balls especially when it involves..." She makes a vague gesture here. "...all of this. We have no other personal stake in this particular matter except seeing you get off this rock alive.

"Should you accept our help, we'll give you the distraction you need to get to Tomoe Mami and get the truth you're satisfied with. No strings attached, no favors owed - well, except indulging me in another meeting like this and hearing me out. I'll even throw in two stacks of those pancakes you really like."

A distraction.

"Yes, something big enough and scary enough that the First won't be able to help BUT take notice. Not entirely bloodless, of course, but rest assured they won't even know what hit them until it's too late. And depending on how things go your involvement won't even come up - which is probably a whole lot better for your friends down below, right?"

...

"What do you say, Nameless One?"

You're thinking about it.

...And speaking of names, she's been going on about being honest and the truth for a while now, but she hasn't given you her name yet.

"My name isn't that important. Not right now, anyway. Besides, I'm being completely honest with you right now, aren't I? Let's just keep it that way for now."

How do you respond?

I honestly don't mind where you run, though it kinda feels like it should stay on 4chan, you know, everything in one place(sort of).

And thank you Dan, Your waifu should be proud.

Thanks for another great thread Decu!

On the subject of /qst/ or Akun, I would prefer that we stick to /qst/. That way it's easier to archive everything via sup/tg/ archives. Too many quests are jumping to Akun, so the more high-player count quests on /qst/ the better.

MAGICAL GIRL
NOIR QUEST

☐ Magical Girl Noir Quest Deculture (ID: esrOxg3m) 10/02/16(Sun)11:02:14 No.651926

A distraction.

"Yes, something big enough and scary enough that the First won't be able to help BUT take notice." Your host smiles behind her makeshift disguise. "Not entirely bloodless, of course, but rest assured that they won't even know what hit them until it's too late. And depending on how things go your involvement won't even come up - which is probably a whole lot better for your friends down below, right?"

...

"What do you say, Nameless One?" She prompts you after a moment of silence, her smile still audible in her faintly-muffled voice.

You're thinking about it. Really. You're giving it the consideration it needs.

...Speaking of names, she hasn't given you hers yet, hasn't she? Meanwhile she's been going on about being honest and truthful and all that.

"Oh, it's not really that important, I assure you," The girl waves a hand in dismissal. "Not right now, anyway. Besides, even that truth detector in your head says I'm on the level, yes? So let's just keep it that way for the time being."

Right. You look down at your empty plate, then at your surroundings. Trying to take your eyes off your host as you furiously debate with yourself whether or not to take the offer placed on the table in front of you. Taking in the somewhat small but comfortably-furnished living space that seems more suited to a shut-in rather than a former Warmaster as you consider if you're actually allowing yourself to get fucked - figuratively - in the ass or not by accepting.

This isn't your first rodeo. You've had offers too good to be true plopped on your lap before and expected to be picked up by dint of them apparently being catch-free, only for them to reveal the hook once you've bitten. But you didn't have Smartass to check for you then, not like now, and as much as she's been playfully vague about everything the black-haired girl does seem to be genuinely interested in seeing you survive. Just you, though. Not Mami. In fact she sounded as if she couldn't care less about the blonde even if she tried, and...heartless as that is, it suited you just fine. You'd have been more suspicious if she truly tried to pass herself off as some benevolent saint, after all.

Without thinking, you find yourself glancing over at a small table in the corner of the room, one full of neatly-arranged framed pictures of what looks like Vintage and various members of her family. Black hair is a dead giveaway, and without squinting you can make out the faces of Enishi and Deepthroat - er, Noriko, yeah, that was her name - in them, along with what looks like a very tired-looking boy.

There's one white-haired girl in the crowd of black-haired siblings, though, and one that seems to be very affectionate with Vintage.

>> ☐ Deculture (ID: esrOxg3m) 10/02/16(Sun)11:03:09 No.651929

>>651926

You could tell this by the fact that the picture seems to be taken in selfie-style, with the girl in question taking the photo herself with one outstretched arm, while the other seems to be forcing the former Warmaster into the shot via a headlock. And from the flushed cheeks of both participants, it's a safe guess that alcohol was involved somehow.

"Taking a chance to look around, huh? I don't blame you." Your host catches your line of sight. "But as much as I'd like to indulge you, we don't exactly have that much time to snoop into Vintage's private life, unfortunately." There's an apologetic tone in her voice, as if she's legitimately disappointed herself. "So, what do you--"

You'll take it, you say before she can finish her question. You'll take her offer. As much as you're loathe to ask anyone for help - especially with this kind of thing - you'd be quite the dildo not to recognize that the cards are as stacked against you as they can possibly be at the moment. ...Normally it wouldn't be an issue, but with Mami--

"Yes, yes, if it wasn't for this complicated situation you wouldn't even dream of asking for help. I fully understand, Nameless One." The girl raises a gloved hand. "Please don't take this the wrong way, but my colleagues and I are very familiar with your many failings. Pride being one of your more cuter ones."

What? Your brow furrows here. No, you weren't trying to talk big, you were just--

She shakes her head to silence you again. "What did I say about us not having enough time? But all the same, thanks for accepting. My colleagues will be very pleased to hear it." She stands up from the kotatsu, just as someone seems to quickly knock against the door to Vintage's quarters three times. "And that means we have to hurry with our preparatons. Thankfully, everything else is set up, there's just the matter of the trigger."

The trigger?

Your host nods. "Yes, a specific catalyst that'll help us give you the distraction you need." She pats her nurse outfit's pockets, seemingly searching her pockets. "...What the...I could've sworn I picked up some on the way here, I made it a point to--"

What? What's wrong?

"I...mmh. What's the deal here? Did I forget, or...?" The girl murmurs to herself, before turning to you with another smile. "I'm sorry, Nameless One, this is really embarrassing, but is there a possibility that I could perhaps bum a cigarette off you? Just one?"

How do you react?

Smartass is working with this universe's homu to get a drop on us. The three stooges didn't abandon us, they were kidnapped by the First to help Smartass with the operation "Kill Kong". As soon as we give her a cigarette, our DNA left on it will be used to set the giant Moonlaser on us. The only way out is to use Mami, who's actually a golden weapon (as shown in Madoka Concept Movie), to blow the Moon to smithereens.

Wordlessly, you offer her one from a squashed half-empty pack you pull out of your inventory. It's a miserably-bent stick of a cigarette, one that you try to smoothen out before handing it over to her, but she doesn't seem to mind at all as she graciously takes your offering with both hands - her dainty fingers gently holding it up with thumb and forefinger.

"Thank you, Nameless One." She nods to you, before giving the cigarette the kind of careful examination you'd give a new stolen firearm. "The execution chamber is hexagrammically-warded to a ridiculous degree, you see, and that immediately blocks out any kind of attempt at intrusion that I could make, even if I were to resort with brute force. So I'll need something like a beacon in order to get in and give you the distraction you need. This will do just nicely for something like that, I think."

...A cigarette's going to do all of that?

"Yes and no. It...well, here, let me just do this really quick and I'll explain the rest." Carefully lifting the cigarette up to her face, it's here that your benefactor carefully pulls up her facemask to reveal a pair of soft, unpainted lips. Lips that gently give the filter of your donated stick a tiny - almost teasing - kiss. Leaving what looks like the faintest smudge of crimson on the otherwise off-white wrapping paper.

A smudge of crimson that then slowly vanishes, leaving in its place a tiny spider-shaped mark, its eight insectile limbs looping around to form a gilded cage around it.

"...There. That's done. Now, please hold on to that." Your host returns your cigarette, spider-mark and all. You take it from her gloved fingers, blinking at the sight of the act and then at the mark itself. "Once you're inside and you have a moment to yourself - or when you feel the time is right, whichever comes first - simply take that cigarette and make to smoke it. The trigger I just placed in there won't be set off until your own lips make contact with it. From there, I'll have enough of a way in to really start a commotion - and it'll also serves as a signal for my colleagues to kick things into high gear, too."

That's...huh. So that's what she needed the cigarette for?

"I did just say, didn't I?" Your host replies brightly, her hands behind her back. "Oh, try not to accidentally set it off BEFORE you get into the execution chamber, alright? I can only make one of those while we're up here, and it's going to be a major hassle if I have to do things the hard way."

You're silent as you turn the cigarette around in your fingers, examining it from every angle. It looks and feels exactly the same as it did before you handed it over. ...Well, you can probably smell something like lilac coming from it, but besides the strange mark she left on there, you probably wouldn't be able to tell it from any other cigarette you have in your possession.

...It's kind of funny, using something as harmless as a goddamn cig to set off something that smells like complete and utter treason, especially if they find out you're behind it all.

Something also tells you should be alarmed - in fact, terrified - at just what she did and what it implies, but the urgency of the situation's pushed that to the back a bit. No doubt you're going to hate yourself later for missing something so obvious. Especially when it's right in your face.

But later. All of that, later. Right now, you have Mami and the First to deal with.

"Any more questions? If not--" Three knocks, again, this time more hurried. "Then you really should be going, Nameless One. Otherwise people are going to ask questions and start barging into rooms and just look at this ghastly mess, Vintage will never hear the end of it." Your still-unknown benefactor casts a weary gaze over the shut-in's room, clicking her tongue behind her mask. "Just absolutely deplorable."

How do you react?

You place the marked cigarette carefully in your half-empty pack, and then carefully place that in your inventory. You're still not sure what to think or feel about a diversion hingeing on something as small and insignificant as a cigarette, but what the hell - it's not like life and death for a Magical Girl doesn't revolve around whether or not her own personal glowing tchotchke is intact. You thank her for her assistance, and she smiles at you for doing so.

You'll need a name, though. As much as you'd like for it not to matter, you're already ignoring several warning bells in your head already, and you'd like to regain some semblance of normalcy by knowing just who you're dealing with, here. After all, it's not every day you ask for help to bust a friend out of the First's death row, isn't it?

And if she doesn't give you her name, well, you might just have to give her one. And you've got a proven track record with giving people names, especially yourself.

"Oh, we know ALL about that, Nameless One." Your host chuckles after a moment, shaking her head. "Well, it's not that I don't want to tell you or be all secretive - I know how really annoying that gets - it's just that it has the potential of placing us in a very complicated situation if I do. But tell you what--I'll write the name I've given down somewhere, alright, and you can look at it later, okay?" She walks to what appears to be Vintage's desk and scribbles something on the legal pad there, and then tearing the top sheet off. This she carefully folds and gives to you. "Oh, and just to make things really ironclad--here."

With the paper, she also hands you something. Another bauble.

Neither a Soul Gem or a Grief Seed, but something that carries elements of both. An amalgamation of the two, just like yours were, before it transformed into the thing that you carry around now. Imbued with neither the light of joy or or the miasma of despair, but acceptance. Elaborate and menacing, with a heart-shaped crimson gem set in the center, ensnared in golden chains, supported by a cloud of smiling cherubim.

"This should prove that I'm serious, at least," She murmurs reverently as she places the bauble in your hand."I hope I don't need to state it, but just in case - please take care of it."

A Witch Core. She's handed you a Witch Core.

No, more than that--she's handed your HER Witch Core.

Echoing something you yourself did, a couple of lifetimes ago. Back when you were so hungry for answers that you gave your own Soul Gem to a sworn enemy - one that even burned her soul away just to get one last stab back at you.

Which means...the person you've just allowed to help you out is actually--

Just as you open your mouth to react, the door to Vintage's room slides open, and in steps the owner herself. "Alright, I've stalled them for as long as I can, and we're about to start this farcical display." She shakes her head. "Did you get everything you need, Chiaki-san? Come on, we need to get going!"

...Sort of, yeah. You just need to, uh. Just give yourself a moment here.

You turn to talk to your other host, just to confirm what she'd just handed to you - but she's not there anymore. Gone. Vanished.

All that's left of her is her gauze mask and glasses, neatly placed on top of the kotatsu table.

Jesus Christ, what have you gotten yourself into this time...?

"Matsuda, come on! No dallying!" Vintage snaps you back into the real world, and you hastily stuff the Witch Core back into your Inventory. You rejoin the former Warmaster outside her quarters, and then follow her as she sets off at a brisk pace, presumably towards where all the shit is going to go down.

"Well, what do you think?" She asks a moment later, the both of you still in mid-stride through the otherwise empty lunar base halls.

...About what? You grumble as you unfold the paper the girl earlier had given you.

One word. The handwriting cute and feminine, all in pretty curves.

Luxuria.

"Everything. Dealing with her. What you're - we're - about to do." Despite her hurried and sharp demeanor, Vintage grins at you. "Oh, I've missed this feeling, really. Having something to look forward to again, and dreadng what may come after. It's nostalgic!"

How do you react?

[]Vintage, did you just try to set me up with a goddamn Witch?
[]You don't have to take part in this, you know. Whatever happens, I won't rat you out.

I missed some important quotes.
>"As you can see, we're the only ones here. Everyone else - that's Avaritia, Acedia, Superbia, Luxuria and Gula - are out on errands.
>"And before you ask, boss, we don't have anyone near enough to make the jump in time, but if you think we have a window of opportunity here, I can pull a few strings if you like."
So, as I thought, Luxuria wasn't the sin that was sent to kill Chiaki. In fact, she shouldn't be even here. But someone is still in position to attack us when the time is right.
That can mean two things:
- threre should be no sins at the base. Luxuria's presence here raises suspicions.
- the assassin is not a sin. May be a spy positioned at the First. We should pay some attention while being introduced to the megucas here.
>"Then I'll make my own calls after this, then." Ira says, tapping at her smartphone's screen with a well-manicured finger. "I'm not promising anything major since it's a bit short notice and bypassing the wards in Ground Zero can be a bit tricky, but I can at least guarantee the Nameless One won't exactly have a safe trip both ways."
The sin that's supposed to kill us during our return (both ways? We had no troubles getting here.) is Ira, but she seems to be working independently from the other one.
So we have a possibility of two fight during this op, maybe three if Luxuria tries something funny too. Or I'm missreading the quotes. Or Decu's being useless again.

I'm pretty much talking out of my ass here but I kind of got the impression that the Sins, while being under the Transcendent One's command, are not mindless puppets or henchmen. They have their own personalities, goals and are - within reason - allowed to act autonomously.

Also they are not beyond fail and not absolute since their 'positions' can be filled by new members should they expire.

Keeping all this in mind, I think it's well within the realm of possibilities that one of them has a play of her own that wouldn't be sanctioned by their boss if it came to that.

You're not talking out of your ass at all. The facts imply that Luxuria has her own agenda. Her "group of individuals" is most probably opposed to TO (since they want us to succeed). That would make her more than having autonomy, that would make her an undercover spy.

So, let me het this straight: One of the witches that serves our evil-God-counterpat, who by the way wants us dead or at least removed from her way, is willing to help us betray her master? On one side, it´s true that the witches are independent entities that can act by themselves, but this looks suspicious as fuck to me. Sure, she has given us her WC, but that can be a trick for a longer plan. I think we should trust her for the time being, but always looking at our back.

BTW, TTO is omniscient in the mortal world, Malal say that herself when Yuma saw her die. And The Moon is part of the mortal world, of course. Soooooo, it´s possible that our "secret plan" is no longer secret

I don't remember, can we do something with that witch core to create a bigger distraction if we need to? I remember we were pretty careful not to fuck with sayaka's one.

(Also, fuck Mami. There was no reason to go on this bullshit suicide mission. She already taught other people her pancake recipe!)

Or she learned it from "someone". If Luxuria learned the recipe from Mami she would've known what kind of reaction that would get from Chiaki, imo. I would not be surprised if Mami learned a few more things from the witches, unknowingly.

Maybe we're over-interpreting. What if witches are just naturally good at stuff like this. They exist outside of reality, it wouldn't be that big of a reach to think replicating a person's recipe to the letter is like folding a paper crane for them.

Or she could have just thought an instance of 'Mami pancakes' into existence from the warp. We're talking about a pretty powerful being here.

Decu stated that witch parts are very dangerous to humans. If you (as a human) would drink the beverage that The First drinks, distiled from witch flesh, your digestive apparatus would dissolve. Also, eating witch flesh is toxic for a human (once again, said by Decu) and ends in death. I suppose that inserting witch flesh into the body/system of a human would have similar devastating effects

You shake your head at the mousy former Warmaster. That's...fine, you can get why she's nostalgic about feeling an empty pit in your stomach. You can get how she might miss that gut-wrenching sense of impending doom when you know something huge is stomping right around the corner and is currently sporting the biggest hard-on about caving your face in with the spiked bat of reality.

You've heard about mountain hermits going completely fucking nuts in their self-imposed isolation that they start craving everything else about civilization - even the parts where you'd personally cut bits off yourself for just to get rid of.

But you? So much shit has been flung in your direction - and in such unrelenting frequency - that you're getting nostalgic ABOUT having some peace and quiet. Hell, you're even starting to miss doing paperwork, for Christ's sake. It feels like forever since you managed to sit in front of a desk and not have to worry about the next fire you'll have to put out, while being on fire yourself. And taking care not to mistakenly take a kerosene shower trying to extinguish yourself.

...Yep. Some peace and quiet would be pretty fucking great right now, you think.

"Oh." Vintage's grin falls here, replaced with a apologetic smile. "Sorry. I mean...well, this isn't anything to be happy about, of course, it's just that--"

You shake your head again. It's fine. You know what she's trying to get to, and no, you're not offended. She said it herself back then - not much happens around here. Any bit of excitement, no matter what it is, must feel pretty...well, exciting.

At this, Vintage lets out a sigh. "It gets to you, you know. Solitude. No matter what you do, it seeps in and hollows you out sooner than later. No one's really meant to be alone for too long - otherwise, well, this happens." She lets out a small, pathetic laugh. "If only retirement was an option, I'd have taken it without a second thought. Bugger this lot for a game of soldiers."

...Wait, retirement isn't an option for the First?

"The only way out's in a coffin or in an ashtray. Just like the Second Officio's retirement policy - Only In Death Does Duty End." Vintage laughs a morbid laugh here, just as the both of you come to a stop in front of a rather plain-looking pair of double doors. "...Right. We're here, Chiaki. Beyond this door you'll be in the company of Magical Girls who have become anything but - each one able to make even the Betrayer look like the confused weakling she was once was, and still probably is when you get right down to it." She places a hand on the doors themselves. "Do you feel them? From all the way over here?"

You blink at her in confusion. Feel them? What the hell is she--

"Stop. Think. Breathe. And then focus." She nods at you. "Just try it, please. Only for a moment."

Wordlessly, you do as she says, and--

...

You feel your breath get torn out of you as you do begin to sense them. Your own hindbrain instincts tingling, no - recoiling at the collected presence beyond the doors. Cold fingers digging into your back, raking lines up and down your spine.

Predators. Apex predators. Each and every one of them, inside, waiting for you. Sharks on the prowl, on the hunt, black-eyed and ready to surge forward at the first hint of blood in the water, at the first sign of weakness. Teeth barely concealed in razor-sharp grins.

"That's the First for you. Monsters in every sense of the word. The worst - and the best - the Incubators have to offer." Vintage murmurs, and even as you pull in air in your lungs you can't help but hear a note of shameful pride in her voice. "Still feel like doing this, then?"

You shrug as you manage to get your breath back. You're here for a job, you tell her. It doesn't matter who you're up against or how you feel, you'll do the job in front of you and then go home. That's how you've done things, and you doubt you'd be changing that anytime soon, even if you are about to walk into a room full of overspecced assholes.

Vintage's smile is a pensive one. "So you say that, though - well, let's not kid ourselves, you're here because this is personal. I'm here because it's personal. And if it wasn't, we wouldn't be here at all. Not if we could help it."

"Right, here we go then, Chiaki-san. Into the belly of the beast." Vintage rolls back a sleeve to reveal a pale, dainty-fingered hand, reaching out with it to plant her palm against a particular spot on the wall by the side of the door. Something glows in contact, and the doors quietly slide open. The mousy Equerry gives the inside of the room a quick peek, then urges you to follow her in. You do so, and the moment you step into the threshold is when the doors close behind you with a solid, metallic finality.

The execution chamber is...not what you expected. You'd have thought that being in such a small base in an otherwise uninhabitable rock - this is the moon, after all - that space would be at a premium. That it would be a simple, utilitarian room with probably a couple of floor grills for the blood to drain through. But no, what you step into something much more grandiose - less of a chamber and more of a grand hall inside a medieval church, one illuminated with grand chandeliers and sectioned with numerous mahogany pews lined up to face an imposing marble pulpit. The pulpit itself set against a massive oil painting of the white-gowned, white-winged Blessed Lady, the entire universe cradled lovingly in her gloved hands.

"Looks excessive, doesn't it?" Vintage whispers to you as you look around, the portrait catching your eye. "The painting especially. That's one of Nero's own creations, you know - the Fourteenth Warmaster. Came here and painted it herself, saying that she wanted to do something only befitting of our honor. Of our prestige as the First." She chuckles here. "I think she just wanted to show off, really. It's kind of her thing."

Yeah? You wanted to ask more about the painting, and possibly about its artist, when you spy the occupants of the room - most of them at the front pews, either sitting primly or simply lounging around. Some clearly bored, others clearly trying to look bored. But all of them charging the very air around you with tension as they kept to themselves, while at the same time giving you once-overs from where they're sitting.

Scoping you out.

Measuring you up.

As much as you'd like to do the same, to mark them in your mind if - when - the shit hit the fan, there's something you immediately spot. Or rather, don't spot. Something missing.

Mami.

You turn to Vintage to ask where she is, when the former warmaster gives your hand a squeeze before pointing towards the ceiling. Up, up. Towards the chandelier nearest to the pulpit itself, nearest to the altar, the one that's being lowered to the ground.

Wait. No. That's not a chandelier, that's a--

...

"No. No, Chiaki. Stop. Focus." The mousy former warmaster's grip on your wrist is almost crushing as she forces you to stand completely still, to halt your sudden suicidal charge. "This isn't what you came here to do. Not yet. Stay calm. Rein in your emotions. This is not the time."

But they--!

"She's fine. I assure you, it takes more than that to kill someone like her. Especially someone like her." You try to tear yourself away from her, but the smaller, lighter Magical Girl's grip feels like iron. "If it makes you feel any better, she asked for this. All of it."

What?! She asked for it?!

Is she fucking with you right now? IS SHE?

"She asked for full sanction. After she failed in her assassination attempt and we managed to subdue her, she demanded that she be subjected to the harshest, most ironclad form of restraint we can possibly clap her in. Because anything bar of a Code Regalia silent room and she's going to break out and try again." There's the smallest tremor in Vintage's voice as she explains. "That's what you see before you."

...You shake your head, silently, not knowing what else to say. Looking up at the silhouette of Tomoe Mami as she's silently and slowly lowered from the ceiling to the altar. The chains of her massive crucifix clanking with every link paying out from the unseen spools above.

You look at her bloodied form, pierced with crackling crimson blades at the hands, feet and chest - and grit your teeth as you take in the sight of her costume in bloody tatters. The costume that had been the symbol of hope for all magical girls, as much as its wearer always been.

Her head bowed, unmoving save for the slight dip and rise of a labored breath. One of her soft, tender hair drills undone, hanging loosely from her neck.

"It looks worse than it actually is," Vintage tries again from beside you.

How do you react?

[]This isn't how she's supposed to go.
[]Tell me who did this so I know whose skull I'm adding to my throne.
[]You're lucky I didn't get to bring friends.

Plan? There is no plan, anon. We are waiting for the diversion, because there is nothing we have planned to freed Mami and face The First. And that´s basically it. We know nothing of the base structure, nor the powers of the girls of The First.

Accept it, anon: we have only one card in our deck, and we are playing it without knowing how it works or what it does

What if the First Warmaster has the Soul Gem, and the diversion causes her to go with the Soul Gem still in her Inventory?

Forgot about it. It would work well with the cigarette plan, as the distraction would give us a chance to transform unseen. But then we would have to cut our way through the First's elite and that's not a good prospect.

So, this mission is not the Final Chapter then? But the Faust's "grief seed" lies here on the Moon and that's probably where the final fight will take place (Or is it in the Wookieworld? Or maybe the Wookieworld is connected to the Faust? I don't know anymore). That would imply that we will return here some other time, so maybe not all is lost.
I'm saying this because we kinda have to get those GWs at some point after all.

Collecting GWs wasn't only Malal's plan. It was Madokami's plan as well. And judging from their interaction during the siberian arc, those two Madokas had their different ways of doing things. "Lucky AND grateful. I know those two you hang around with the most - the red one and the blue one - and I've no doubt they'd have flown off the handle the moment they saw what we did to Tomoe Mami." Your former Warmaster lets out a breath, before looking up at you. "Chiaki, you have to realize that you're not the only one suffering here. We're hurting too. It's just..." She turns to the grisly spectacle before you and nods towards it, audibly swallowing. "We can't overlook this, even if we wanted to. Even if it's her."

You have no reply to that, other than the creak of your abused hands clenching into white-hot, painful fists.

"This is why I brought you here. This is why I asked Kyuubey to bring you along. So you could see and understand." The smaller woman's voice is all but a delicate whisper in your ear now. "To understand what she'd done, why she did it, and what you need to do...Nameless One."

That gets a reaction from you, and you turn to Vintage, to ask her what she meant. But before you could even meet eyes with her, she'd stepped forward ahead of you, clapping both her hands.

"Alright, you dildos. We're here. She's here. Let's get this sordid business over and done with while we're still drawing breath." The cheerful, chipper tone in the bespectacled Equerry's voice is back, shattering the otherwise oppressive solemnity of the chapel. "Wait, where's Hazuki? Isn't she supposed to be presiding over this--"

"The Warmaster is indisposed," One particularly nasty-looking specimen with pristine white armor and severely-cut long black hair cuts the mousy office-lady off, her voice a strong and rich baritone that filled the entire chapel. Clearly someone used to sermonizing in front of a chapel of black-armored Magical Girls, or roaring blood-curling threats at heretics.

"But she is, as always, watching. In the meantime, she's elected that I preside over Tomoe Mami's trial and execution." She nods towards you, thick eyebrows arched. "Welcome, Chiaki Matsuda, Warmaster of the Ninth. It is unfortunate we had to meet under such dire circumstances, but here we are."

>> ☐ Deculture (ID: Tt7AEVsg) 03/11/17(Sat)09:06:26 No.1253905

>>1253902

You make to react, but Vintage's surprised - and offended - outburst beats you to the punch. "But I'm her Equerry! If she's busy, then I should--"

"You have emotional and familial ties to the Ninth Officio Assassinorum, Equerry Karasawa." The sharp-faced young woman makes her way to the 'altar' - her obviously priceless artifact armor's servos purring with her every movement - and it's at the jewel-festooned, skull-encrusted throne there that she stops, turning so slightly to face you and the rest of the chapel. "While the Ninth itself is not being judged here, the fact that you come from the same Officio as the Accused means that you are compromised and thus exempt from the trial itself."

Shock. Then outrage. "Kiryuin, you fucking know that I outrank you--"

"Not an argument." The black-haired woman's small, frosty smile is as sharp as the cutting retort that sliced through Vintage's frustrated growl. "Our Warmaster has spoken, and by her word we shall conduct the proceedings." She looks around the chapel. "Is there anyone else who objects to such an arrangement? No? Then let us proceed posthaste."

"W-wait. Wait. Before that, shouldn't we be introducing ourselves to Matsuda, at least?" Vintage is clearly on edge now but also obviously trying her best to maintain a semblance of composure. "Present circumstances aside, this IS her first time here, among...esteemed peers." There's the tiniest bit of venom that you can detect in that pause, small enough that it could be mistaken as frustration - but it was there, and you're surprised no one else picked it up, judging by the stony expressions on the rest of the chapel's occupants. That or they're just used to Vintage being contentious.

Silence, here, before the white-armored woman shakes her head. "Karasawa, this is a trial of the most serious import. The Accused is here, crucified according to her wishes, and awaiting judgment. Proper introductions can wait until after the fact."

"Shouldn't we ask her, then? Despite everything else, Matsuda does share the rank that our absentee Warmaster. That DOES count for something, yes?" The bespectacled Equerry snaps back, before turning to you.

How do you respond?

I think trying to steal golden weapons on top of saving Mami and protecting your own with the entirety of the First and an assassin on your ass is a bit much to ask for.

You nod at Vintage. Yeah, sure. It'd be nice to be able to put names to the new faces you're meeting, you hear yourself reply. Circumstances aside and all.

"...As you wish." The sharp-featured woman in brutal ivory armor clears her throat delicately, before gesturing to herself. "I suppose I'll start. I am Eversor Rank Leader Kiryuin Satsuki of the First Officio Assassinorum, former High Templar of the Second and Emperor's Champion of a number of crusades. As I have declared just now, I am tasked by my Warmaster to facilitate and oversee the judgment of Tomoe Mami." She smiles here, the same cold, frosty smile from earlier, before nodding at Vintage, who simply scowls back before turning to you.

"Karasawa Vintage. Equerry of the First. You know what I do. Everyone else does, too." There's something almost petulant with how she spits her name out, an immature look that isn't really helped by her height - or lack of it - and her general mousiness. She cants her head irritably to the rest of the other girls in the chapel, who reply with the same somber lack of enthusiasm as you have.

Kinomoto Sakura, replied one of them, a cheerful-looking brown-haired girl with a rather ornate pink-and-rose outfit with superdeformed angel wings. Her green eyes twinkling as she smiled at you, before bowing.

Takamachi Nanoha, replied another, a brown-haired drink of water wearing what looks like a very robe-y looking school uniform. Her Soul Gem, a crimson one shaped into a perfect sphere, is gilded in a way you've never seen before, and seemed to be almost sentient as it glowed in time with her heartbeat as it hung from her neck as a pendant.

There were a handful of others, but even as you tried to pay attention and remember them - there's a good chance you may be trying your level best to kill each and every one of them later after all - your attention was held elsewhere as a certain wariness overpowered you. Cold gooseflesh rising on your arms, on the back of your neck, more than the obvious tension in the room already warranted. A keenness you've never felt before, not even back in the Akashic Realm, where you hunted down the Prophet herself.

+ Someone's...here. + The faint voice of Smartass, your one remaining fragment, whispers in your ear. + Someone familiar. But I can't place who, or what, or...when. +

When?

+ Like I said, I'm not sure. But we're so close to her Grief Seed, it may be nothing. +

...Ah. Right. Pinky's grief seed. You try to stare out one of the many plate-glass windows, but you can't quite catch sight of it.

You manage to wrest your attention back to the introductions just as it seems to be looping back to you. "I'm a bit disappointed our latest recruit isn't around to introduce herself, but perhaps that's a blessing. I find that she can get a bit too enamored with her own voice and posterior. A creature of peerless vanity if I ever met one, always with her smartphone." Satsuki shakes her head, before gesturing to you. "Well, it's your turn, Matsuda. Yes, I realize I named you first, but for formality's sake..."

You nod.

Maybe. But remember that Mami is good with keikakus and has connections. And she almost killed us (allegedly, teleporting straight from the Moon). But after being pulsed by Midori she does a 180 and fails an assasination attempt, despite being a cold professional. It's thanks to that fiasco that we are able to be here, close to the new GW and also we have conveniently met a group of people that want us to succeed in rescuing her. A little to convenient, don't you think?
Here's an idea: Mami wants to help us in our quest, but even she can't just barge in and ask for GWs. So she arranges all of this so we have a chance. She didn't do this alone, she's with those "benefactors" Lewdxuria was talking about.
That of course doesn't mean we should trust them unconditionaly, but we may have more allies in this base that we think we have.

"My name is Chiaki Matsuda." You say quietly, formally. Deadpan. "Vindicare. Warmaster of the Ninth Officio Assassinorum." Even now, after all this time, it still feels strange to say, like you're saying it for someone else. But you are starting to take pride in it, to be honest.

It's just a shame you had to deal with this kind of thing so early into your tenure.

"Wonderful. Now we are all comrades." Satsuki smiles as the rest of the occupants of the chapel exchange looks and nods at your own introduction, before turning to Vintage. "Are you satisfied now, Equerry? Or would you like us to proceed with a tea ceremony first? Maybe we'll have you brew the tea again, like last time--"

"Cram it, Kiryuin, and let's get this going." The eldest Karasawa, still clearly rankled and rustled, snaps. "I just wanted to make sure Matsuda knows who she's dealing with, after all."

"Of course, of course. I live to serve" The white-armored girl's chilly smile goes just a bit wider, a clear indication that she's actually getting her kicks seeing Vintage squirm - before gazing towards the crucified form of Tomoe Mami. "Very well. Let us begin. First, to deliver an accurate recounting of events, I call upon the first witness--"

"No...no need. No need for all of that."

You look up as well, here, as you hear her voice. A voice strained by effort, tightened by pain, but as lucid and as clear as a bell in a clear sky. A voice you've heard shout inspiring cheers as well as knee-weakening nothings into your ear. One that reminded you of warm, golden honey - or syrup being poured upon a hearty, sublime breakfast you would kill for.

Mami. She's speaking. Even in her state, she's--

"Cut the bullshit, Satsuki. You know I did it. And I'd do it again." Your once-goddess of luck and victory snarls, her amber eyes cold and sharp. Speaking like you've never heard her speak before, not with this kind of hate. Not with this kind of rage. "Spare me...the sanctimonious farce this sad excuse of a 'trial' is going to be. If you're going to kill me, do it now."

This sends palpable shockwaves throughout the small group inside the chapel, and from the corner of your eye you could see Vintage shake her head here. You're...not too sure what to make of it yourself either.

Is this the real Mami? The one hiding behind every smile, every pile of pancakes she offered you?

"So you admit to it, then?" Even Satsuki's chilly facade seems to falter as well. "Tomoe Mami, you admit to attacking and nearly killing our Culexus--"

"No. I was trying to kill your Warmaster." There's a sharp crackle coming from the swords pinning her hands and wrists to the cross she's lashed to as she flexes her arms. A grunt of pain issuing from her lips as she seems to attempt pulling herself free, and only managing to injure herself further. Adding to the trails of gruesome, caked crimson dripping down the steel construct. "Yuko-san, bless her soul, got in the way like the annoying bitch she always is."

The kind of questions we'd want real answers to the most are likely the kind Mami doesn't want to truthfully answer with this audience. If there's something she -wants- to tell us despited the situation though, she'll probably find a way to get it across or at least get us to engage her.

I somehow think paying the warmaster wouldn't even be the most straining thing on his budget. The officio has a thousand magical girls who all want their paycheck on top of the regular employees. Even if a typical warmaster salary is ten, twenty times the regular MG rate, it's nothing compared to the bulk of them.

Now that I think about it, we never really got an insight into the ins and outs of magical girl salaries did we?

Mami's harsh, almost nonchalant confession sends more shockwaves throughout the small audience, you included. Her interrogator, the white-armored Satsuki, seems to take a few moments to collect herself as well, her eyes wide with disbelief. "Then...then why did you do it? We've allowed you into our fastness many times, and have broken bread with you, and shared our own secrets with you. All of us - even my younger sister, before we lost her to the perils of the warp - treated you no less than one of our own. Even our Warmaster took you into her confidence. So why...?"

A breathless, pained chuckle escapes Mami's bloodied lips. "I've already told you why, Satsuki. You and the rest of the First. I've told you all enough times that I'm sick of repeating it over and over again, and that was while you were all busy crucifying me like I asked you to." She turns her head briefly to spit a glob of bloody saliva onto the tiled floor below. "My answer's not going to change no matter how many times you ask."

"Amane Hazuki, our Warmaster, is not who you keep accusing her to be." The raven-haired knight in dappled white armor snarls, stepping forward. "Stop trying to malign her as something hateful and evil, something so heretical. She has done more for this world than even you ever did, and she--"

"THAT DOESN'T FUCKING MATTER!" Mami all but roars, the sheer fury and volume of her response making you take a step back, and the rest of the chapel's occupants flinch. "I KNOW who she is, Satsuki! No matter how hard you deny it, or how long her screed of accolades are - I know the truth! I know what she's hiding! I SAW! I KNOW WHAT SHE IS!"

"Tomoe Mami--"

"EVIL! UNSPEAKABLE, UNRELENTING, UNFORGIVING EVIL!" Less of a tirade and more of a rant reaching fever pitch, Mami continues, and you take another step back as you catch a glimpse of her widened eyes - those warm, amber pupils shrinking to nothing more than golden dots. "And you, you of all people, Satsuki, you of all the Magical Girls here should know - should completely understand - what should be done in the face of such monstrous, overwhelming evil--"

"IT SHOULD BE DESTROYED! IT SHOULD BE BANISHED! IT SHOULD BE KILLED! WITHOUT FEAR, MERCY OR REMORSE!" There's another deafening crackle as one of the swords pierced through her right hand finally fails, the hunk of blood-encrusted crimson metal crashing to the floor in a harsh clatter.

"YOU PENNED THOSE WORDS YOURSELF, KIRYUIN SATSUKI, AS AN OATH OF THE SECOND! BUT STILL YOU NEED TO ASK ME THAT? TELL ME, WHY THE FUCK SHOULD I EXPLAIN MYSELF AGAIN TO A HYPOCRITE?"

Vintage is the warmaster's most trusted subordinate, why would she lend hand in rescuing her would-be assasin?

With that said, the only way I can find to have Kyoko do that to us is if we kill Sayaka. BUT that is what happened in the dream we had with Midori and edgelord, who are both Pinky zombies, so we can't even be even be sure of Kyoko in that case either.

Enough. This is...enough. You can't keep quiet any longer.

Hearing her talk like that...hearing the one voice of reason that you'd trusted completely and utterly to this point scream and rave and snarl like some foam-mouthed lunatic...

"Was Midori evil, too?" You step forward, your own voice echoing loud and clear in the grandiose chapel, drowning out the echoes of Mami's tirade as well as Satsuki's protests. "Was that why you tried to kill her?"

Mami, bleeding hate as much as blood upon her brutal crucifix, freezes at the sound of your voice, her widened eyes swiveling towards you. And then - just like that - a rancid mix of both fear, remorse and guilt contorts her once-beautiful features, her face going pale. Her mouth moves silently as she seems to attempt to say something - anything - but after a few moments, she closes her eyes and turns away.

"Evil must be destroyed. Evil must be purged." She murmurs tonelessly, emotionlessly, yet loud enough for the rest of the chapel to hear. "And the Blessed Lady shall know her own, and keep safe those unfortunate enough to stand in my way. The Blessed Lady protects."

...what? That's...that's it?

That's her answer to you? She just brushed you off like that, like...like you didn't even matter to her?

"Your knowledge of Second Officio Scripture won't quite help you, Tomoe-san, but your knowledge of it is commendable in any case." Still apparently shaken but doing her best to rally forward, Satsuki rakes her fingers through her own mass of black hair, a gesture you very nearly replicate if not for the fact that you've already gotten a haircut of your own. "As you can see, the Accused refuses to cooperate. If there's nothing else, then I will proceed to the next stage of the trial: Judgment." She looks towards you and Vintage. "Well?"

"Chiaki...?" The mousy former Warmaster turns to look at you helplessly. Clearly at a loss as well.

How do you react?

It's not racist if you're a devil saying it.

Also, it would be a big assumption and a bad idea, but it would look really cool if we pistol whipped Mami with the Golden DEagle when re-asking the question.

She's already probably cock-drunk on Golden Weapon anyway, so give her what she needs. She's ranting like Ahriman and Ahriman II, just wait for her to play Find the Homu and collect her soul in the GW once the firefight's over.

If the entire cabal was to post with names, this would start looking like a huge cancerous circlejerk really fast. The IDs barely help it.

What Mami really needs is a good fofa intervention: admit you have a serious fofa problem, visit the fofa clinic in Siberia, regulary visit the fofa anonymous club to talk about your problem with other sick people (club may be disbanded in the future due to the increasing number of deaths among the members).

It's true that Mami has stepped over the line and maybe there's nothing we can do to help her except put her out of her misery. But we've been down that path before, and who was helping us then? Looking over us, protecting us from other people that would rather kill us like a rabid dog we are. It's Mami. And now we're gona stand over her like we're any less of a monster and watch her get executed? That would leave a bad taste in Chiaki's mouth no doubt.
I propose we wait for the right moment and save her ass whether she likes it or not. If she intends to go down while doing what she thinks is right and we won't be able to get her to snap out of it, we're going to follow her to the depths of hell. Because no matter where we end up, as long as she's with us, we have the one thing we ever wanted in our wretched life - Mami's glorious pancakes.

"Nothing else, then? Very well. In light of evidence presented and testimony of witnesses - of which there is enough just in this very chapel to convince any impartial judge twice over, not including her confession and our Culexus still trying to put herself back together in Sick Bay..." Satsuki shakes her head regretfully, before looking up at Mami's crucified form. "I therefore judge thee, Tomoe Mami of the Ninth Officio Assassinorum, gui--"

"I ASKED YOU A FUCKING QUESTION, TOMOE MAMI!"

A demand for answers, not simply shouted - it was screamed. Roared. Sharp enough and loud enough to once more interrupt the proceedings, as well as earn its source looks of varying amounts of offense. Offense and - disgustingly enough - pity. Whether it was through second-hand embarrassment or sympathy, or a rancid mix of both, you couldn't tell. You doubt you could even make out just what expression Vintage was looking at you with, with your own vision reduced to a smear of colors with your own tears.

"Chiaki..." She says your name again, but she makes no move to stop you. It doesn't even sound like she had any heart in it either.

"Midori's comatose right now. Whatever happened to her - whatever you did to her - she's not waking up. No one in sickbay has any idea what's wrong with her, not even Kyuubey. I don't think she can even hear me. I can't talk to her anymore, I can't hear her talk to me about just how...how amazing you are for believing in me, and working your ass off so that I got to where I am now, so that - so that don't always have to be the fucking Officio cautionary story." You let this out in a furious, nearly-stumbling screed, saying more to the first person you truly and wholly loved in that span of time than you've ever had before. More than simple gratitude and half-murmured acquiescences, more than awkward declarations of admiration.

"I trusted you. I'd clear this entire fucking room for you and the entire world if you asked." You would more likely regret that in the coming moments, but you can't stop now. "But what you did - and what you're doing right now - it's actually making me believe what these dildoes are saying about you. About what Kharn told me about you. About...about what my own fucking suspicions are telling me about you."

You take off your glasses briefly to angrily run a sleeve across your eyes, before glaring up at her again.

"TURN AND FACE ME, TOMOE MAMI. PROVE I'M A FUCKING LIAR. TELL ME YOU DIDN'T DO IT. RIGHT TO MY FACE."

In the hollow of the silence left by your pause, a deafening quiet.

One that seems to last for an eternity before Tomoe Mami turns towards you, her eyes opening. Revealing her eyes of clear, lucid amber, without a trace of darkness. A smile curling her lips.

We have to find out if their GW is a real thing or not.

Also, shooting them does no good.
We need to shoot her soulgem.

Now, after the trial, we have to make a demand.
To kill her ourselves. They can check if we really killed her...

But we need to kill her ourselves. If only out of respect.

Is there a place where all of Decu's MGNQ art is gathered? I checked the wiki but only found the fan-art (and I can't imagine it's complete given how small the Dan Kim section was). His pixiv seems fairly light on art too.

You look back at Vintage for a moment more, before briefly nodding and stepping back. She shoots you a relieved look for that one moment before turning back to Satsuki, and begin to spit out all sorts of technical and legal mumbo-jumbo at the white-armored Magical Girl. You don't understand any of it at all, but you can tell that she's trying to bog things down enough so that what needs to happen could actually happen.

"Threaten me all you like, but this trial has been a farce, a blight on the history of the First! I've never seen a more biased and partial judgment, and I was THERE when it happened, Kiryuin! I move to strike this entire proceeding from the record and request for a new trial--"

"There will BE no other trial! You heard her confess! YOU WERE THERE, KARASAWA! ENOUGH! Her guilt is evident! What more can you possibly want? I--"

"She's obviously not thinking right! She can't even answer any questions posed to her in a proper, concise manner! We can't proceed with the trial with the Accused in such a state!"

You tune them out as you take the cigarette that a smiling, raven-haired Witch gave you. Doing it slowly yet carefully, so that whoever's looking can see that all you're doing is to calm your nerves by having a little smoke. Yes. Just a little smoke, to try and relax, to settle yourself after that emotional outburst.

On her cross, Mami is the very picture of peaceful, benevolent acceptance, her eyes closed, her smile still fixed on her lips. An angel, crucified, the placidity of her expression belying the gruesome wounds pinning her to the brutal torture implement.

You light the cigarette with a snap of your lighter and take a long, deep drag from it. The small spider mark on the filter glowing with the faintest of light before disappearing.

Hnh. It...doesn't really taste any different from any other cigarette. For some reason you were expecting it to have a sweet taste, like...apples, or something. You're not quite sure.

But whatever the distraction is, you hope it happens soon. From how Vintage seems to be sweating even more, it looks like she's losing the argument, and losing fast. She won't be able to delay it any longer.

And then--

"ALERT," A soft, mechanical voice rings out through the chapel, across the entire Lunar Base. "ALPHA-CLASS THREAT INBOUND. ALERT. ALPHA CLASS--"

"What? NOW?" Satsuki rages, clearly in disbelief. "But there wasn't supposed to be any activity from the Grief Seed this cycle, Yuko didn't forsee--"

"Yuko-san didn't forsee her near-death experience today, either," Vintage snaps, clearly relieved. "I move for postponement. I ask that Mami be temporarily incarcerated in Regalia for the meantime while we deal with--"

"Yuko-san didn't forsee her near-death experience today, either," Vintage snaps, clearly relieved. "I move for postponement. I ask that Mami be temporarily incarcerated in Regalia for the meantime while we deal with--"

"Oh, it's Sagittarius!" The brown-haired girl named Nanoha pipes up as she holds a finger to her ear, an innocent smile breaking on her face. "I was wondering when she'd come up again, it's been a while. Just keep going with the trial, I'll take care of this personally." She makes her way down the chapel, her Magical Girl outfit materializing upon her person with a brilliant flash, and the soul gem pendant transforming into a brutal, mechanized version of a Magical Girl's winged staff. With its golden beaked speartip, it looked less of a staff and more of a spear, or even a halberd.

"Are...are you sure, Takamachi?" Satsuki asks. "We can have our initiates just handle the event--"

"No, no, please! This is clearly important, and I need to stretch my legs anyway! It's fine!" Nanoha grins, briefly looking back as she continues to make her exit, not missing a beat. "I'll be back before you know it, I promise!"

As she passes you on her way out - you find yourself momentarily paralyzed by the choking, chilling aura permeating around her. An unrelenting, crushing pressure. It's also here that you hear her murmur something to you as she walks past, the glint in her eye matching yours.

"Give me a reason to kill you and your entire fucking Officio. Please."

...

And just like that, she's gone, taking her killing intent along with her. Your gaze locked to where she was a moment ago, your cigarette burning down to its filter.

"Al...alright." The raven-haired 'judge' seems to have heard that tiny barb as well, momentarily off-put before getting back on track. "Anyway, thank you, Takamachi-san, for allowing us to continue with the proceedings. Now, to get on with--"

"WARNING. ALPHA-CLASS THREAT DETECTED. WARNING. ALPHA-CLASS THREAT DETECTED."

"Oh, for Heaven's sake! Let me at least finish one godforsaken THOUGHT!" The white-armored woman snarls. "What is it this time?! I--"

As if on cue, the alarm is cut off in mid-warning, replaced by a more urgent one.

"ALERT! STATION BREACH! ALERT! STATION BREACH!"

And you barely have enough time to see a hole in reality rip itself wide open in the very center of the chapel - the violent maelstrom that is the Akashic Realm peeking forth from the ever-widening slip - before a giant mass of brilliant, glowing and spiked brass chains spill out of it.

Each one a veritable tendril of sentient, blade-tipped hate.

Each one dripping with soul-stuff, gossamer threads of warp-energy dangling from writing, clanging links. Just beyond them, you could see a shadow of something huge - something gilded - something massive.

A monstrous gilded brass spider, walking on bladed legs.

And above it all - amidst the cries of panic and the deafening alarm klaxons -

You could hear laughing.

Whether it was yours, Mami's, or Pinky's - you can't tell.

And that's what scares you the most.

Archived

Your name is Chiaki Matsuda, and you are a Magical Girl.

And you've just unleashed what looks like a huge brass spider monster witch right smack dab in the First Officio Assassinorum's moonbase.

A spider monster that is currently disemboweling and tearing apart anything and everything it can get its bladed chains around, with each prey providing a sobering choir of death screams punctuated with the juicy crunch of broken bones and ripping flesh.

All just to interrupt Tomoe Mami's judgment and impending execution.

All just to buy more sand for her hourglass. For you to make sense of what she's done and what she's tried to do.

This is you fixing things. This is you taking control of the situation. The only way you know how.

And you'll make her answer you properly if it's the last thing you ever do.

Above the deafening alarms and the wash of red emergency light, through the bloodcurdling screams and the hypnotizing cascade of pulping meat, behind the maniacal peals of laughter coming from nowhere and everywhere at once - you find yourself momentarily enchanted with the sight of the most powerful magical girls in the world being inconvenienced by a Witch. No, that's obviously an understatement - they were being massacred by it. Decimated by it. Tearing them to pieces despite their best efforts to kill it.

It's not for lack of trying, to be sure. Even without looking - and you can't, not without risking blindness from the migraine-bright flashes of light and explosion of color from the desperate attacks - you know each of them is burning enough magic, flinging enough firepower to level an entire city block with each hit. Enough to make the air inside the now-bloodied chapel smell acrid, thick with ozone and static electricity. Enough to make your teeth itch and your ears ring.

But no matter what they did - no matter what they tried - nothing seemed to hit. Nothing seemed to work. Sure, their attacks sheared off chain after bladed chain, even flash-melting them whenever they get too close - but each one destroyed was replaced with two, and every two replaced with three. When a blast of blinding light finally managed to slip through the trashing forest of barbed metal links, they simply dissolved into the yawning, gaping tear in reality that the Witch mockingly peered through. Its massive, arachnid form barely visible through the virulent, violent energies of the warp-torn hell it made its nest in.

Almost like...huh. Almost like one of those creepy, poisonous spiders you remember watching a documentary about. A funnel web spider, kind of thing. Burying itself underground, in its own tunnel, only to burst through the camouflaged opening with fangs ready to deliver the killing blow at the right time.

As much as you'd like to stick around to see that, though, you have bigger things to worry about. Namely the all-but-forgotten blonde still crucified at the altar, placid among the carnage, amidst the chaos.

+ CHIAKI-SAN, I'VE GOT HER! NOW MOVE! + Vintage's pulsed cry of panic and haste derails your track of thought, snapping you back into the chaotic mess of the present. You hurriedly scan the chapel for the mousy Equerry - only to find her just beyond the whipcracking cascade of bladed chains still hewing flesh and blood from the First Officio, her small frame shivering as it tries to support the limping, bleeding form of...Tomoe Mami...?

You blink at this. What...? Two of them?

+ One of her ribbon copies! No time to explain! + Vintage insists as she hobbles towards you, clearly struggling to haul the blonde's weight. + MOVE! We need to get the both of you to the savior pods before they catch on! Luxuria can't keep this up forever, even if it looks like she's winning! +

Just behind her, another girl of the First screams bloody murder as the chains wrapped around her limbs violently rip and tear her apart, before dragging her still-bleeding, still-twitching remains into the abyss from which they've sprouted from. Her cries for help joining the ever-present chorus of the damned.

What do you do?

[]Scout on ahead. Clear their path to the savior pod.
[]Grab Mami and have Vintage guide you to the savior pod.

I don't feel quite comfortable with the notion of "clearing the path". Jesus, this was supposed to be a diversion and instead we get half the officio snuffed out. They're on our side, all things considered, no?

Correct. But I believe the plan is to send Mami to Earth and make her hide somewhere. Then, if we are clever, we remain in the moonbase and say "I tried to stop her, but she took an emergency pod", pretending to be on The First side.
But, seeming that we are stupid, I think we are going to escape with her, seañing the fate of our Officio for betrayal (or, at least, sealing our fate).

GUYS, DON'T TRY TO ESCAPE IN THE EMERGENCY POD WITH MAMI!

Why would they believe us? Nanoha already made it clear that she (and probably the rest of the first) was only waiting for an excuse.

I agree with the not fleeing immediately part though, we should loot their golden weapons. This is also a golden opportunity to kill their injured culexus.

Because let's not forget that our actions could also make our Officio fall. It's best to pretend to be on their side. After all, if they are going to kill us anyway, then the outcome it's not going to change. And if they are looking for an excuse, let's not give them one. They can think that we are lying, but without proof, euther they contain their hand or, as you say, they attack us. Anyway, what I mean is to act as a loyal warmaster ally of the First. And that's it.
Now, I doubt the Culexus is going to tecover soon, but if the cahnce presents itself, killing her is a good idea

Almost each and every one member of The First are more monster in mindset than disciplined soldiers. To a one, they're mildly-to-moderately less obscene versions of Kharn. Most of their traits that you'd think are born from professionalism are just as likely to stem from an "Alpha Dog" mindset.

I dunno what people are going on about organization and effieciency when the person narrating can hardly see what's going on over the explosions, and the one thing she's telling for sure is that the girls seem to be losing a battle of attrition because the Witch is regenerating weapons faster than the girls can fend it off and their attacks don't reach the main body.

Haven't you ever seen immature guild groups/premades fall apart or ragequit when their pub stomping gets thrown off? (because half of them are in it for their KDR) This situation doesn't seem like anything they've had to deal with before, something that required betrayal from one of their own to happen besides. Requirement of joining the First is power and a chip to put on your shoulder. I think it's pretty easy to see how their mystique overshadows just how atrocious their organization is on a personal level, especially vs. an out of context problem.

I'm guessing because the one edgelord is able to do that with the element of surprise and prior planning. The First probably has the power to do what you're saying they should be doing and take the witch out, but their bad organization and lone wolf mindset just makes them a mob of deadly idiots when they aren't fighting in their preferred context. Smaller and more organized force taking on a larger and stronger enemy who should win on paper, you know?

+ Savior pod? + You shake your head here as you run to the pair, immediately scooping Mami up in your arms in order to relieve the clearly-struggling former Warmaster of her load. She's...definitely lighter than how you remember her to be, but maybe that's just the adrenalin. + Why not just teleport back down? It'd be faster, wouldn't it? And where's her Soul Gem? +

+ The entire place is on full alert because of the breach. That means total lockdown. The savior pods are the only way back home. + Vintage winces as she hears another member of the First get messily eviscerated by the bladed chains, before pulling a glowing amber jewel set in a cute flower-petal gilding from the depths of her sleeves and then tossing it to you. You reach out with your free hand to catch it, but in a surprising display of reflexive sharpness despite grievous and crippling injury, Mami pre-empts you - her blood-encrusted fingers closing around the glowing rock.

+ Mine + Is all that the blonde pulses to both you and Vintage, a weak pitiful gasp of a mental sigh, before her head lolls forward on her neck, still clearly out of strength from...whatever the First did to her. Vintage shakes her head at this, an unreadable expression on her face, before leading you away from the frenzied, murderous chaos. One you steal another glance from before Vintage ushers you outside of the chapel, through an unsealed door and down a long corridor. One that hasn't seen occupants in years from the looks of it.

You wanted to ask about that. You wanted to ask Vintage why the supposedly 'strongest' Magical Girls in the world were fall apart like wet paper in a hurricane, under the attack of one single and solitary Witch. But most of all you wanted to ask Mami about what she did, and what she tried to do.

A thousand questions, but only time for one, as you hurry towards the Savior Pod, the screams of the dying and the shrieking of the sirens fading away in the distance. As the Transcendent One's voice echoes in your mind, unbidden.

"If you proceed down on this path you've chosen for yourself, all the things that you hold dear will be taken away from you. Your friends will become your enemies, and your enemies will be the ones you turn to for aid. You will lose everything, piece by piece, person by person, until you are left with nothing but the road you're traveling. And of all the people who will abandon you, Tomoe Mami will be the one to betray you first."

...

What do you ask Mami?

"Why?" Even with your untransformed, still-human body crying out for a moment's rest, even with adrenalin spiking your pulse and pounding through your bloodstream, even with the chilling thought that any moment the First would catch on and realize what you've done - you find yourself asking her why. The note of sick-hearted despair in that one uttered word painfully audible, even if you tried your level best to hide it with accusation. With anger. With the offended fury of the betrayed.

It takes her a moment to respond, and when she does, it's with her slowly lifting her head to smile weakly at you. Her eyes opening to reveal dead, empty orbs of yellow when there had been warmth in the glowing amber before. Her skin pale enough to almost be translucent.

+ Did...what I felt...had to be done, Chiaki-san. + Her pulsing is slow, weak and erratic, like a radio signal cutting in and out. + Whether it's you or...the First Warmaster herself. +

+Someone has to carry...that burden. No matter how much it hurts.+

Before you could react - before you could pulse or even spit the hot, acidic bile rising in your throat - Vintage's frantic, hurried calls for your attention cuts you off. You look forward to see your destination rapidly approaching despite your hobbling pace - a row of savior pods, each one prepped to launch at the press of a button, hatches open and ready for passengers to squeeze themselves into safety. Each pod a large but cramped-looking metal sphere with what appears to be rudimentary thrusters dotting its bulkily-armored surface.

"Clock's ticking, the both of you get in! They've already fended off Luxuria and regenerated their injuries! They'll be here any moment!" Vintage hurries you along, the mousy Equerry wringing her hands inside her kimono sleeves. "I've already notified the Ninth to scramble some staff up to your potential landing sites for recovery!"

You glare at the limp, weakened blonde in your arms before turning towards the savior pods. You'll just have to ask her about it later, you decide. Back at the Ninth. And maybe inside a Silent Room, just to be sure.

[]Go inside a savior pod together.
[]Go in seperate savior pods.
[]Ask Vintage to escape with you.

Not really, rather, squads are the rather more common way the Officios handle personnel. You've got them basically everywhere except where it wouldn't make sense like 4th or 13th.

And that might actually be the point. Maybe with the exception of Satsuki, everyone in here is a special snowflake. Once you rise up through ranks to become a squad leader and eventually a rank leader on account of your experience with personnel management, you're too valuable on your position to promote anymore - if the normal way is how you got there in the first place. The way that you get people like Warmaster or people the First would be interested in is that you make an outrageous contract, get some completely bullshit magic like time stop that makes you a special potential that would be 'spoiled' working in a squad, and then you spend a hard to recall time that is in actuality five years shooting witches and yakuza in drunken stupor before the the Incubator walks up to you after a particularly big gig, and is like "Congratulations, you're the biggest murderhobo around. Would you like to become a Warmaster?"

And that's probably what the First really is. A bunch of misfits whose first experience at teamwork was actual warmaster stuff, and their past never truly faded away. In an Officio, the Warmaster is a figure that draws inspiration, but really, they're like a big hammer and when there's a particulary big nail around, that's what you have the Warmaster for.

And now we got the mother of all nails crashing the ceiling of this antique tools workshop, and the hammers are hitting each other in confusion.

We'll pretend we're keeping Vintage hostage as a bargaining chip with the First. It's not like we can make them any more mad. Plus it will explain why Vintage was with us, so she won't be in danger of being labelled a traitor. If this reasoning is wrong, I'm sure Vintage would just decline.

Hoooly shit.

> Why couldn't it have been some else? She said you had a clone who helped her, what about her? Why not let her handle this kind of responsibility--

> "Because she was dying," Malal cuts you off. "She didn't have much time left. I believe she tried the same exact thing, with the Golden Weapons and all - but she made a mistake somewhere and they've basically turned her into a puppet they were slowly draining of life."

> They've basically turned her into a puppet they were slowly draining of life
> They've basically turned her into a puppet
> They

...
Guys.
It's the 1st's Warmaster.

> "I THINK I left a partial list of suspected Golden Weapon users in my room, but you'll have to ask Yuma to help you get in."
We gotta get talking with that staff too.

And it's supported by

> "No. That's the one thing I was trying to find out when Walpurgisnacht happened. I was hoping I'd be able to find her in the confusion of that kind of event, but..." She shakes her head. "I know she's contracted, though. Someone in the more powerful Officios. But you'll know her when you see her, and when you do..." The Culexus draws a leather-encased thumb across her gorget.

Last but not least.
We have to use the word 'Nevermore' more often.
> "I hear you. Okay, don't spread it around, but I have it from a reliable source that the Spymaster's been trained to...uh..." The Culexus seems to hesitate here, going with some rather awkward hand movements instead. "...you know. Do 'that' on command. Some kind of weird sex hypnotism shit that she was trained on by someone she got into trouble with."

...
Well shit.
This is a lot of information we should write down somewhere.

> "Do you think it's up to me? I'm part of this prerecorded memory, aren't I?" Malal snaps at you. "Even if we're talking like this, here and now, there are still some things that are set in stone. The moment you wake up, Chiaki Matsuda is gone. It's going to happen, and nothing bar rewriting this particular memory itself is going to stop it--"

> She stops here, just as lighting fissures the very sky underneath her. Her visor reflecting the bolts of electricity as she looks up, and then the gold luster of your Desert Eagle as she comes face to face with its barrel.

> "...Alright, that MIGHT work." Malal finally concedes. "But you're basically fucking with your own head, you know? Sure, you might not forget anything, but you're risking some serious brain damage with that. The kind of brain damage that makes you pee all over yourself while you twitch like a fucking Chihuahua. And it's going to hurt like a bitch--"

Yes, we agree on that. They are really strong.
All I am saying is, their job is not to protect the earth (although they themselves might believe that) but to serve the first Incubator in his designs.

Which leads me to believe that destroying the first might not be as catastrophic as some anons have suggested.
Nuking this place wouldn't necessarily mean the end of the world.

It's too late. I posted >>1278434 for this exact reason. We needed to use our obvious pissedness at Mami before the distraction as plausible deniability, and explain that we (and Vintage) saw her try to escape and tried to stop her. She was wounded badly, but she still had enough strength to make ribbon duplicates (this is verifiably true), and managed to be tricky enough to get to a pod and escape.

Strategically, we needed two things out of this part of the quest - we needed to be above suspicion from the 1st, because our Officio is precious, and we needed to get some Golden Weapons, because we need to progress the motherfucking plot god damn it. Both of these goals required us to stay on the Moon longer than we have.

Wrong again: there is a Homura resident in this timeline. Anything that comes from the AR is another person different from her. Considering that Chiaki is a Homura and this timeline Homura is the other, then there is no way that your theory is correct. This timeline Homura can't be one from the AR. The only explanation is that Hazuki is this timeline Homura or that there is a 3th Homura waiting to make her apparition

You take a split second to make the call. You and Mami will take seperate savior pods back to the surface. It makes sense - if they've already found out what's happened, and decide to simply blow up the first savior pod they see, they'll have to contend with the chances of blowing up an 'innocent' Officio Warmaster, rather than the perpetrator they've just decided the verdict of guilty on. Of course, that involves another gamble where they haven't yet figured out YOUR involvement in Mami's escape, but you never know...

+ You don't have to justify a decision like that to someone like me, Chiaki-san.+ Mami lifts her head to look at you again, the same tired smile on her face as you move to help her limp, ragged form into one of the pods. + Most of all to yourself. Like I said earlier...doing what you feel needs to be done. Making that decision that no one else can but you, and bearing the consequences of it. No matter if it hurts. ...Especially when it hurts. +

...

+ You're having us go on seperate pods because you want to make it look like I escaped, rather than you helping me escape. + She lets out a breathless chuckle here. + So that our Officio - our friends, our family - won't be implicated in this madness, and escape excommunication. Just like a Warmaster would. +

You look back at her, silent. Frozen. Horrified.

N-no, of course not, that wasn't--

+I told you. You don't need to justify it. To me or to yourself. I understand you completely. + It's here, then, that she reaches up with one hand to grip your shoulder - and you blink as she squeezes you there with a surprising amount of strength. Using you as support to slowly clamber out of your grasp and stand on her own two feet. "Which is why I think I can do this now, and hope you understand my intentions with the same clarity as I do yours."

"What?" Is the question you were posed to ask, just as Vintage herself turns towards you, puzzled and surprised at the sound of Mami's voice. Not just in the fact that she could talk with any capacity after her obvious torture and incarceration, but how...determined she sounded. "What are you--"

Ribbons. Thick, impossibly strong and smelling of honey, they sprang out of nowhere and wrapped around you with such prodigious, rattlesnake speed that you barely had time to gasp in surprise. Your arms immediately pinned to your sides, immobilizing you, preventing you from engaging your time stop even if you could manage to transform right then and there. The ends neatly tying themselves into a pretty bow at your front, secured with a brooch lock.

With barely a sigh of effort, her soul gem sparking as it works furiously to heal her injuries and provide her with as much strength as it could before burning itself out of magic - Mami stuffs you into one of the savior pods. The savior pod you were helping her into moments before.

All this, happening in the space of a single eyeblink.

You grunt and growl at this after getting over the initial jarring shock of it, trying to brute-force your way through your bonds with gritted teeth and harsh language. Cursing loudly and vehemently as Vintage herself is pushed into the same pod as you, her hands raised as she backs away from an ivory musket wielded with a rock-steady hand.

"MAMI!" You finally find it in yourself at to shout, to scream again, at the outrageous absurdity of it all. "WHAT THE - FUCK- ARE YOU DOING NOW?! LET ME GO, GET THIS FUCKING RIBBON OFF ME--! MAMI! PLEASE!!"

"You're making a grave mistake," you hear Vintage say to her, her voice cold. "She'll kill you. You don't have a hope of killing her, not in the state you're in."

"I know." Mami replies as she smiles at you - one last time - before flicking the wrist of her free hand to the side. Another musket manifesting in her grip, but this time wrought in demonic, devilish gold. Her eyes immediately flooded with sunless, fathomless black, leaving only the pupils amber.

"But all the same, I'd like to try again, this time with everything I've got." She nods at Vintage. "Please take care of Chiaki-san. Consider it my last request." Then, she turns to you. "Chiaki-san, thank you...and goodbye."

At this point it doesn't matter!

We're like a Wehrmacht soldier in Berlin in 1945 obsessing over how good his shooting skills are, how polished his boots are and how good his melee skills are when the Russian comes! No matter how much he excels, in the onslaught of history he'll be swept along regardless!

At this point, the smartest thing is to hold onto the people we love and care about, keep our principles in mind, do our best for our fellow man and do the best we can to ride this wave out until it all comes to an end - one way or another.

Do your best. Clutch whoever matters close. Grit your teeth and open your lips. God willing, you'll keep at least some of them. Let love be our watchword.

You know, I'm not even mad, I'm something beyond furious. We come to the moon base, willing to lay ourselves and our Officio on the line to rescue Mami. We bring everything we have, resolute in our conviction that having the entire First pay the blood price would be worth it if it would save Mami. All of this preparation, the sneaking about making deals with witches, plotting with the First's very equerry to betray her Warmaster, and we get sent home on our ass. All because Mami wants to be the big hero. All our efforts to save her are worth nothing. We could have sold what little humanity we had left in a deal with the devil to save Mami, but that comes out as little more than a pittance against her drive to play hero just one last time.

You know what? I'm not even suprised anymore.
It's exactly like Mami to try to be a hero and fucking up everything, leaving us to clean up the mess. Remember Kirika mission? It would have been a cakewalk if not for her "help".
That's what mumi actually is - a worse fuckup than us. And what's worse - she's the first one to betray us, but there will be more.

She will not only leave behind friends, and people who depend on her emotionally, but it would trigger a world wide witching out of the meguca populace. This is not about being a hero anymore, this is her being a selfish asshole with no regards for the well being of people SHE made.

Please take this time to consider your goals and the consequences of your actions.

Do we want to:
- Save Mami
- Recover her golden musket
- Grab golden weapons from first officio members
- Make sure our officio doesn't get purged

I think going full satan would result in us failing the last one.

The third one will be difficult considering how close people get to those weapons and the general strength of first members.

I'd say aim for the first and last goals, and failing the first at least aim for the second.

We are currently tied up inside an escape-pot that is about to start. I doubt we will be able to do anything but talk/pulse.

If we are not able to do move the minimum requirement has to be Mami pulsing us her memories. We can achieve this by talking.
If we are able to move I agree with your goals.

I think that only the last is within our current capabilities. I feel that right now we cannot save Mami as we are currently tied up in an escape pod. Nor can we recover her golden muskets when she dies. As such, they will fall into the hands of the 1st and will likely be handed over to one of their people. Reclaiming any golden weapons will be insanely difficult without transforming. But transforming reveals us to be the devil, and will violate the 4th objective.

Also, do we know what the 1st officio's rules are regarding golden weapon users from other officios? Do they kill then, leave them along, or do they try to recruit them?

"No! NO! YOU DON'T GET TO DO THAT! NOT TO ME!" You roar as you frantically struggle to get up, your heels grinding against the savior pod's bare metal grating floor. Every movement you make infuriatingly making the ribbon cinch tighter around you, to the point that it's almost crushing. "I CAME HERE TO RESCUE YOU! EVEN AFTER WHAT YOU DID - EVEN AFTER EVERYTHING YOU'VE DONE!! YOU DON'T GET TO PLAY A FUCKING MARTYR AFTER ALL OF THAT!"

"Chiaki--"

"WHAT ABOUT MIDORI? WHAT ABOUT ALL THE OTHER GIRLS WHO LOOK UP TO YOU AND FUCKING WORSHIP YOU? ARE YOU GOING TO LEAVE THEM ALL JUST TO PLAY HERO AGAIN?!" The brooch securing your bonds clicks heavily as you finally manage to pull yourself up to your feet. "WENDY! SAYAKA! KYOKO! EVERYONE--"

It's then that you feel it, and your shock of it is such that it chokes off the rest of your desperate tirade. A sudden stab of freezing, unnerving cold, one that cut right through your soul. A chilling fear that you've never felt before, not even with Pinky at her worst. Icy fingers curling around your heart, moments before tearing it out of your chest.

A shadow, manifesting at the very end of the corridor. Blurring into reality after briefly warping the world around them. A young woman, with long silver hair and cold, piercing eyes. Her form swaddled with the symbol of her rank: a black cape, fastened at the front with roman numeral I.

You shouldn't know her. You've never seen her before.

But as she takes a step towards you - then another, in a deliberate and unhurried pace - you immediately know who she is. Even if you yourself know that it's not possible, that there's no way--

That's...no, that's not...

Another step, then another. And then, you watch as she throws back her cape, revealing an oversized clawed gauntlet encasing her right arm and hand. Each finger terminating in a wicked scythe-blade that rivaled Sayaka's swords in length, and Kharn's own fleshmetal claws in brutality. Two fat twin-linked bolter barrels sprouted from the gauntlet's wrist and extended past the knuckles, their mouths wrought into daemon's roaring maws.

And it too, was gold. Shining, lustrous gold. The same gold that shone from Mami's flintlock rifle.

"Nameless One." The killer whispers with your voice. Smiling with your lips.

"We meet at last."

How do you react?

You wanted to move. You wanted to scream. You wanted to roar your name at her, to spit your REAL name into her face - the name that you've taken as your own, and not the name of the failure that you never chose to be a fucked-up copy of. Not the title that your other selves had bestowed upon you either, the otherwise mysterious-sounding moniker making the bile rise at the back of your throat as you'd grown to realize its true meaning from more than your fair share of convoluted visions, twisted prophecies and horrific half-remembered nightmares.

Your name is Chiaki Matsuda, you wanted to say. Not Akemi Homura, not the Nameless One.

Chiaki Matsuda.

But you couldn't. You couldn't even move. Even breathing felt like a monumental task, as your entire body locked up and froze at her gaze.

A gaze that is then quickly blocked by Mami's own face, fear staining her features - even as the influence of her Golden Weapon twisted them into something horrific.

She says your name one last time, just as the door of the savior pod slams shut and secures itself closed. The grimy transparent window allowing you to catch the final sight of Mami turning back to face your murderer, raising both rifles, right before an ever-expanding web of yellow ribbons begin to fill the corridor.

The pod blares its warning in your ear, above Vintage's own panicked cursing.

And as your entire world shakes, before dropping underneath you in a sudden, stomach-churning freefall...

+ This isn't about me, Chiaki. Not after every horrible thing I've done. +

+ After every single thing I've done wrong. +

+ This is me trying to make amends, the only way I knew how. +

+ This is me saving you from her. Because she knows who you are. +

+ Goodbye. I'm sorry about Midori. I'm sorry about Wendy. +

+ I'm sorry about everyo-- +

...

...

And then, a release of pressure. A sudden slackening of your tight, crushing restraints, one so sudden that along with the relief of being far away from - whoever that was - makes your knees buckle and sends you flat on your ass, on the savior pod's floor.

The ribbon - it's melted away into black, clotted blood. Smearing into your once-pristine costume.

Leaving behind an elegant golden mask, one shaped like the unfurled wings of a butterfly, and bearing the roman numeral XVIII.

There are no choices. Nothing but a straight line. The illusion comes afterwards, when you ask 'Why me?' and 'What if?' when you look back. You see the branches - like a pruned bonsai tree, or a forked lightning.

If you had done something differently, it wouldn't be you. It would be someone else looking back, asking a different set of questions.

NOW WHO'S GONNA MAKE US PANCAKES GODDAMMIT

VINTAGE YOU BETTER KNOW HOW TO MAKE SOME FUCKING PANCAKES

I think we're beyond doubly screwed at this point. I have a feeling our Officio's about to be purged.

I guess Hazuki was the assassin that Ira was talking about, which makes a lot of sense since all the other Homuras are under TTO's control.

That's another golden weapon in our possession as well so that brings it to six. Mami's gun is stuck on the moon for now, together with Hazuki's claw. That's at least 8 weapons we know the whereabouts of I guess.

Hazuki just stopped time, so she might have the zawarudo shield.

It's supposed to be an ability unique to us and her. We kind of are Homura herself, but the shield doesn't even act like ours, and time magic, being rare, is clearly related to Homura's very specific wish that Hazuki probably didn't make. So it looks like a very logical conclusion to make that the XXI lets the user stop time.

By the way, considering just who Hazuki is didn't seem to be set in stone before, and may have been more something the players came up with and Decu picked up, the initials being the same as Akemi Homura is pretty cool.

Too high up in the First to be a plant, I think. Ira was mentioning "pulling strings" and "bypassing the wards", but with warmaster wrapped around their finger they wouldn't even need that much.
Then there's Lewdxuria, which according to Ira was supposed to be on an "assignment". Whether what happened here was according to her plan we don't know.

>Didn't Wendy get 'taken away' by church people?
That's what we've been told. Either way, we should be able to get some info from the inhabitant.

It's slowly starting to make sense to me. Hazuki Amane is the real Shieldmaiden, bringer of the apocalypse. The Church of the Golden Land is devoted to Madokami/Pinky and opposed to all forms of Akemi Homura. That's why

Mami (being an important figure in the Church, hence involvement with Wendy) tried to slay us as soon as we grew wings. Midori changed her mind by simply being the Blessed Lady's chosen and Chiaki's girlfriend. Mami decided that she's been played like a damn fiddle and turned to Hazuki, leading to present day.
And what that would make us? We're the fall guy, a false satan that's meant to turn the entire magical world against her while the real devil sits comfortably on the Moon.

>> ☐ Anonymous (ID: 6WoSgdEt) 03/19/17(Sun)10:21:10 No.1283180

>>1283132
A problem with that is that the Golden Land, despite being probably the biggest cult of the Blessed Lady, is still a cult, thus somehow in disagreement with the Church. Beyond that, they are rather in favor of the Shieldmaiden, which is exactly why Ahriman did a thing like wiping out the church.

Mami being an important figure in the church is massive conjecture, but her position in that regard is also all kinds of weird, with Candeloro being an extremely obscure figure even among cultists.

I'm getting some facts about the cults here wrong, feel free to correct me when I fuck up.
I didn't mean "figure" as a religious figure, I meant important person. She was in close contact with Wendy's cult and probably had some influence over it. If Wendy's cult likes the Shieldmaiden, that makes even more sense, because Mami was close with the First as well. That's where Hazuki might have set her up against us. She was set up, but Midori made her realize the truth. You can't be a homusatan and have the Blessed Lady's chosen by your side.
I clearly remember Ahriman's cult being against the Shieldmaiden and trying to off us because of that. And they turned to be right, they just got the wrong homu.
At this point I'm starting to think that Homusatan (the slutty one with seven deadly sins) might have been a red herring all along.

Well that is both good and bad. I was hoping that it would allow us to easily change our appearance, so that we don't look like the fucking devil. This kinda kills the 9th.

Anyways, we need to start planning out who we can trust with golden weapons. Yes, this sounds fucking stupid but I wouldn't be suggesting this if the 1st weren't trying to neck us. At this point it's reasonable to assume that 9th is done for so we ought to move to damage reduction as we become the megucia equivalent of outer heaven. As far as I know of (so correct me if I'm wrong) there are only 3 people who may be able to withstand the effects of the golden weapons. Kharn (due to being the test dummy for our procedure and previous experience with the weapons), Kyouko (due to the robot arm) and Vintage (due to being tough enough to be the 2.I.C. to the 1st officio and a former warmaster of the 9th)

Also, we need Sakaya on our side. Though to say that this will be difficult is an understatement. No doubt 1st will be pushing the rhetoric that we went rouge, killed Mami and escaped. We have to return to the 9th to talk with Sayaka before she witches out.

Kyouko and Sayaka tend to go berserk when Homura Akemi is involved. Kharn is the Betrayer, that's why we should keep her as close as possible. Vintage doesn't seem to have much choice now, really. We may still grill Lewdxuria for info about this secret organization that helped us with Mami's rescue. We have to find Wendy, wherever she is.

Yeah, upon further review I miss-remembered why Kyouko got the new arm. It was to get a leg up WITHOUT having to use the golden weapons. That kinda takes Kyouko out of the running as we need fucking city-killers right now. People that are at least as powerful as us and/or Kharn and Sayaka.

On Kyouko and Sayaka, we kinda need them on side because if they aren't with us then they will smoke us. Both of them are CQC beasts, and while we have the golden weapons on our side, we just aren't built for CQC, I suppose we could try either the katana or the kiraka special (i.e. sniping them with an anti-tank gun), but as soon as they enter melee range we loose our advantages. On our side however, not only do we gain an emotional rock, we also gain a pair of very good MGs who we know and trust.

On Kharn, she is one of the few guaranteed allies we have. Our long friendship and similar conditions almost make us a perfect match. But the problems with her are that we don't know if she wants to return to the battlefield, what with being a mother and all. Secondly, we don't know how effective her treatment against the golden weapon effects is.

Vintage is a gamble. While she's practically stuck with us, and an insanely good fighter. She might not cut it against the golden weapon armed foes we'll probably be facing. And we have no guarantee that we can put her through the same treatment as us. QB at the moment is a giant fucking question mark. And he might just decide that it would be better to leave us out to die to save the 9th's collective neck.

Wendy is a massive question mark for me. But that's probably because I haven't read much into the write ups. I don't know her worth aside from her golden weapon -the knife-, and her relationship with us. If you can give me other reasons then I would be thankful.

Mami was killed like she was nothing, our minions would die just as quickly, golden weapon or not. We need to use them ourselves and face Hazuki on a somewhat even footing.

Remember, the whole point of collecting all golden weapons is that their effects stack. Using all twenty puts our strength in Pinky territory. Using the 6 or 7 we have will allow us to face Hazuki.

>On Kyouko and Sayaka, we kinda need them on side because if they aren't with us then they will smoke us.
On that I agree. The question is, whether they smoke us as our enemies by the order of the First, or do they stab us in the back when their hatred against Homura kicks in. Kyouko is actually the more level-headed one, but Sayaka will retire us the first moment we start looking like a bad guy. And we're already looking like a bad guy here.
>On Kharn, she is one of the few guaranteed allies we have.
I can't help but to be suspicious of her. That's why I want to trust her. She will either fuck everything up at the worst possible moment, or die saving us.
>But the problems with her are that we don't know if she wants to return to the battlefield, what with being a mother and all. Secondly, we don't know how effective her treatment against the golden weapon effects is.

How about this:

Malal's vision about us getting hunted by Kyouko because we killed Mami is still what we are headed towards, because the First will now accuse us of having killed Mami and nobody can know any better.

That said, the Ninth fighting for us is clearly off the table now, and Mami not actually really dying in the fight trying to put us down might throw Malal for a loop. Us handing over the Soul Gem was unpredictable, but what Midori did was probably not a very predicatable thing either.

We have Vintage on our side; the word of a former Warmaster should be fairly believable, at least within our own Officio. I'm also not sure how they're gonna spin that shit since Mami was already slated for execution. Why would we go out of our way to kill her?

Then again this is noir so everyone hates us by default I guess.

We should assume for now that the entire ninth is on a hitlist. First things to do now are to re-establish contact with Coobs, Sayaka and Kyouko.

Best-case scenario we manage to get our friends on our side.

Worst-case scenario they send everyone to hunt us down without a 5 second headstart.

Also as much as we might want to talk to the Mask spirit right away, we should probably stay alert for now because Ira's assassin still hasn't shown up.

Honestly something is fishy as hell here.

Luxuria being here is something TTO obviously knows about given her warning/communication with Chaki about it.

Amane being indisposed but then suddenly able to show up exactly where we are. Just in time to kill Mami even faster then the rest of her crew. Kind of like she was watching and waiting for us.

Also given how accurate the warning of TTO was about Mami betraying us is we need to worry about that.

>>1283789
> we should probably stay alert for now because Ira's assassin still hasn't shown up.

I'm not really sure if it even is an assassination attempt here. She mostly said she would make it difficult for Chaki to leave but that it wouldn't be anything major.

Luxuria showing up like this and this entire situation could very well get the entire first after us. Which is pretty fucking bad and something TTO could have planned out.

There is also the hint that Ira gave before that Luxuria is the most unstable of the 7 sins. Which we haven't seen any examples of yet. I wonder if it is possible the witch core she gave us is linked to a different witch?

It's probably just a spare body that he nevertheless needs to transport to talk to the First in private. We don't know quite what an Incubator's container is yet, (a huge alien database machine seems likely though), so unless there is a 'prime body' and that was it, he just lost a bit of his bodygoo and that's all.

Huh, I was sure we were gonna run facefirst into Nanoha since she left the room before the whole witch thing started.
This is rather more terrifying, though. I wonder just what Hazuki wished for. Did she have dreams, like Malal did? How much did she know from the start? Maybe she simply wished to be able to stop all of this, long ago.
She's the one who decides if the Ninth lives or dies, all evidence and justifications aside. I wonder if she'll ask for us, alone, to spare the rest.

>witch core of a different witch
gdi

Though now I wonder if licking a witch core does the same thing as licking a soul gem.

I guess there are a few possibilities here:
- Luxuria is loyal to TTO and Vintage is Taqiyyah-ing us
- Luxuria is loyal to TTO and is somehow misleading Vintage
- Luxuria has her own keikaku and her endgame requires her to help us - for now, at least.

I don't think Luxuria was working under TTO's orders in this instance, though. She was after all supposed to be far far away from the moon - such that she couldn't be called upon to screw with us. And if she really wanted she could have just killed us outright; considering how TTO really wants us gone from the picture, I don't see why she hasn't just offed us if this is the case.

Could someone jolt my memory regarding
>Luxuria being here is something TTO obviously knows about given her warning/communication with Chaki about it.

We should probably also ask Vintage about Luxuria while we still can.

Hazuki being 'indisposed' could have meant any number of things. She has Mary-God-Sue powers and prophetic dreams. Maybe she just batmanned that we would be here if things went to shit in the execution chamber.

Wouldn't put it past her to be in cahoots with TTO somehow though - considering how TTO has some vague ability that allows her to 'control' Homuras that aren't us. Then again if she did have that level of control, there would have been no point in Ira trying to pull strings.

I am more concerned about one things: Why didn't Hazuki acted before? If she knew who Chiaki is from the beginning, Why not act before? Why wait all this time?

Who said she knew from the beginning? Malal broke our shield to make it harder for TTO to find us - the same could apply to Hazuki. We would become one of the good guys with powerful friends by our side, making everything a cakewalk. But we did you-know-what and ultimately revealed ourselves. Hazuki probably can smell our heresy from miles away now.
What's curious is that Malal tried to name us Akemi Homura in Kharn's flashback. Wouldn't that defeat the whole purpose of keeping us low? Maybe she tried to make us into another Shieldmaiden, the good one from Madokami pantheon?

>> ☐ Anonymous (ID: dvP+Hgq3) 03/20/17(Mon)04:42:24 No.1287212

Nah. The story was not settled at that time. The idea of Homura=Devil-that-everyone-have-heard-about came later

But Malal was scheming almost from the beginning and Schieldmaiden started popping out around the same time as Homusatan I think. It fits Malal's plan - take a blank state homu (Nameless One), turn her into homu that was by Madoka's side (Shieldmaiden), not the one that did nothing wrong (Akuma Homura). But we wanted to know who we are, so now we are another Homusatan, we were supposed to be another Shieldmaiden. It also makes sense that going that route can make Sayaka and Kyouko angry since they're also good guys from that religion.
My knowledge of Madokami cults is spotty to be honest. I will check archives if I find some time.

>"If you proceed down on this path you've chosen for yourself, all the things that you hold dear will be taken away from you. Your friends will become your enemies, and your enemies will be the ones you turn to for aid. You will lose everything, piece by piece, person by person, until you are left with nothing but the road you're traveling. And of all the people who will abandon you, Tomoe Mami will be the one to betray you first."

TTO obviously knows what is going on if she is making prophecy about the consequences and accurately read that Mami would betray Chaki via letting herself die.

Given they were talking about pulling strings during the TTO interlude and given how Vintage seems to have contacts with Luxuria. I kind of assume the plan was something like Pulling strings to get Vintage to get Chaki in contact with them.

Then get Chaki to give them a signal to get into base. While Amane waits for Chaki to make a move on Mami. Once that happens Amane will boot herself there and see the two of them escaping and then use that as an excuse to have the 9th wiped out.

Because who would question the 1sts warmaster when she says she saw Chaki using a witch attack to save a traitor?

Add in Luxuria's comment that she wants to talk to Chaki afterwards to give her a bigger offer. Which she knows is going to be noticed by TTO. I theorize what they are trying to do is get Chaki to set the world off against her. Then give her an offer for support for aid in some endeavors elsewhere.

Which explains why she said the entire spiel about allies becoming foes and foes becoming allies.

All conjecture so far but it does seem to mostly add up.

>> ☐ Anonymous (ID: TkCEph9L) 03/20/17(Mon)13:31:16 No.1287682

>TTO obviously knows what is going on if she is making prophecy about the consequences and accurately read that Mami would betray Chaki via letting herself die.
A prophecy, quite a few megucas already done some prognostication related to us. By the way, those words were spoken during Akashic Realm mission, when we met TTO for the first time. And she said it to make us turn back.
>Given they were talking about pulling strings during the TTO interlude and given how Vintage seems to have contacts with Luxuria. I kind of assume the plan was something like Pulling strings to get Vintage to get Chaki in contact with them.
From the TTO thread
>As you can see, we're the only ones here. Everyone else - that's Avaritia, Acedia, Superbia, Luxuria and Gula - are out on errands.
>"Well, she's on her way to Ground Zero, it looks like. Luxuria sent in a report about a couple of hours ago saying that she spotted the Nameless One's thread intersecting with some really big players, and from the looks of it there's going to be some cutting here and there."
>...So, she's going to try and rescue the yellow one, is she?
>Again the back-and-forth stare between your two remaining subordinates. "Honestly, boss? We're not really sure. I mean, we did see the yellow one pretty much throw her to the wolves, right? Her and that other titty monster she was running around with?" Ira shrugs. "I think it's more likely she's just going to watch the execution over drinks and cigarettes, pretty much.
>Sounds like something she'd do, yeah?"
>No, you shake your head, and for the first time since you woke up you feel a smile curl your lips. She'll save the yellow one. She'll save Tomoe Mami. You're sure of that. She's stupid enough, foolhardy enough, and most of all naive enough to chance it.
>"And before you ask, boss, we don't have anyone near enough to make the jump in time, but if you think we have a window of opportunity here, I can pull a few strings if you like."
>Do it, you tell her. Someone should be there. Someone positioned to strike at the Nameless One in the ensuing chaos, to finish what you started. To be able to capitalize on that chance when it presents itself.
>"Then I'll make my own calls after this, then." Ira says, tapping at her smartphone's screen with a well-manicured finger. "I'm not promising anything major since it's a bit short notice and bypassing the wards in Ground Zero can be a bit tricky, but I can at least guarantee the Nameless One won't exactly have a safe trip both ways."
Doesn't look like Ira even knew that Lewdxuria was on the Moon. And Lewdxuria can prognosticate (maybe she's the one that made prophecy about Mami's betrayal). Their plan seems to be just waiting at the right moment and kill us.

You open your eyes, and you curse softly as you discover that you fell asleep in your costume again.

The dimly-lit, hollow loneliness of your office greeting you as you rise from a sleep so light and insignificant it felt as if you never slept at all. That you only merely blinked.

You would have cared, some time ago. You'd have been incensed at yourself for being so lazy. Being so careless. Being so lax with your appearance and how people saw you. At how awful of an example you're setting for your juniors and peers.

"Warmaster."

But not right now.

Not with so many things to do.

"Warmaster?"

Not with everything going to shit, and nearly two thousand magical girls looking to you for guidance. For safety. For leadership.

You let out a sigh before pressing the heels of your gloved hands into your eyes, trying to rub the sleep out of them.

"Warmaster, I apologize if this is a bad time, but it's very urgent."

If only things didn't happen the way they did.

If only she didn't screw things up.

If only she took you WITH her when she left, then maybe...

"Warmaster, please, the Incubator is--"

How do you respond?

[]"I told you. It's 'Acting' Warmaster."
[]"Let him wait. I'll be out in a little while."
[]Stay silent and wait for her to get the hint. You're not in the mood.

"Karasawa, for the last fucking time." You loudly admonish the person beyond your office door. "It's 'Acting' Warmaster. Acting. ACTING. Do I have to have it engraved into a plaque and hammered onto the door? How many times do I have to remind you?"

Silence, an uneasy one. Before the Callidus Rank Leader replies, somewhat petulantly: "But the Incubator said--"

"I know what he said, Karasawa. I was there." You let out the breath you'd been holding, the breath that would have fueled another yelled lecture through your office door. "But until I say otherwise, address me as Acting Warmaster. Tell the others to do the same."

Silence, again.

"...Very well, Acting Warmaster. I hear and obey."

"Thank you. Now, what the hell does Kyuubey want?"

Hesitation, before a curse murmured underneath a breath. "Ah, just...he'd like you to meet him in his office as soon as possible, that's all. I believe the...First Warmaster is awaiting your pleasure."

Great. Just what you needed. Another meeting with Miss Perfect. Another chance for her to sneer at you while you clamp down the unexplicable, uncontrollable rage you feel each time you set eyes on her.

Another round of veiled threats, backhanded insults, and blatant interrogation.

"Tell Kyuubey I'll be right there." You reply curtly, quickly. "I just need to finish things up here."

"Very well, Warmaster."

"Acting--"

"Yes, yes. Acting Warmaster." Then, silence. Footsteps, receding as their owner struts hurriedly down the corridor.

You let out another sigh.

Because you promised Kyoko.

You promised her you wouldn't believe the news reports, or Kyuubey's own stilted words in his mass debriefing a few weeks after...the incident.

You promised her you wouldn't breathe the same foul rumors everyone was hissing in the Ninth Officio's halls.

That Chiaki Matsuda, Warmaster of the Ninth Officio, had done something infinitely worse than turning into the benighted, eldritch monstrosity that magical girls turned to if they weren't careful.

She didn't witch out. Worse than that.

Betrayal. Attempted murder of the First Warmaster. Unprovoked. Unguarded. Summoned there only for a cordial meeting.

Grievous, but not critical injuries to the First. Maintenance personnel deaths in the dozens. Half the Lunar Base devastated. The Ninth will be picking up the bill for sure.

But worst of all, even more heinous than that, she--

You grit your teeth and close your eyes, blocking out the thought. Killing it before you could finish it.

Not now. Just not now. Anything but that.

You forced yourself to be there at her funeral just so you could stop dwelling on it long enough to be functional, for fuck's sake.

You blearily run your gloved hands across your eyes. Once, twice. Erading any trace of tears that shouldn't have been there in the first place.

You're fine. Everything is fine.

And now you have a meeting to attend.

You stand up from the seat that isn't yours, move around the office that you're borrowing, and glare at the Warmaster cap and greatcoat that you have no business wearing.

A new set. Freshly made. Not hers. Not Murderface's.

It doesn't even have an emblem yet.

You blink once, then twice at the Warmaster cap and greatcoat, both hanging from the rack beside the door leading out of your office.

The symbols of office of a Warmaster - well, if you were really honest, just A symbol. The greatcoat wasn't that important, it simply completed the look. The cap was everything, however. Without it you were just a dildo with an oversized black coat hanging from your shoulders.

After what seems like an eternity, you reach out with your gloved hands and take the greatcoat and cap off their hooks. Your own white cape billowing out briefly before taking it self out of reality with a snap.

This wasn't supposed to happen like this, you find yourself thinking miserably as you shrugged the greatcoat on, the stiff material itchy and uncomfortable on your bare shoulders.

It should have been grander. Or at the very least, a lot less depressing.

Yes, you dreamed about being Warmaster. That was your plan after all, wasn't it? Fighting tooth and nail and then some just to get to Rank Leader. Then, after Kirika or Mami got Warmaster, you'd let them enjoy it for a year or so before formally challenging them for the position. You were absolutely, one-hundred-percent sure that it would be one or the other.

Until she came along. Until she got the job.

She made you Equerry, and Kyoko an aide. You weren't expecting that. You certainly weren't in any mood to even think of the possibility then - you had been all but fuming at the mouth that she got it. The one person who couldn't be more unqualified for the role.

But she did that, in a rare streak of...well, you'd hesitate to call it brilliance. More like consideration, really. Or common sense.

And you thought you could live with it. Hell, you actually did. And for a while you thought it was all going to work out.

But now...

You let your thought go unfinished as you catch a glimpse of yourself in the mirror, Warmaster cap in hand. Your blue hair's straight, immaculate, brushed. Your fortissimo hairpin gleaming, polished. You look like you've just gotten out of the shower, instead of having spent the last week barely managing to get any sleep.

Well, except for the dark rings around your eyes, anyway.

"Kaneda-san, why did you have to go?" You hear yourself murmuring. "What do I do?"

Like you always do behind closed doors, when you're completely at a loss.

Almost like praying in desperate futility.

You look at yourself for a moment longer, before smoothing down your hair with one gloved hand and then pulling on the cap with the other. Carefully lowering the brim around your head, inch by inch, to ensure a symmetric fit all around.

And then you feel it. Someone behind you, just beyond your periphery. Someone wearing a pink ribbon.

[]Turn around, see who it is.
[]"Get the fuck out of my office."
[]Ignore it and leave. Probably just fatigue.

True, that'd be fun.

One flaw with taking the whole quest in one go is that when you've read all the way you can tell the "making the plot as we go along" beginning part and all the little ret-cons. It takes a while until the story gets some depth and the shadowruns begin in full.

You turn around, slowly. Knowing full well that despite your own honed instincts screaming at you that someone is indeed behind you - you didn't hear the door open. You didn't feel anyone enter your office. And it's impossible that they could have snuck in while you were asleep - you're a light sleeper as it is. Anyone even attempting to, even the shrewdest and most skilled Callidus - would have had a hard time trying to get in. Not with you in this kind of mental state.

No one should be there, is what you're getting at. There should be no one in this office but you.

You turn around and look.

...

No one. Just like you said. Just like you knew.

But...

You step forward and lean down briefly to pick something up off the polished marble floor.

A length of pink silk ribbon. Just enough to tie a decent ponytail off.

What? Who...? Murderface wore her hair in a ponytail for a while, sure, but she never used a pink ribbon. She usually just used a rubber band, or that fancy black tie Mami gave her.

You look around briefly, then up at the ceiling. Trying to figure out where this mysterious ribbon could have fallen from, or something.

Nothing. Not even a hint of pink anywhere. Just the ribbon. And you know Murderface never got into the whole vanity thing either, so there's no reason for her to keep spares like this lying around.

...Oddly, you feel somewhat a bit more relaxed while holding it. It's not overt, but you certainly feel a bit calmer with it in your hands.

What do you do?

[]Leave the ribbon here.

You decide to keep it with you for now. You can ask Kyuubey about it later, after the meeting. If even he doesn't know anything about it, you can just put it back in your office where you found it, and that'd be that.

Just as you make to put it in your inventory, though, something stops you. You're not quite sure what it is, but...just holding it in your hand, seeing its bright and cheerful color, it's...it feels like something from a memory. One you've forgotten all this time. A pleasant one, a memory you'd probably give anything to remember again.

You look back down on the ribbon, and after a moment, decide to tie it around your wrist in a neat and tidy bracelet. Your hair's much too short for an impromptu ponytail, anyway, so you'll have to make do. And it's not too loud so as to attract too much attention - if anything, it's just a tasteful accent among the blues and whites of your costume. Oh, and the overpowering black of the greatcoat and cap, of course.

With that done, you leave your office - Murderface's office - and make for the Incubator's Inner Sanctum. Hitting your usual hurried stride with the first step you take, your greatcoat billowing out behind you where your cape originally would have. Ignoring the respectful bows and salutes coming your way, because you know it as well as they do that while it is standard protocol, it's not needed in your case.

However, you do find yourself stopping to correct whoever greets you with just 'Warmaster'.

Because you promised. And you're not going to let them forget.

No matter what Kyuubey had said. No matter what the First rammed down your throat and everyone else's.

You're just Acting Warmaster. The Warmaster post itself has not yet been vacated.

Murderface isn't dead. Not yet.

Kyoko believes she isn't, and that's good enough for you.

...

All told, it takes you the better part of ten minutes to get to Kyuubey's Inner Sanctum. You blithely ignore the empty desk by the entrance - the desk that Mami herself once manned, a couple of lifetimes ago - and let yourself into the pristine, all-white office that the Ninth Incubator called home.

And standing there, deep in a conversation with your Incubator, is none other than the Warmaster of the First. Hazuki Amane. Her long silver hair unbound, spreading outward like angel's wings.

Her right hand and arm encased in a monstrously oversized and brutal lightning claw, its bladed scythe-fingers bereft of killing lightning but still moving in deadly, articulated grace. Tiny servomotors growling and purring with every miniscule gesticulation as its owner used it, along with her bare hand, to gesture while conversing with your Incubator.

And it's here that she sees you. Sensing your arrival.

She smiles. A saintly smile. Polite. Beatific, even. Almost disarming.

You could have fallen in love with it yourself, just like many had. But all you feel is a white-hot rage that took you a considerable amount of self-restraint to keep back.

"Ah, Miss Sayaka! Good morning, we were just talking about you." She calls you and waves you over with her normal hand, her voice smooth and calming, relaxing. Similar to Mami's own warm, honeyed tones, but where the blonde inspired comfort and safety, Hazuki exuded a polite but determined confidence. Like...like she was the protagonist of some game, or something, and anything she said you could easily believe. And what's worse, she knew it. She knew how much of a big deal she was. "Right, Kyuubey?"

"Yes. Yes, of course." Your Incubator clears its tiny little throat - probably choking on the lies that the bitch had been feeding him. It's here that he blinks up at you as you approach. "...Have you been getting enough sleep, Miki Sayaka? You look like you've died and forgot to lie down."

How do you respond?

[]Play along. Smile grudgingly. "A few sleepless nights. I'll be fine."

Yes, but isn't it weird to actually show that concern in front of the 1st? He may have a soft spot for his MG, but I don't think it's ok to expose it that much. He must 'get on with the program' until he has that much of an upper hand to act as if he doesn't care what other incubators think of him. Even if he is insane, he's not stupid, either that or he has some grand keikaku.

You're usually pretty good with meetings. While it would take a singularly sadistic creature to actually enjoy the fruitless act of getting inside a room to share input and opinions that could easily be exchanged through email, or phone calls, or even through just a simple lunch - you didn't treat meetings with the same distaste that many in your rank did.

It was a vital and professional exchange of important and pertinent information, and you did your best to be...agreeable. You did your homework, you brought all the paperwork needed from you - and more often than not, for other people as well, when they invariably forgot - and you collaborated. You volunteered. You had the idea that since you all had to suffer a meeting together, the least you could do was to speed things up by playing along.

Now, though--

"Evidently not." You just barely avoid spitting this out, managing to get by with a curt monotone reply. Making you inwardly wince at how you sounded so much like...her. "Let's get this meeting started, shall we?"

Both Kyuubey and Hazuki blinks at that, before the former smiles again. "Ah, yes, of course. Well, this isn't really a formal meeting as such, just--"

"--Amane Hazuki simply wanted to ask about our progress with our assigned duties," Kyuubey cuts in, just before you could react. He must have seen you about to snap. "About our search for the missing materiel and the prime suspect."

You find yourself having quite a bit of difficulty reining in your already-strained patience and temper as you hear those words. Innocent-sounding terms to mask what this silver-haired bitch is really after, to the point that she's constantly holding these fucking meetings in the first place. Twice every week, without fail. Ever since the funeral.

Missing materiel. Prime Suspect.

Just say it outright, you fucking mutant cat, you find yourself thinking as you grit your teeth in inward frustration.

She wants to know where the Golden Weapons are.

And if you've found Mami's murderer yet.

How do you respond?

[]Be polite, and give her the update she wants. Anything to get this meeting done.
[]Be standoffish. You're trying to keep a grieving Officio together. This assignment is not your top priority at the moment.
[]Be evasive. Let Kyuubey answer it.

You decide to be evasive. Normally you'd have given her the update she wanted - and for the first couple of times that she'd called you into her personal audience, you did. Your wounds still fresh from everything that's happened thus far, it was still hard not to be bowled over by the sheer presence and raw power of personality that the First Warmaster exuded. Not to mention all the tales and stories that you've heard of her and her Officio - feats of strength and power that rivalled even the tallest tales of infamy and bloodshed that they spun about Kharn, or any other Warmaster.

But not even that could really gloss over the fact that your Officio had suffered a terrible blow, one hard enough to send it reeling. It wasn't a matter of finances, or numbers, or anything like that. Your Officio has lost one of its key members, someone who'd kept things together more than anyone else realized - or willing to admit. It was cliche to admit it, but with how everyone seemed to shut or break down at the news - some sobbing into their hands or loudly bursting into tears, as well as even outright fainting - the Officio had lost its heart the moment it was confirmed that Tomoe Mami was dead.

Murdered, the First explained in one of its rare, inter-Officio broadcasts - by none other than her own Warmaster.

By Chiaki Matsuda herself.

"Our progress?" You echo, looking directly at Kyuubey. "My apologies, Miss Amane, but as it was I've been busy trying to keep the Officio together. Even if it's been a couple of months, our staff is still in the process of recovering from the tragedy."

"Oh, of course. I didn't mean to seem insensitive as to imply otherwise. We - I - understand what you're going through. The entire First, as well as the rest of the Officios, stand in sympathy to the Ninth and its Warmaster." She gestures towards you with her massive lightning claw, and it takes you a monumental force of will not to recognize it as the threatening gesture as it is and react accordingly. By which lunging forward and smashing your elbow into her face.

Even then, though, not all your reflexes can be suppressed. "Acting Warmaster."

This makes her blink. "I'm sorry?"

"Acting Warmaster, Miss Amane." You allow yourself to breathe. "The position of Warmaster is not officially vacated yet. Until the current Warmaster herself has been retrieved, questioned, and stripped of her rank, I am only Acting Warmaster."

This furrows her brow. "But she--"

"Until she is retrieved, questioned, and stripped of her rank, I am only Acting Warmaster." You repeat stiffly, your shoulders squared.

Both of you glare at each other in silence, your determined blue eyes meeting surprised azure ones.

"I apologise for Sayaka Miki." Kyuubey is the first to break the silence here. "She is quite the stickler for rules. Rest assured this does not signify any measure of skepticism or disbelief of the First's judgment and reporting of recent events." He turns to look at you, a silently-questioning gaze in his perfectly-circular ruby eyes.

You ignore it, and keep your gaze leveled at Hazuki. Matching her stare for stare.

"...Yes. Of course. Rules must be abided by, after all." She nods after a moment, her silver hair cascading down her shoulders and back in luxurious waves in that slight movement.

"As for our progress with those duties, I regret to inform you that we have yet to gain any sort of noteworthy breakthrough in either one since our last meeting. Our efforts continue unabated, however." Kyuubey ends his brief report by facing Hazuki as well. "And like before, we will notify you as soon as we do find anything of note to report."

"I see." Hazuki replies softly, carefully. Seemingly pensive as she continues to stare at you. "And you're sure you've found not a single trace of Matsuda? Or any of the Golden Weapons?"

Kyuubey shakes his head. "We have multiple leads, but most of them are turning up cold. The same goes for the Golden Weapons. We believe she took all of them with her before she departed for the Lunar Base."

"Yes, you did say that." Again with that stupid lightning claw. Who the hell brings something like that to a meeting, anyway? Sure, you bring Blueberry Cheesecake Brownie every so often, but it's not like you pull it out and wave it around while you're in a fucking meeting. "Are you sure that she didn't hand them off to anyone else, though? Or someone could have taken them from her before her visit?"

Both you and Kyuubey look at each other. After a moment, he answers for you. "No, I don't believe so. I was with her the entire time during our visit. Before she went berserk. She did not have any contact with anyone else."

Murderface going berserk. Yeah, right. You'd sooner see her go sober.

"I see." Hazuki repeats, before sighing. "It's my turn to apologize. I know my constant pestering about this mustn't be helping, but it's important that we know right away if anything is found. These Golden Weapons are...they're very dangerous. They need to be recovered as soon as possible, and placed in the custody of the First. Them ending up in anybody else's hands - who knows what kind of calamity we'll be dealing with next."

"Agreed." Kyuubey nods again. "We will double our efforts."

"Thank you." Again with the smile, before she turns towards you. "Ah, Just another thing before I get out of your hair. Miss Sayaka, I remember hearing something about you having sparred with the prime suspect--"

"Chiaki Matsuda." You reply, trying to stop yourself from imagining breaking her spine over your knee.

You wince at the memory of that particular sparring match. It didn't start out to be one - you just wanted to train her a bit, that's all. Teach her something else to do rather than just getting in someone's face and pumping them full of lead. You weren't expecting things to turn out the way they did.

Although, you'll be the first to agree that you thought about the possibility the moment both of you stepped onto the training mat together. To have that one perfect chance of being able to just make her feel every single molecule of rage, of frustration, of bloody-minded hate that you harbored for her. To be able to vent it out in a way that wouldn't have you being hunted down to the ends of the earth for the murder of your own Warmaster, or at the very least a stiff fine and a demotion for the attempt. Thanks to those stupid axes that you were training her in the use of, you did get that chance - and it would have been perfect, injuries and all, if she didn't knock you out cold at the very end.

You shake your head briefly before finally responding to Hazuki. Telling her that she'd have to be a bit more specific, as Murderface was remarkable in her own right. Eccentric wasn't quite the word you'd use, but there had always been something strange about her. Something...wrong, somehow, like she didn't belong.

"She didn't belong?" Hazuki echoes. "Ah, such as not gelling with the Officio in some way, a tendency to be alone, something like that...?"

"No? Well, yes, kind of." You blink as you find yourself expounding upon your answer. "But that's pretty common, isn't it? Especially when Vindicares are concerned. No, it was more like she didn't belong...anywhere." Your eyes widen slightly at this, as if giving voice to your thoughts made them all the more real. "Like she wasn't supposed to be here at all."

...Well, of course. A nasty voice inside you speaks. You found her in a Witch Barrier, after all. A Magical Girl, contracted to no one, half-dead yet asleep in a nightmarish world full of flesh-eating Witches.

Something you probably shouldn't be spilling about her. Not at the moment, anyway.

"I see." The Warmaster of the First nods. "Do you think that would explain her--"

"No," You cut in quickly. "Murderf--I mean, Matsuda was weird, sure. It always felt like she was haunted by something. But nothing about her gave me the impression that she would do anything like you say she did."

"I concur. Chiaki Matsuda had her own share of faults and quirks, but nothing that could have clued us in to the part she played in this terrible tragedy."

"...Mmm. I see. Thank you for your honesty." Hazuki replies a moment later, seemingly having come to a decision of her own. "Very well, that will be all. Miss Sayaka, Kyuubey, thank you for indulging me yet again. Hopefully, we can all get to the bottom of what happened, find what we need to find, and move on."

It's here that you allow yourself to breathe just a bit more freely. Good, she's about to leave. You won't have to tolerate another moment being in the same room with her. With any luck, you won't have to suffer this again for another week, at least--

"You don't have to look that disappointed," You hear Hazuki say mildly, and you blink as you realize that you might have given away a bit more than you intended. You watch her smile at your own awkward apology. "Don't worry, Miss Sayaka. I know how uncomfortable this is, really. I wish we could have met before all this happened. Maybe things would have turned out a bit better between our Officios instead of this...formal coldness."

...Yeah. Maybe.

She's a bit astute than you thought. You'll have to watch out a bit more for this one.

"Anyway, I'll be going. But before that, I was asked to pass a message from our Eversor Rank Leader, Satsuki Kiryuin-san. She said she'd like to spar with you sometime, if that's something you're up for." She smiles. "What should I tell her?'

Now you can't help but wear your emotions on your face, here - mainly that of pure shock and surprise. Satsuki Kiryuin wants to spare with YOU? The former High Marshal of the Black Templars and Warmaster of the Second?

The same person even Kirika herself was skittish about fighting? Hell, not even Kharn tried, and she was always up for a fight.

But maybe...

How do you respond?

[]Accept politely. It would be an honor to spar the Eversor Rank Leader of the First.
[]Gently refuse. You've got more things to do than to take a trip to the Moon and get your ass handed to you.
[]Answer confidently. "Tell Kiryuin to name the time and place."

You force a smile of your own, before shaking your head in gentle refusal. Sparring would have certainly been welcome, especially with a clearly superior opponent. In fact, it was one of the things Kirika had always insisted on. 'Always look for opportunities to get your ass handed to you,' she'd always lecture during her more serious, lucid moments. 'It's the only way to get better. Otherwise you're just wasting time and fucking around.'

But no. As flattered as you are that Kiryuin Satsuki even knows your existence and is actually throwing down the gauntlet - you don't have the time to spare for it. You have an Officio to keep running. Maybe some other time, you tell Hazuki.

"Oh?" The First Warmaster's smile falters a bit. "Well, I'm sure she'll be disappointed to hear that. But it's perfectly understandable, of course. Just make sure to take some time for yourself, Miss Sayaka. A Warmaster - acting or not - always has something that needs to be done, but she doesn't have to be busy all the time."

With that she steps back, giving you a small and cheerful wave with her lightning claw - before disappearing. No sudden charge of static electricity or a peal of thunder, nor the light-bending vanishing act of Callidus - just a disappearance, like a ghost briefly manifesting before fading away before you could even notice. As if she never were.

"..." Both you and Kyuubey stare in silence at where the Warmaster of the First had just been a few moments ago. A moment later, your Incubator lets out a sigh, before walking back to his array of computers. One of the LCD monitors still conspiciously dead, its flat screen shattered right down the middle.

"My apologies for making you suffer another one of these meetings, Miki Sayaka." Your Incubator finally says after a while. "I was hoping I could give her the answers she needed by myself, but she was adamant to speak to you for some reason. Why, I have absolutely no idea."

It's fine, you tell Kyuubey as you step up behind him, respectfully veering your eyes away from his screens. It's impolite to shoulder-surf, after all. Acting Warmaster duties and all that.

"Yes, well, I can clearly see you're trying your best to acclimatize in such short notice, and I'm grateful for that." He doesn't look at you as he says this. "Just as I'm grateful that you managed from letting your frustrations get to you during that meeting."

It would have been unseemly otherwise. There wasn't any reason to tick off the First any further than they already were with the Ninth, anyway.

"True. In any case, don't let me detain you, Miki Sayaka."

There's your cue to leave.

You find yourself looking down at the ribbon tied around your wrist. Its comforting pressure reminding you of its presence.

[]Ask him about what happened. What really happened up there.
[]"Murderface...she didn't really kill Mami, did she? That's crazy, right?"
[]Leave. You have work to do.

You can't help it. You need to know. You need to ask. There's no going around it.

"Murderface." You manage to say the name without stuttering, even with your throat suddenly dry. "There's no way she could have killed Mami. There's no way."

Silence.

"Not even while under the influence of those...things she took with her. It's impossible. No one loved Mami more than Murderface did."

"..."

"She didn't kill Mami. Right, Kyuubey?" You step forward, closer to the Incubator that you've served loyally for all this time, who you've bled and fought for without question. Without regret or remorse. "I need to know. Murderface couldn't have--"

"I don't know what happened, Miki Sayaka." Kyuubey's reply is short, tense. Tight. "Everything happened much too quickly for me to truly discern what was happening." He shakes his head. "As much as I am loathe to admit, I am forced to accept the First's input in this. For now, we must go with what they're telling us. We can realign what we know after we find Matsuda."

...That's it, then? That's all he's telling you?

"Yes, in fact. To your duties, Acting Warmaster Miki Sayaka. I'm sure you're needed elsewhere."

"..."

You salute him in silence before making to leave. Your shoulders squared, your stride as hurried as it ever was.

Before you could walk through the doors, though--

+ No. + Your Incubator's voice intones in your mind, slotting in neatly between your thoughts. + I don't think for a second that Matsuda could have murdered Tomoe Mami, much less harm her. +

You stop in your tracks and whirl around to face Kyuubey, pulsing your own pained thoughts at him, ragged and angry and raw and bleeding. + Then, WHY? Why the FUCK we have to play through this fucking charade?! +

Silence, before he replies. When he does, you're struck with a dread that stops you cold, like a bucket of ice emptied over your head.

+ The First is planning something. Not just its Warmaster, but its entire Officio, along with its Incubator. What it is, I'm not sure yet, but I will find out. +

It takes you several moments to absorb that. It takes you a bit more to recover and actually pulse back a reply.
+...Then, was Mami...?+

+ I suspect she was a part of their plan. One they didn't account for, just like with Matsuda. Whether they arranged for her death, or orchestrated events to play out in this manner, I don't know, either.+ It's here that Kyuubey turns from his seat to look directly at you. + But you have my word that we will discover the truth and respond accordingly. But we need to find her first. Her and the Golden Weapons she carried with her.+

Huh, within a couple weeks, I see both JQOP and you come back. What a time to be checking out /qst/ instead of just binging the archives.

Its impressive to see some of those quests that made their mark on /tg/ and 1d4chan, and to see they are still going today. Its like bearing witness to living legends of times since past. I personally haven't read MGNQ yet, but its been on my ever growing list of classics to check out. One of the highly recommended ones. Mind giving me a run down if you don't mind?

I haven't checked recently, but I'm still hoping Deme/Planefag returns some day soon to give us more of his awesome writing.

Thing is MGNQ is hilariously complicated to explain for how long it is, the long and the short of it is basically the events after the latest madoka movie, but gone utterly fucking bonkers, main character is a hardboiled alcoholic magical girl with a penchant for murdering the shit out of things. It's a blast, just read it from the beginning, alot of here have been here on this ride from the very first thread and there's a good reason why this is basically one of the classical must read of quests.

But I have to ask...

How can we fix /qst/ in your mind? Being the last of the grand QMs to fight against the changes, your word would be heeded... presumably.

If you were to utter any word, any phrase, any statement to make /qst/ great [redacted], then you shouldn't hide it.
Maybe... somewhere... someone... will hear the outcry of the moonrabbit who has fallen.

And on another note, Still on page 2. The possibility to ride this horse to death is there. Unless it has to do with formating.

Alas, we heard your call, and came as the pilgrim we are, to hear the final chapter... maybe final chapter.

And good thing you didn't went to Akun, holy shit are the anons horrible there.

Archived

You are a Magical Girl, and you're a million miles away from home.

Well, probably not a million. Maybe. It feels like it, though.

It's been the farthest away from home that you've ever been in a while.

But it's fine. You're fine. You can deal with it.

You don't even feel that homesick.

You meant what you said. You promised everyone back home you would.

Misaka. Yuma. Kyuubey, Rea, Midorin, Kumatora, Sayaka...

You even promised Mami. After a lot of yelling, and crying, and sobbing at the sight of her gravestone. After Sayaka did her best to calm you down, holding you tight, muffling your tears so that you didn't make a scene. That you didn't make it any worse for the rest of the Officio mourning her death.

You'll find her, you promised them all.

You'll find Murderface. You'll find your best friend, no matter where she ended up or got herself into this time.

After that, you'll...well, you're not really sure what you'll do. Maybe give her a hug or something? Maybe. Murderface always looked like she needed a hug. Even more when she woke up that one time and found herself with wings and shit. Oh, and Midorin being comatose an' all, that's probably why.

But yeah, you'll find her. And you'll bring her back to Mitakihara, so everything can get straightened out.

Because you're sure as hell not buying what the First is selling.

You may be gullible as all hell, and you're not the smartest knife in the drawer - you'll be the first to admit that - but even you can tell when someone's pulling your leg.

Murderface didn't kill Tomoe Mami. It's just impossible. It just can't happen.

She'd sooner eat a gun first, or give up pancakes outright.

Your best friend isn't that crazy.

You are a Magical Girl, and your name is Kyoko Sakura. Acting Eversor Rank Leader of the Ninth Officio Assassinorum and Aide to the Acting Warmaster, Sayaka Miki.

On secret loan to the Second Officio Assassinorum, to ask for their assistance in trying to find Chiaki "Murderface" Matsuda.

Wait, hang on. If Sayaka's the acting Warmaster now, does that mean you're the acting Equerry, or something...? How does that really work?

...Well, probably not, since you're here in England. Somewhere where the...huge castles are, you think?

At least that's where you figured you were being flown to. You weren't sure what the name of the airport was, either - you were just ushered off the plane and then directly shuffled into a black armored car with a very...intimidating-looking symbol engraved on the side doors. Like one of those old-fashioned crosses, black and outlined in gold, with a skull at the very center.

You were expecting someone inside the car, someone mysterious to smile patronizingly at you and dump exposition on your lap as you were ferried around. You know, like in movies? But no, no one was there. No one to snicker or sneer at you as you tried your best to speak straight English, something you usually left to Sayaka to handle - on account of you being a complete idiot when it comes to the damned language, and your accent being a bit on the impenetrable side.

The driver seemed polite enough, and you tried to strike up a conversation with him once you got into the car, but either he was completely ignoring you or he didn't understand a lick of what you were trying to say. Not even when you tried to crack a joke in English. That usually worked! Most of the time!

You let out a sigh and idly lift your eyepatch up to scratch at the empty patch of skin underneath, where your eye should be. It's been itching a lot lately these past few weeks. Or maybe it's stress from everything. You don't know. You asked Sayaka about it just before you left, but she only said to wash carefully behind your eyepatch every day and not to poke at it much.

What do you do? You're getting lonely.

You decide to kill some time by going through the photos you've got stored in your phone. While also sneaking out one of the snacks you've stuffed into your carry-on. The driver won't mind if you eat in the car, right? ...Well, you'll try not to make a mess, at least. You know how Sayaka gets angry when you make a mess in other people's cars.

And so, with a slightly-crumpled box of Pocky pulled open on your lap, with one of its two packets ripped open to reveal its chocolate-coated bounty of thin pretzel sticks, you begin looking through your collection of old photos. Because obviously you don't have a Wi-Fi signal you can mooch off from right now, and your phone isn't registering the network here.

If there is even a network signal you can get out here in the...wherever you are, you think to yourself as you glance out the window, noting the rather empty-looking fields of green stretching out on either side of you, broken from time to time with the occasional sheep or rustic-looking village.

Now, about those photos...huh? Why are they suddenly organized into seperate folders all of a sudden? Look, it's even organized by whoever's on the pictures and where it's taken! That's crazy! You don't even keep your message or email organized like this, you just let them pile up! As for your photos, you simply snapped away without even caring! What's happened here, did you get hacked or something--

Oh. Oh, wait. That's right, Sayaka borrows your phone from time to time, especially when she forgets hers at home or when its battery goes flat. You're not one to use your phone all that much so yours usually just stays idle in your pocket, or inventory - until you take it out when she's calling you, or you take pictures just like every other dildo.

Anyway, she must have organized them for you. That's pretty nice of her, but she didn't have to do that!

You find yourself smiling at the memory of your most favorite person in the world, before scrolling down on the folder list. Absently plucking a stick of Pocky from its packet and nibbling carefully at it.

Which folder should you look through first?

You open up the folder named Housewarming Party first. You're pretty familiar with what's in this one - it's the pictures you took with everyone at Murderface's new apartment, right after her promotion to Warmaster. This was still some time before her rank was officially ratified with the ceremony and everything, but even then everyone was already treating her like a big shot.

You couldn't be happier for her then, really. Sure, you remember being somewhat disappointed that Sayaka didn't make the cut - the both of you even went to as many shrines as you can all over Japan to try and pray for her name to come up - but even with that, you couldn't help but be tickled pink for Murderface when it was announced.

Imagine! Your best friend as Warmaster of the Officio! Sure, she had a couple of problems - like drinking, and popping painkillers like candy, and generally being as mild-mannered as a crocodile being force-fed ice cream while it has cavities in every tooth in its maw - but she seemed to grow into it, didn't she? She even stopped drinking as much and even led a couple of ops that turned out okay! Really well, in fact.

You grin to yourself, chuckling under your breath as you scroll through the pictures. Tapping the screen to zoom in whenever one of them showed something particularly interesting, or just one that piqued your interest as much as they made you feel a stab of painful nostalgia.

Murderface frowning at the camera as you drag her into view with your arm around her neck in a playful headlock, your phone raised for a selfie.

Misaka finally allowing Midori to braid a lock of her hair after the latter begged to do so, when it was revealed that Mami would be styling Murderface's hair once the festivities wound down.

Sayaka racing Murderface to whoever could down an entire bottle of champagne the fastest, with your blueberry idiot winning soundly. Murderface couldn't handle the bubbles apparently, with your best friend swallowing the wrong way and ending up with champagne streaming out of her nose. You nearly spat out your own drink at that, before falling to the floor laughing hard enough to cry.

And then...Murderface looking completely surprised as you got her her old jacket back. The one you gifted to her on Christmas, way back then. The one she was also wearing when you set her on fire as a distraction.

Hang in there, Murderface. You poke her flabbergasted face with a finger, forcing the image to shrink away from your touch. Wherever she is, you'll find her.

You close the folder and do a bit more scrolling through the folders. You don't seem to be getting any nearer to your destination, so you lean back to do a bit more time-killing.

...Wait, what's this? A folder at the very end of the list, named 'SECRET FOLDER'? That's...you have no idea what's in here. You don't take pictures of classified stuff, that's against Officio rules. You're not into taking embarrassing pictures of other people too, because that's just weird.

Frowning, you tap on the folder's icon. The screen quickly being overtaken by a thumbnail gallery of its contents.

Oh, it's Sayaka! It's only pictures of Sayaka. You visibly relax as you recognize your girlfriend's features looking back at you. From the bed of your shared bedroom. By herself. Face red like a tomato.

Posing in...

Oh.

OH.

"Those are amazingly cute battle panties." A voice says beside you, just as you feel your own face heat up, twinned with a throbbing sensation in your nostrils that spoke of an honest-to-god legitimate nosebleed.

How do you react?

[]Murmur with no small amount of pride as you continue staring. "I picked those out myself."
[]Shriek and attack! Go IMMEDIATELY for the jugular! "That's MY Sayaka you're talking about!"
[]Other.

"Picked them out myself," You murmur proudly as you continue to slowly and carefully scroll through each picture. Ever since that one Christmas when you decided out of the blue to get her a set of the most...tastefully-scandalous underwear you've ever seen, it's now become something of a secret and guilty pleasure between the both of you. Something to...spice things up for each other, while also making sure that NO ONE else sees or catches wind of it. You buy it for her, and she models it for you in private.

This is...new, though. Very new. Not the underwear itself, but the fact that Sayaka actually took photos of herself while doing the modeling. You wanted to take photos of her on your own, but she never allowed it - because, like you said, neither of you wanted this to get out, especially since you both had your careers to take care of. She was also worried you'd do something stupid like get your smartphone hacked or lose it somewhere.

"Really? Then you have excellent taste," the voice beside you says, in perfect if slightly accented Japanese. "And look at the abdominals on her. What's her routine? I've got good insertions, I know I do, but damn if I can't make these look as good as hers."

Sayaka's routine? You echo, blinking your one good eye, before turning to the supposedly-empty air beside you. Er. What was it again...something about a lot of core exercises but also dry fasting whenever she's not in active duty? You remember her saying something about how abs aren't made in the gym, but rather in the kitchen--

...Wait. Wait. Hold on one friggin' second here--

"Really? DRY fasting? That's a bit extreme, isn't it? Can't I just do a ton of situps and then--" The voice responds, but it's cut off by you bursting into panicked, adrenalin-fueled action. Your phone clattering to the car floor along with your half-empty box of Pocky as you reach out with both hands, grasping outwards to tightly grip the invisible neck of the Callidus that had snuck into the car with you. Shrieking all the while.

"That's MY Sayaka you're talking about!" You roar in half-triumph and half mollified rage as your hands do come upon a neck, but one encased in ice-cold and hard-edged armor. You ignore this and keep squeezing, even when you hear the voice squawk out in alarm. Tightening your grip even as one invisible, iron-shod hand clamps down on your wrist in a crushing grip, while another tries to dig its thumb into your one remaining eye. Making you twist and turn away from it as you continue to choke this ghostly shoulder-surfer.

"W-Wait-- Miss Kyoko Sakura, wait, stop, please--" It's here that the other hand trying to blind you suddenly begins to frantically pat your arm. A sign you all but too readily recognize as someone tapping out to surrender.

How do you react?

[]Keep choking. "Who are you? Who sent you?!"
[]Shake the invisible assailant. "If you tell anyone about this we're both DEAD! Do you fucking hear me?! DEAD!"
[]Stop choking, but keep your grip on it. "Show yourself, ghost! MANIFEST YOURSELF!"

... I might even go as far as to ask if he has any discord server... I just feel the need to talk to them.

Lastly...
I destinctivly remember red getting an upgrade after being 'reconstructed'. Red metal arm and all. In order to "keep up" if I remember correctly.

You shake the invisible assailant hard, your one eye wide and staring as you keep your grip on him - her - it, whatever. Your strength not only boosted by adrenalin, not through the sheer surreality of the situation, but also fear. Fear of the kind of consequences that you and the sneaky git here would inevitably face should any word or mention of Sayaka's well-meaning gift ever got out.

"Tell anyone about what you saw," You snarl at your prey around what's left of the Pocky stick that you've been nibbling on. "BREATHE one fuckin' word about it and we're both DEAD! Do you hear me? DEAD!" You give it another vigorous shaking, to the point that it seems to be...clanking. "She won't even care that you're all the way over here, or wherever this is! First she's gonna gut me like a fish, and then she'll slice this entire continent inta RIBBONS trying to find YOU!"

"A-alright, alright! I get it, Miss Sakura, I get it! Please, just let me go! I promise upon my honor and that of the Black Templars that what I saw will never leave this car!" The invisible intruder squeals. "P-pinky promise! Oh, wait, you can't see it..."

... You narrow your one good eye at your captive - or at least, where they would be at the moment - before slowly letting go. It's here that you curse yourself as you see the clues that you've missed - subtle indentations in the car seat, as well as what looks like visual lag whenever the sunlight streams from the window to play upon the black leather - a second or two for the light to actually flicker across the surface.

How the heck could you have missed that? ...Gods, you were sharper then. A bit more hard-edged too. You wouldn't have wasted time mucking around like this - you'd have immediately gone for the throat, no questions asked. Ripping it open with your curled fingers as claws or your own teeth in a savage bite. Especially in this kind of space, where you'd be hard-put to summon up a spear, much less actually use it.

You let out a sigh, more at yourself than anything else, before giving the ghost a whack upside the head. Your hand easily connecting with what feels like reinforced metal and plastek.

"O-ow! Miss Sakura, what was that for?!"

"For sneaking up on me like that, an' peeping at my girlfriend," You snap, before crunching down on the rest of your Pocky stick. "Now, are you gonna show yourself and tell me who you're working for, or are you gonna make me ask you again?"

"..." There's a brief crackle of electricity, one followed by a teeth-itching whine that vaguely feels like Culexus tech powering down - and your invisible seatmate manifests into reality: a small, petite figure encased in black, hard-edged armor. Armor that you've seen before, worn by the Second's most famous squad: the Black Templars.

The helmet's a bit unremarkable, looking like the sort that knights use, but a bit more futuristic-looking with crimson light shining from its cruel T visor. Two gauntleted arms reach up to remove this particularly intimidating headpiece, first reaching underneath the jawline to undo the pressure seals, before pushing upwards to pull it off entirely.

What greets you is a rather unruly shock of pink hair with a lock of white at the front, tied at the sides with a very cutesy-looking pair of black ribbons. Purple eyes, bright and eager - newbie's eyes - glow just above a pair of lips that seems to be used to grinning mischievously.

Good. That's good. Because you're PISSED right now.

For heaven's sake the Second invited YOU over! Now they're having their newbies sneak up on you like this?! It's like you're a wanted criminal or something! Shameful! A shameful display!!

What do you do?

[]Have your captive explain herself. Intimidate her further by aggressively snacking.
[]"Is this how you treat guests? Sneaking up on them in a car and peeking at their phone? I thought you guys in the Second were GOOD GUYS!!"

Yeah, pretty much.

I never claimed that the Akun chat archive wasn't much less convenient than reading 4chan-style posts, for several reasons. I did argue against the fact that they're almost impossible to follow. Akun has many advantages over /qst/, but I don't think that's a discussion that should be had here and now.
Hopefully, the former issue will be fixed in that wannabe ultimate questing site people are making.

"Well?" You growl at her, just as you snatch your phone and box of snacks off the floor - the act quick enough and violent enough to make your new armored friend flinch away from you, clanking as she inches away. "I'm waiting! Waiting for a really good explanation here, because apparently the same Officio I've been dreaming about joinin' - the very SAME Officio that I'm being loaned to - actually had me stalked in the very same car I'm being driven in!"

"I...um, please, Miss Kyoko Sakura, I can explain," The pink-haired girl ventures after a moment, a single drop of sweat trickling down her cheek. Both armored hands held up in a placating, surrendering gesture. "We didn't mean it as an insult, please don't take it that way. We have our own security issues, too." It's here that she works up a comforting smile, revealing an incisor that's a bit more prominent than the others.

"It's only standard operating procedure for us, to have all guests fetched directly from the airport and shadowed by at least one novitiate on the way to the Castle." You aggressively chomp on the rest of your pocky sticks, making her cringe with every loud, snapping bite. Every lip-smacking chew. "B-but really, Miss Sakura, shadowing was all I was supposed to be doing. That's really it. I'm not even supposed to be talking to you even if you were to suss me out. Just deactivate my active camo, apologize, and sit here quietly until we get there."

Really? But what would she have done if it turned out you were someone else entirely, like a Callidus pretending to be Sakura Kyoko? What would she have done then?

The pink-haired girl pales at that. "U-um...challenge you to a duel to the death?" She ventures with clear and almost painfully-green hesitation.

Standard operating procedure...! Security concerns! Your one eye narrows here, disbelief making you shake your head. From what you've heard, the Second never really bothered with those kind of things - simply because they were much too busy with all the heroing they do. Something as mundane and paranoia-inducing as security concerns were something lesser Officios worried about, allowed to keep them up at night.

They just trained, and trained, and trained - and every so often, marched out and murdered Witches en-masse. Any Callidus espionage unit trying to infiltrate them would simply have to contend with an entire Officio's worth of combat-hungry and battle-mad Eversors and Vindicares breathing down their neck.

But if they're concerned about security now...

As you mentioned earlier, you're not exactly a Vanus when it comes to being smart about this kind of thing, but you can get by. So when an Officio that usually doesn't have to be skittish with security is suddenly paranoid to this point, then...

"This is about Murderface, isn't it?" You grumble from around two Pocky sticks sticking out from your lips.

"W-who?" Frank and oblivious confusion greets you, your host's eyes widening, her expression quizzical. You narrow your one eye at this, before letting out a sigh.

"...Chiaki Matsuda. Ya know. My Warmaster." You elaborate, wincing slightly at the name. You never really got used to calling her that, no matter how much you tried. Sure, it sounds cute and all, but there was really just something fun about 'Murderface', right?

"O-oh! Oh, well, um...I don't think I'm at liberty to say, Miss Kyoko," The girl replies after a moment, her cheeks coloring. "You'll have to ask the Marshal about it. But..." She looks outside of the moving car, into the wide and open fields spreading out on either side of you, as if to check for any other intruder keeping tabs. "...you're really not that far off. Everyone is...understandably tense due to recent events."

No kidding. You shake your head again, reaching up with one hand to push the rest of your Pocky sticks into your mouth as you noisily chew, while at the same time allowing all of this to sink in. This makes her cringe again, but you also see her focus on both your arms. Blinking once, twice.

"Er...pardon me, Miss Sakura."

Yeah? What's up? You respond with your mouth full.

"About your...arm? We heard that you had it...augmented, or something? We were really looking forward to seeing it. If you don't mind my asking, what happened to it?"

You look down at both your arms - both made of flesh and bone, strong enough to apparently choke out a girl in black ceramite and plasteel armor. What's she talking abou--

Oh! Oh, right. You had one of them replaced with a really cool robotic arm. One that could fire its own fist, kind of a rocket punch sorta deal. It even had its own taser system, and some free space you could stash snacks in!

...You actually forgot about that for a bit. After what...happened, and everything. You're not even sure which arm you had it installed on.

How do you respond?

[]It's complicated.
[]Couldn't fit as many snacks in it as I was hoping. Inventory's better and easier.

You give it a moment's thought, before shrugging. Having a robot arm felt cool at first, only feeling slightly less cool when the very first thing you knocked out with it was your best friend - but as time went on and you tried your best to get used to it, things got to the point where you just had to have it taken off. You had your old arm grown back just a day later.

So, yeah. Having a robot arm actually started to suck a couple of days in. A whole lot.

"Oh? Well, that's a bit surprising. Marshal Karasawa would probably be disappointed to hear that, seeing as she's a huge supporter of augmentation. Well, at least if something happens that prevents you regenerating your lost limb, of course," Your pink-haired host hastily adds after her reply, as if trying to covering for her boss. As if someone liking robot arms that much was too much of a bad thing.

Yeah, you figure. Nothing was really stopping you from regenerating the arm you lost, you just thought it'd be fun. Well, that and you wanted to catch up with a couple of friends of yours, but...well. Things changed.

Hey, what a second. It's been a couple of updates and she hasn't even told you her name yet! Even after all that!

"A-ah, you're right. I'm sorry." The pink-haired girl cants her head forward in an apologetic bow. "My name is Astolfo of the Black Templars, Miss Kyoko Sakura. Novitiate Rank. I took the black just a few months ago. Again, um, I'm really sorry for intruding upon your...your private business earlier." She bows her head lower, deeper. "Please accept my apologies!"

You glower at her with your one good eye, before waving her off. You'll accept her apologies, sure, just as long as she keeps her mouth shut about what she saw. You're serious about that, by the way.

Sayaka can get REALLY fucking scary when she gets mad.

Really.

"I'll...I'll definitely keep my word, Miss Kyoko Sakura! A Black Templar never breaks her word! Never!"

Yeah, yeah. Fine. She can lift her head already, jeez. You pull out an unopened box of Pocky from your carry-on and toss it onto her lap. She blinks, before looking up at you, clutching the box of chocolate-dipped pretzels like it's a treasure. "Um, this...?"

It's hers, you tell her as you tear open the second packet of your own half-finished snack. Something to eat on the road.

"I...I see." Astolfo replies, turning the box over in her hands. Still somewhat puzzled about you giving it to her. Seems appreciative enough, though, by the way she's blushing again.

If I remember correctly, murderface and the second did have a slight bump over not sending Kyouko over to them. Sure, not enough to really cause much of an issue at the time. But that may have some slight effect on their current viewpoint.

Also, didn't QB say that her arm would never grow back, just like her eye? Hence having the robot arm implanted in the first place? I may be wrong due to the sheer time between runs, but I'm pretty sure the arm thing was covered.

The writfag cabal is definitely still alive and kicking. We're a group of good friends after all, and it has to come up if that's basically how we met. There is a big MGNQ-related project coming up on /tg/ that has been in a 'nearly done' state for like half a year now, at which time we said it would be a beta in half a year, but we are simply having too much fun with it, so I can't give you an exact date. I could start dumping loads of content right now, I guess, but you'd have to wait months all blue-balled for the rest.

Quite a few writeups hapened too in the frankly huge timeframe (Attarou having like ten or something new ones about Heather Crunch alone), we just had no real reason to shove those to anyone but each other's faces. There is only one Decu, but plenty of people who write.

Or... No. Perhaps, the quest would be better off without writefags.

Spoiler tagged to interrupt the thread's flow as little as possible.

I'm not sure if pre-apocalyptic is the right word. It's post-apocalyptic, but we're expecting a second apocalypse. Inter-apocalyptic? It's also possible this is all taking place inside a witch barrier the size of the universe.

Yeah there's been plenty of apocalypses, they just result in the timeline being scrubbed. There were about 100 timelines in canon alone, adding on however many went on between rebellion and the start of MGNQ

There's plenty of actual Noir in the story, but it's really more about the setting and general atmosphere, which you might not necessarily get with Kyoko.

The main way in which the premise of a Magical Girl show is twisted is that Magical Girls are no longer important, or influential. Despite what it may seem like, the main character is just a pawn trying to protect their way of life while trying to make sense of overly complex shenanigans. They can get a one time victory over the powers that be, but it feels so distant and absurd.

And in this world, you are always one day away from retirement.

No I mean whatever happened between the ending of PMMM and Chiaki being found in the depths of a witch's barrier. Which also caused Madoka to witch out and become Pinky. And made it so Chiaki can't turn back time any more. It has been made clear that this is the last timeline, you can't reset any more.

We have gotten quite a lot of information in regards to that, mainly from Malal.

The way I understand it is that this is the 'final timeline' in the sense that this is the one in which ingredients exist for some sort of a final conclusion (the weapons, Nameless One, Malal, it's own version of Homura you name it).

The conclusion being probably determined by whoever gets the weapons together. If it's Chiaki, then she'll probably also have to decide what to do with the result (unless she is being helped by the Transcendent one because she no longer will?). If the weapons were, for example, somehow lost through the Akashic Realm, then this mulitversal trainwreck would have to go on forever and nobody wants that.

Except someone who just wants to smoke and drink all day and keep the good things in life going, of course. Like a Noir protagonist.

Completely derailing Malal's plans may have had to do with that. Who knows if there are still some pointers in that phone, meant for the GOOD timeline, which will make us sad about having fucked up, but could still come in handy.

The double bitch throne dream she predicted, featuring Kyouko in the Second, is something we're pretty close to going towards, but Chiaki at least managed to get most of the Ninth out of the danger zone, so that's a minor bonus in our favor. Take that, Malal, we can do something right.

So, i'm not sure where we were in the mainstory. I remember

-The warmaster of the first is this timelines Homu and we are now a fugitive
-Mami is dead, Midori in a coma, Wendy written out of the story and TinyPete damaged
-We still need to collect all 20 of the golden weapons

-We have to prevent the vision from before Midoriquest coming true and fight it out with TTO and Godoka after that.

anything else that is relevant?

Don't count on that at all. What exactly is the Church of the Golden Land's deal is a pretty key question, since it ties to the nature of the main clusterfuck that Chiaki is hopelessly incapable of deciphering, and Wendy is a sort of a stand-in for that. She works fine in the story. Decu has said before that Wendy, as a character of a noir ex dame, or a former partner perhaps, was sketched up long before the particular writefag came and gave them a look and a personality (and proceeded to call themselves by their name, which is admittedly pretty suspicous on surface level, but then it made the writeups neater to look at).

She's disgraced, regretful, effectively lives in exile and was being used as a back-up plan to salvage Chiaki's sanity in the case of corruption overload. Now she's rediscovered some semblance of happiness through her marriage and pregnancy.

Ahh, I always figured Decu might have somewhat based the character on Wendy, the writefag or one of the writefag's characters since it seemed that they've known each other for a while. Decu does seem to have a penchant for that and remaking his old characters. He told me that he based Misaka off me once and I figured that he was joking or actually really just kind of based her off Rea, which he later asked permission to introduce as the Vindicare Rank Leader. So if you ever wondered why there's two loli tech-wizards hanging around at the Ninth..

You let the awkward silence slowly stretch out between the both of you as the car continued on its journey. Watching the scenery go by as you continued to snack, albeit in a much more relaxed and pensive state than before. Taking care to actually enjoy the taste, just as Sayaka had constantly reminded you to do, rather than simply inhaling whatever you're eating.

It's after a moment, then, that you remember just what had brought this strange meeting on. You allow yourself a huge grin as you turn towards the young girl, one hand smacking against the shoulderplate of her armor.

"You like girls or what?"

Your question - well, it was more of a frank accusation than anything else - makes the pink-haired Black Templar choke on the stick of pocky she'd been nibbling on, causing her to turn away coughing and sputtering.

"W-where did that come from?! Miss Sakura--!!"

What? You just wanted to know! It's not like she didn't out herself to you just earlier, commenting on your girlfriend's abs like that! Hell, if she only kept her mouth shut you probably wouldn't even have noticed she was there!

"U-um...well...!" Astolfo is clearly at a loss for words here, the blush on her cheeks quickly turning past pink and well into a healthy, embarrassed shade of red. "It's...I was just admiring her abdominal muscles from afar, that's all! That's normal, isn't it? You'd have to be blind not to notice them!"

Hah. Well, you can kinda get it. You're not an abs person yourself, but Astolfo's right - you'd have to be blind not to appreciate them. In fact you constantly hear a lot of people compliment Sayaka about her abs, especially during the times when she'd drag you to the gym to get back on track with your strength training.

You remember one time in particular, when you were still new to the entire fitness thing and all - you'd been trying to remove the bar from the smith machine for the better part of an hour when you saw Sayaka surrounded by other Eversors, all of them sweaty from working out. Crowding around her like a buncha tittering schoolgirls crowding around a boyband member, begging to touch her abs every now and then (which she always refused).

Well, that's neither here nor there. You're not someone to judge someone else about what gets their boat floating, you're not that judgmental. Still, you asked.

"I-I am a Black Templar, Miss Kyoko! My one true desire is to rid the world clean of Witches and Heretics! We suffer not the unclean to live!" Your host insists, sweat bedewing her brow, dripping down her cheek. "I-I am steadfast!"

Yeah? Sure. You're still waiting for your answer, though.

"P-please ask about something else!"

You chuckle here, before shrugging. Eh, sure. Why not. That's fine. You're not gonna push it.

How is the Second holding up, then? About everything that's happened. They approached Kyuubey first to help the Ninth with finding Murderface, sure, but there's Mami to think about.

Also, you're not entirely sure what the Second thinks about Murderface, at that.

Astolfo blinks at your sudden change of tack, as if unbelieving that her appeal actually worked. "Erm, well...there's not much to say about that, Miss Sakura." Astolfo seems to calm down now that the subject's a bit less private and a lot more serious. "We feel the loss of Tomoe Mami as sorely as the other Officios do, for sure. After the funeral ceremony, we also arranged for a month-long vigil for her. From what I hear, the High Marshal really liked her, too."

But what about Murderface, then? What'd they think about her?

"...I don't think I'm at liberty to respond to that question, Miss Sakura," Astolfo replies carefully. "But I will say that there is a...particular sentiment among the Black Templars about Miss Matsuda, and her alleged involvement in Miss Mami's death."

And what's that, then?

"Not...not a very good one, I'm afraid." Your pink-haired host says. She holds up a hand as you open your mouth to ask her to elaborate. "I've already said too much, though, Miss Sakura, so I'll refrain from speaking further. You'll have to ask the High Marshal directly about it. I'm sorry."

...Really? She's going to leave you hanging like that?

"I'm sorry." She bows again.

Nhn. Well, that's fine. You can undertand. You'll just have to ask this Marshal person about it.

Still...this is going to be touchy, isn't it? If Astolfo is to be believed, the only Officio that offered to help find the Ninth's Warmaster in secret is also one of the many who believe that Murderface - your best friend - is guilty of what the First is accusing her of. Guilty of killing the one person that everyone adored and looked up to, even more than the Warmaster of the First.

You should say something here, but you're not exactly sure what. All you know is that the cold feeling of dread at the pit of your stomach that you'd been studiously ignoring is back again.

It's fine, you tell yourself. As long as you believe in Murderface, things'll turn out okay. You'll find her, and you'll find out everything that happened, and the First will be exposed for the liar it is.

It's just...it's just not fair, that's all.

You bite your lip here as you force yourself to remain quiet and allow the moment to pass. It's not the kid's fault, you tell yourself. You asked, she answered, and from what the First has been feeding everyone, you're not sure why you expected anything different. After all - what reason could any Officio have to doubt the First and its Warmaster? The exemplar Officio where the best of the best got recruited? The Ninth doesn't have one, nor does the Second. In fact, you'd wager that the Ninth has a bigger hardon for the First - what with the First Warmaster being Japanese and all that. That was kind of a source of pride for a long while.

So, no. As good as it would feel to correct Astolfo about your best friend and prove her innocence - you decide to just leave it be, and set it aside until you can talk to their Rank Leader or High Marshal or whatever they call whoever's at the top.

The official story, as told by the First and recounted by Kyuubey - was that Tomoe Mami had been staying up at the Lunar Base for quite some time. They had their eyes set on her to be a potential candidate, and was about to formally induct her into their ranks. Chiaki Matsuda - Murderface - was invited up to the base to be there for the ceremony - a small and private affair, nothing to be publicized or made a big deal of.

It was during the ceremony that Chiaki Matsuda seemed to break down, before lashing out at Mami a split-second later. Screaming obscenities about how it should've been her - how she should have been elevated to the ranks of the First instead of the blonde. How Mami didn't deserve the promotion.

The First's only Culexus, who barely managed to foresee the assault just before it hit, threw herself in harm's way - shielding Mami but also suffering grievous injuries in the process. Undaunted by this Chiaki Matsuda kept attacking, kept trying to murder Tomoe Mami. She even summoned - SUMMONED! - a few Witches right inside the Lunar Base, all to keep the other members of the First busy. And it did work - not only did she succeed in murdering Mami but also very nearly turning the entire base into a lifeless, soulless wreck in space.

Her traitorous deed done, Chiaki Matsuda would go on to take the Equerry of the First, Karasawa Vintage hostage, in order to get access to one of the savior pods. The First tried to stop her from escaping, with its Warmaster at the forefront - but it was too late. They even tried to pursue, but they had to be called off to help keep the Lunar Base from getting completely destroyed. At the end, Chiaki got away with murder - and it's assumed that she also murdered the Equerry on the way down, too.

And that's it. That's the entire report, paraphrased here and there, as dictated by the First. A complete and accurate recounting of the events.

Murderface was something else, sure. Haunted, yeah. Broken, maybe.

But to say that she'd be crazy enough to kill Mami over a promotion - the one person who not only rescued her from that Nightmare, but also the one that brought her up into the Officio instead of being...you don't know, being left for dead in an alleyway or made to rot inside a Silent Room - it's just not true. Completely unfuckingbelievable.

One way or another, you're going to find your best friend. You're going to find her, and prove to everyone - even the First - that she's innocent and they can all go fuck themselves for believing something so clearly made up that it made you laugh the first time you heard it. Laughing hard and long until you broke down crying at the sheer absurdity of it all.

You're going to do that or die trying.

You can only hope - just as a large, imposing and shielded castle suddenly rises from the horizon - that you find her first before anyone else does.

Because you're not too sure of what you might have to do to protect Murderface from them.

And if Sayaka could ever forgive you if it comes to that.

>The official story, as told by the First and recounted by Kyuubey - was that Tomoe Mami had been staying up at the Lunar Base for quite some time. They had their eyes set on her to be a potential candidate, and was about to formally induct her into their ranks. Chiaki Matsuda - Murderface - was invited up to the base to be there for the ceremony - a small and private affair, nothing to be publicized or made a big deal of.

But I thought it was a huge deal that Mami was being executed. I thought people knew. Did they forget? Did somebody do a memory modification? Was Chiaki's viewpoint unreliable? What happened?

iirc the only people that we can be -sure- to actually know about the execution were: Members of The First, Kyubey, Rea (only possibly since Kyuubey had to discuss the First's defenses with her, but she had to leave after for Chiaki's discussion) and Chiaki (and TTO and her minions).

To everyone else on the Ninth, the deal about Mami being inducted might have been used as cover for Mami overstaying at the Moon and Chiaki needing to go with Kyuubey there.

It would make perfect sense that the First would keep it from everyone else even if this didn't happen. Mami has that kind of influence after all. In fact, them even planning to execute her seems like a terrible choice to begin with and that someone was conveniently present to be blamed is all good of a coincidence.

Didn't someone on the Moon approach us with the deal to provide distraction ? She was practically enabling Chiaki to end up in this situation.

To add to your explanation, Vintage herself admitted that killing Mami was an act that no one in The First wanted to do (well, apparently). But, considering that Mami tried to kill Hazuki on her own will, then the sentence is excution, for all intents and purposes. Aaaaaaand, suddenly a convenient excuse appears, someone to put the blame on.
But I agree with >>2515887: the excution of Mami was indeed an event sufficient important to shake the magic world. The only explanation would be that the incident with Hazuki and Mami was only announced to QB (not even to the whole Officio).
I´m going to ask Decu about this on ask.fm.

>>2515887
Although, there is another explanation: the attack of Mami would be the starting point of the plan of The First (wathever would that be) that QB told Sayaka about. Mami acted againts Hazuki, and they used that opportunity to start, by calling Chiaki to The Moonbase.
But, I suppose that they didn´t really considered that a witch was going to appear, and that Chiaki would use that to try to escape. So they lied to the world to wrap things up.

I think there's just groups with different allegiances under the First, and everyone there only know certain things based on where they stand.

Luxuria was speaking for a faction of her own. (Her being up there means she is at least a staff in the First, in disguise)
Vintage, while Equerry and in the know of a lot of things (like connections to Luxuria and the sort), is likely left out of quite a bit herself.
Hazuki and Mami had a falling out, but that means they were actually -together- in something originally.
Nanoha's threats might mean she either just has a grudge against the Ninth, the Devil thing reached her ears or she's in it with Hazuki and Mami.

Your name is Sakura Kyoko, and you are a Magical Girl.

You're currently on a quest to find your best friend. To pull her out of whatever mess she's gotten herself into this time.

Here you are, a million miles from home. A million mile away from your own girlfriend to everyone you know. From anything remotely familiar and comforting.

But it's fine. You'll be fine. You'll learn as you go along. You're good at that. Annoyingly good, in fact, you remember Malal telling you years ago.

So yeah. No time to feel homesick. No chance to get cold feet.

Everyone's counting on you. Including her.

And you're not going to go home empty-handed, even if it kills you.

When the car that's been driving you around for the better part of an entire thread finally comes to a halt, it's right in front of what looks awfully like those haunted castles those ghost hunter shows overseas keep traipsing about in. More than that, it looks absolutely massive, with brutal spires clawing its way up a bright blue sky, and towers that could have easily harbored prisoners as well as those huge bow-and-arrow things that get wheeled about, on account of them being so huge. And at the very front of it, a couple of ways before the actual gate that would lead into the castle itself - stands a tall and impressive statue of an armored knight with a cape and a sword, in a pose that could easily be described as heroic. Her features revealed and unhidden behind a helm, speaks of a resolute and almost placid defiance at anything that might have faced her down, belying a complete and utter confidence in herself and the sword she wielded.

It's all very grand, and very inspiring. To be completely honest, you've been looking to be in this very same spot for quite some time, even back before all this started. You wanted to be here more than anything.

For the longest time, this was your Disneyland.

But now that you're here, it...you don't really feel the magic happening.

You only feel cold, and a strange dread of things to come.

"Well, here we are, Miss Sakura," Astolfo cheerfully ventures after a moment, politely trying to break the rather awkward silence of you simply sitting in the back seat, staring out the window, towards the towering castle your ride has parked itself beside. "Now, um, if you'll excuse me, I'll have to re-engage my optical camouflage."

Huh? You blink your one good eye at this. What for? You already know she's there, she can't hide from you again! This isn't a videogame!

"O-oh, it's not for you, Miss Sakura! It's for my own benefit. I'm not supposed to even be out of cover until I'm back inside the Castle, to report to my Captain about things." There's a fizzle of electricity as the novitiate Templar's armor seems to glow, before it - and the person encased within it - slowly dissolves out of sight. "Coming off that, would it be possible for you to pretend that this never happened, Miss Sakura? Just so I don't have to muck out the stables as punishment again?"

The girl's voice takes on a pleading tone as you briefly jiggle the door's handle, in preparation to leave.

How do you respond?

[]Ah, sure, why not. Last thing I want is to cause trouble for a rookie. Just don't blow your cover next time.

It barely takes you a moment to make a decision. Ah, sure, why not? You shrug at Astolfo - or at least, the spot where the pink-haired Templar had been a few moments ago - before pushing open the car door on your side. You won't say anything so long as she doesn't say anything either - just like she promised earlier. Besides, the last thing you want to do is to cause trouble for a rookie, and have them do...what was it they would've made her do?

"Muck out the stables?" The invisible knight squeaks in reply.

Yeah. The heck does that mean?

"Oh, it's...well, it's basically cleaning out all the ordure out of the Officio's horse stables, Miss Sakura. The...the poop. All of it."

Oh. Well, why didn't she say so in the first place? That sounds awful! Anyway, sure, you'll cover for her, no problem.

You just hope that she learns to stay out of people's private stuff before she really gets in trouble.

"Thank you, Miss Sakura! I won't forget this, too!"

Right, right. You shoulder your carry-on full of snacks, and haul your solitary piece of checked-in luggage - an ominous, ruggedized black case with the Ninth Officio's logo emblazoned upon it that Kyuubey insisted you take with you - out of the car's trunk. You grunt slightly at its cold, dead weight, before making your way towards the castle entrance. Your eye automatically drawn to the heroic statue guarding the front of the castle, tracing its features.

And it's here that you blink. Once. Twice. Three times. The fresh pocky stick you'd been absently nibbling at dropping from your mouth in shock as your jaw drops.

That statue...that face...and that hair!

You know that face!

There's no mistaking it!

"Hey!" You call out to the shadow standing behind you, making it freeze in place. You point towards the tall marble statue in front of you."You didn't tell me you guys made a statue of Sayaka-chan! That's amazing!"

"M-Miss Sakura, you're not...you weren't supposed to know I'm around," Astolfo whines miserably.

Nevermind that! What's the statue of Sayaka for? You didn't know she had fans way over here, too!

"A Statue of Miss Sayaka...? O-oh, oh! no, that's not Miss Sayaka at all, that's the statue of the First Knight, Lady Octavia von Seckendorff!" The invisible knight volunteers. "We consider her the very examplar of a Black Templar, with her ironshod sense of justice and unbreakable will!"

Octavia von...what? That's a made-up name if you've ever heard one! No, that's definitely Sayaka, even if she's wearing that crazy-looking armor!

It's notable that, as we know from Yuma's flashback story, the templars themselves recognize Sayaka as looking very much like the First Knight, but according to Decu, Kyouko looks nothing like the Blood Knight.

It's possible that this statue (and whatever inspired it) having Oktavia's details as a Magical Girl is entirely to blame for that. Ophelia wields a lance just like Kyouko does, but Kyouko's face is not a candlelight, her costume is not a kimono, and she very obviously does not have a horse either.

It all makes sense now. The real reason Sayaka hates Murderface's guts.

She remembers all the timelines we fucked up, and we dragged her into another one to 'help'

See, though, while present Sayaka is clearly not as far from Oktavia as Chiaki is from Homura, as far as she is kept away from it, she might be able to prevent turning herself into the total dildo that her meta-self is. It's a road to more power, but less character freedom.

A lot like giving the Soul Gem over.

You tuck your box of snacks under your arm and sling your carry-on over your shoulder, freeing up both your hands enough to grab your smartphone and angle it up for a decent picture. No matter what Astolfo says, the statues's a dead ringer for your girlfriend! You gotta take a picture and show it to her later once you're settled in. Wonder how she'll react to it? Probably weirded out just like you are, but who knows?

A couple of pictures later - including a rather cheeky one with you grinning down at the camera with the statue looming over your shoulder - it's here that you make to call out to Astolfo, for her to check if you got a good angle or not. But instead of the camouflaged girl replying, you instead get nothing in return.

Absolute silence, except for the wind howling and the faint, far-off bleating of sheep in the distance.

Er...you guess she had to leave or something. Huh. Well, that's a bit rude, isn't it? You know you have to pretend she didn't blow her cover, but a goodbye would have been nice, at least.

Shaking your head, you swipe your phone locked and shove it into your jacket pocket. Grabbing hold of the Officio-branded luggage's handle, you begin your careful journey into the Second Officio's stronghold, looking about every now and then to see if there's anyone you can actually ask about the place, or just someone to talk to.

Getting to the entrance proper actually takes you...a fair bit of walking, actually. The statue wasn't as close to the actual gate as you thought, less of a front door ornament and more of a landmark that stood between you and a pretty expansive courtyard.The stone path leading up to the huge iron gates of black iron wasn't all too friendly to the wheels of the luggage either, and after a while you'd given up trying to drag the thing and simply hauled it up your shoulder.

What the heck is in this thing, anyway...? All you know is that Kyuubey hurried you off with it in tow, saying that you should give it to the High Marshal of the Second as soon as you touched down. While he didn't quite say that you weren't to open it on your own, you could tell that this wasn't some typical souvenir an Officio representative would usually bring with them to gift their gracious hosts with. Not that you were under the impression that it was, owing to the circumstances, but...

You shake your head and continue on your way. You were curious, sure, but at the same time....you're not the kind of employee who gets too excited about things way above your pay grade. You're told to lug something around for your boss, you carry it to where you're supposed to go. No questions asked.

After a while, you finally get to the gate. It's got the same cheerful atmosphere as the statue itself, with black cast iron bars topped off with spikes. Some of the spikes have been forged to look as if screaming demon skulls have been impaled through them.

Cute! Really cute. Murderface probably would've liked this place, for sure. Or maybe Kharn, you're not too sure.

The gate itself is shut, barring you from the castle beyond. Past the gate, you can see the cold, dark inside of the Black Templar stronghold, filled with the faint sounds of swords smashing into shields, armors, and other swords.

Oh, and screaming. A heck of a lot of screaming.

What do you do?

You wince slightly at the noise coming from inside the castle. It kind of sounds like Sayaka's training them in there, except a whole lot worse! Still, it's a bit comforting to know that even from across the pond, there exists Officios that like to train their girls as hard as they can.

That said, you still gotta get in there. As tempting it is to just haul yourself over the gate - it shouldn't be too hard, even if it is ridiculously tall - you gather the Second probably wouldn't be too appreciative of that. After all, you're still a guest, and it's not really nice to start climbing over your host's property. You can even hear Sayaka starting to lecture you now about big words like 'protocol' and 'decorum', stuff like that.

So you try and make enough of a racket to announce your presence, in the hopes that someone would notice and finally let you in. You even try lifting the huge rings attached to the front of the gates and slam them into the bars, creating the kind of noise that you're pretty sure SHOULD be audible even over the din of harsh, fevered training. All while nearly shouting yourself hoarse, yelling your name, Rank, Officio and serial number.

...No dice. No dice at all! Whatever kind of training they're doing, they're too way into it that they can't even hear you over themselves! You shake your head here, both in grudging respect and annoyed disapproval. It's not like you never get carried away especially when it comes to sparring, but come on, now! Can't someone just call time for a moment and just let you in, or something? This is--

+ One of them is here, Kyoko-san. Please be careful. +

A pulsed message, soft and warm. Slotting cleanly into the gaps in your thoughts.

A voice that you're all too familiar with, but one you haven't heard in so long.

You turn around, and see a figure in the distance. A figure swathed in the pale blue cloth of a Ninth Officio sick bay patient gown. Long, unbound hair spilling down a scalp and shoulders in a cascade of emerald green.

Your one eye goes wide.

Midorin...?

How do you react?

[]Run to her. Why's she here?! She's supposed to be back at the Ninth! She shouldn't be out here!

>Past the gate, you can see the cold, dark inside of the Black Templar stronghold, filled with the faint sounds of swords smashing into shields, armors, and other swords.
So this is NOT the Second Officio HQ? They probably have multiple castles, granted.

Easy, confirmed by Decu himself: because TTO doesn't want Pinky to know It's existence. The moment she appears, Pinky will detect her, and probably will try to kill her. So, from TTO perspective, is better to let Pinky be distracted with Chiaki

The Black Templars are an organization that existed even before the Officio system, on Hasmallim's paycheck, and persisted after the Officio was made. These days they are seen as elite troops and accept mostly people from the Second, but I don't think they're supposed to be taking any orders from them, and have their own completely independent command structure. They're not the only extra-Officio group formally contracted to a particular Incubator, but maybe the sole officially accepted one. Since the Second is already pretty prestigous, they should be the best of the best.

Their deal is supposed to be focusing completely on battle, probably on the Earth's surface, wheras the Second has a lot more shit going on than that to deal with, and this arrangement probably helps them not step on each other's toes while still doing the first knight's work.

Unless Decu changed a lot to make them more useable, which would sort of make sense because together with Erebus breaking off and the desolation of Walpurgisnacht there were only like all of two Templars left with no trainees to speak of.

Your first impulse upon seeing someone familiar - especially someone you consider a close, personal friend of yours - is to run up to them, and drag them along with you wherever you're going. Midorin's no different in this regard: you've always liked her the moment you got acquainted with her through your best friend. Nice kid, bit of a dork sometimes, but overall just someone who's well-meaning and kind who got herself stuck between a rock and a hard place. The only way out turning out to be the on the business end of an Incubator's contract.

Heartbreakingly common to meet her type on your line of work. Even more common to see them dying deaths they never deserved, desperately trying to survive but unable to bite through the pain and the fear to do what's necessary. And when they did die, they either went crying, screaming, or both. Crying about fate, about the cruel hand that they've been dealt, about how they never asked for this suffering.

And you never begrudged them for their tears, nor judged them for their weakness. Everything they said was true, after all, even if it didn't matter much in the end.

Still, not all of them were the same. Some handled themselves perfectly well, rivaling even those who took up the contract willingly, as well as those groomed, trained and bred for the role. A few made it to the vaunted Leaderships of their chosen ranks, and even fewer still managed to wrest the title of Warmaster away from their supposed betters. And when they died - and they did die, just like how a Magical Girl would - they did so with grace. With dignity. With a smile on their face as the world disappeared around them.

You felt that Midorin was in that latter category. She didn't complain much, no matter how things began to affect her or how hard it got. You never pried about her past or even asked about it, but you knew she'd had to deal with quite a bit to get to where she was. She had the look of one who did, that careful and dutiful way she carried herself, expecting suffering and blessing to go hand in hand. Acceptance instead of resignation.

So you considered her a friend. A really close one that needed companionship just as much as protection. After all, someone who got along so well with your best friend - how could you not?

And when she suddenly popped up like that, you really had to stop yourself. Rooting yourself to the ground, preventing your legs from carrying you over to her, in that desperate need to seek familiar company.

Because you know for a fact that Midori should be back in the Ninth Officio, back in Mitakihara. Back in Japan.

Comatose. Sleeping the slumber of the peacefully dead, yet still breathing. Still vital.

Hidden away at the deepest levels of the Officio, protected from harm.

With everyone there doing all they can to try and get her to wake up. Even resorting to prayer to do so.

But who could else could it be but Midori? WHAT else could it be? A trick of the light? A Callidus trap? Or even a test coming from the Black Templars, trying to see what you're about?

You shake your head here. None of those made sense. But...

+ Midorin? + You send the pulse back, taking the remnants of her own message and using its remaining warmth, its remaining energy, to carry your own. + Midorin, is that you? +

Her reply is...immediate. To the point that you take a step back as it hits you, laced as it is with such force and urgency.

+ One of them is here, Kyoko-san. One of her blades. Here to test those who have taken the Black. +

+ Here to stop you from finding Senpai. +

...

How do you react?

[]Try to ask her something else, to get to the bottom of this. How is she doing this? Is she already awake back in Japan?
[]You've heard enough. Summon your spear, vault over the gate, and start hunting. No one is going to stop you from finding Murderface!

You grit your teeth and force yourself not to jump into action yet again, to push away the reflex of summoning your spear, vaulting over the gate and start hunting. The message was cryptic as it was, but you could figure out things easily enough - especially that part at the end.

No one is going to stop you from finding Murderface. Absolutely no one. You'll find your best friend or you'll rip apart the whole world trying to.

But even with that, you still found it in yourself to stay in one spot, to not act as impulsively as you would have had in the past. You knew that you had to get to the bottom of this, somehow. How was Midori doing this? You're pretty sure Callidus can't project themselves this far, or even pulse with this kind of clarity and accuracy! What's going on here?!

+ Don't. Have. Much time. + Midori's apparition pulses back, her shaped thoughts fading, growing weaker. + Still. Asleep. Not. Ready yet. +

+ Wait! + It's here that you step towards her, just as you see her form start to grow pale, turning translucent in the hot sun. + Wait, Midorin-- +

+ Find Senpai, Kyoko-san. I can. Hear her screaming. Down in the abyss. +

+ Buried in a tomb of her own making. Imprisoned. In a fortress of her own regrets. +

+ Please. Be careful. +

With that mortis-cry, the apparition completely fades from sight. The thoughts that it had used to convey its message to you fading from your mind like the memory of a fever-dream. The very sight of the green-haired girl appearing so suddenly, and then disappearing just as quickly making you feel suddenly much more alone than you already felt.

Behind you, the fighting gets louder. More desperate. More feverish.

What do you do?

[]No more questions. Arm yourself, cut the gate open. Start hunting.
[]Climb over the gate and try to cautiously figure out just what the HELL is going on. Go MAXIMUM SNEAKY if you have to.

Since it seems like things are at a lull, mind if I ask a quick question to all you long-time quest followers?

I've been bookmarking a large amount of quests that I need to read through. Either due to their significance or because I find the concepts/writing interesting.

The biggest problem I have however is time. When you guys read through the archives for a finished/stopped story, or when catching up to a currently running quest, do you guys read every comment? Cause it feels like I'm missing out on a decent amount of context and entertainment when if I were to skip the comments. Between the paranoia, banter, clever ideas, and conversations between players and the QM there is a lot to be gained from it. But on the other hand, its a crap load of extra reading to sift through. Especially with something like SWQ or the other giants, where posts hit over 1000 a thread. With over 100 threads each.

For some of my favorite quests I tend to read everything. But I figure if I want to keep my sanity and save a good amount of time, for all other quests I might just have to ctrl+F the QM's name and skip through each of their posts instead. Do most of you do this? Or is it a folly to avoid?

>> ☐ Anonymous (ID: AnO9mHO7) 05/10/18(Thu)01:57:19 No.2549002

It really depends on how long the quest is and how fast the threads go. Usually for longer running popular quests, after the first few threads I'd only read QM posts unless a post had a lot of replies.

You should've kept the arm, you grumble to yourself as you make to sneak into the Black Templar's stronghold to see just what really is going on in there, to find out what Midorin tried to warn you about. Ignoring your instincts and pushing back against the temptation of simply transforming, cutting your way in, and charging at full sprint while asking questions in a really loud voice - an approach that you not only fully and wholeheartedly endorse, but always try to find opportunity to do so.

Because more often than not, it's the one approach that always ends up working out for you.

It's also the most fun, but you promised Sayaka never to admit that to anyone who asks you straight out. Just in case they were recording you or something.

Anyway. You go MAXIMUM SNEAKY instead, pulling yourself up the Black Templars' black, ironwrought gate with one hand while still keeping hold of Kyuubey's errand with the other. Using your booted feet to keep yourself from slipping downward while you negotiate the skull-encrusted construct, finding tenuous handhold after handhold. Gritting your teeth as the effort of muscling yourself up one of the tallest gates you've ever seen - or scaled - gives you a hefty challenge, since you're doing this completely untransformed. Just in case transforming might give away your position, or something.

You learned that from Sayaka, too.

It's here, as you finally let yourself drop on the other side a couple of minutes later - that you've left your ACTUAL luggage outside. You know, the one with your clothes, and your snacks, and all the other stuff Sayaka packed for you just before you left? Yeah. That's behind the gate that you've just climbed over.

You crinkle your nose here in irritation as you contemplate climbing back up and over the gate to fetch it, but...ah, it's probably going to be fine, you decide finally as you turn away from it. From the car ride over here, it seems like you're miles away from civilization. Who's going to steal it anyway, some sheep or somethin'?

Reaching up to run your sleeve-clad arm on your sweat-bedewed forehead, you give your luggage one last look back before heading onward. Moving as quietly and as discreetly as you can as you infiltrate the Second's castle - or at least try to.

You don't even get to move a couple of steps before something hard, armored, and completely invisible smacks into you from around the corner. Almost knocking the wind out of you had you not moved just in time to absorb the impact better - by way of putting Kyuubey's luggage in front of you, allowing the reinforced case to take the brunt of the blow.

"O-ow! That...Miss Sakura!" The invisible train that nearly knocked you flat rematerializes into reality as Astolfo, the pink-haired Knight from earlier. A completely panicked look on her already pale face. "I...h-how did you get past the gate?! I was just about to get you, and--!"

You saw yourself in, you tell her. You were waiting for quite a bit outside.

"A-ah, I'm...I'm sorry to hear that, Miss Sakura." There's a guarded tone in the younger girl's voice. "Um, anyway, since you're here, can I take you to the waiting area? The High Marshal is a bit...indisposed, at the moment. Please, this way--"

Something in the general direction of the loud, echoing din of battle explodes. Not a crash, nor a clash of blades, something is straight-up blowing up stuff in there. The rumble of the explosion both trembling the floor underneath your feet as well as palpating your guts.

You look at Astolfo with your one good eye in questioning silence, while she stares back with her two purple own, almost as if defying you to ask about that.

How do you react?

[]Politely and move past Astolfo with the intent of investigating the noise.
[]'Are you guys having a party just for me, or is something going down? Either way I want in!'

"Are you guys having a party just for me?" You ask brightly, taking note of the drop of nervous sweat making its way down Astolfo's cheek - somewhat diminishing the look of polite and determined defiance the younger girl wore. "Or is something going down? Either way, I want in!"

"A-ah...a party? N-no, we didn't--" Another jarring blast of noise, one louder and even nearer, causes the novitiate knight to visibly cringe. "Yes! I mean yes! Yes we are, so please let me just take you to the waiting area, Miss Sakura!"

With that, Astolfo begins to gently usher you to a direction heading away from the din, even though every fiber of your own being - as well as your Eversor training - is all but compelling you to run towards the audible, obvious danger. To immediately seek a contest of strength, a worthy opponent to cross blades with.

Or at least that's what Sayaka says it's all about. You just like getting into scraps when all is said and done.

Oh, wait. There's also the thing that Midori warned you about. Of course. That too. You can't forget that.

"Yes what? That there's a party going on, or what?" It's here that you make to push against Astolfo's ushering movements. Stopping or at the very least retarding the girl's progress in pushing you into some boring room to get bored right out of your skull. "C'mon, throw be a bone here! I ain't waiting in any damn room, I already did my waiting outside the gate! Or is that how the Second treats its guests, huh?!"

"That's...we don't..." Astolfo replies after a moment, clearly conflicted. Clearly pained. "Miss Sakura, please don't be difficult...!"

...Wow. Normally that'd be enough to work. This kid saw right through you! Pretty impressive!

What do you do?

[]Drop the act, time to be serious. Give her one chance to tell you what's going on before you find out for yourself.
[]Keep the act up. Act offended and huffy, guilt her into showing you just what's up.
[]MAXIMUM SPEED! Transform discreetly and leave an afterimage to confuse the newbie!

The story the first are selling is "Chiaki came to the moon, summoned a super witch, destroyed most of the moonbase and then fled" which is essentially true, they only made up the part about Mami. If the Templars are attacked by a strong witch now they are bound to make use of that "Chiaki is trying to destroy all Magical girls so you have to take action" or something along those lines.

You let out a sigh as you realize you'll have to drop the act here. Funtime Kyoko - the cheerful, loud, and admittedly thickheaded Kyoko you've had no problem adopting and keeping up once you met Sayaka - has to go for now. Serious Kyoko - the side of you that you've decided to abandon the moment you saw that there wasn't any need for her at all, since you weren't living off of the streets just to survive - would have to resurface briefly. Otherwise you'd be forced to suffer your host's hospitality, waiting in some room somewhere while other people are clearly and audibly having fun without you.

"Oi." You say after a moment, using a tone of voice that you could easily hear coming from your missing best friend, just as the armored girl tries once more to usher you towards the waiting room. This seems to stop her cold in her tracks.

"Miss Sakura...?" She asks, uncertain. You take this moment to turn around and face her, forcing your lips into a disappointed frown. Briefly imitating the look Sayaka always gave you whenever you let yourself go during cheat day, or whenever you regaled her about your latest shenanigans involving Murderface.

"Let's not feed each other bullshit and call it a caviar tastin' party." You tell her right out, as direct as you could manage. "Now, I don't know what you think about us in the Ninth, and I couldn't care less even if I tried, but I got a real healthy respect for you guys."

Astolfo blinks here, clearly surprised at your sudden outburst and lecture, enough to accept it in stunned silence. You take this as a good sign and press on. "That respect has limits though, understand? I didn't get flown out here to get jerked around. Now, I'm givin' you one chance to tell me what's happening here--" You pause to jerk your hand towards the din, pointing at it with a an accusing finger. "--or I'm gonna find out for myself. One way or another, I'm gonna know, and only one of those ways ends up with you not getting into trouble."

All color drains from Astolfo's face, and you can't help but feel bad for her. You could have said something to soften this blow - about how you've been in the same exact position as her, and you know how these things go, or maybe even just grinning and sneaking in a tiny 'please - but you clamped down on that impulse as hard as you can.

Funtime Kyoko isn't here anymore, you tell yourself firmly. Serious Kyoko has to stay for a little bit.

"Miss...Miss Takamachi of the First Officio is here," Astolfo manages after a while, letting the truth out in a frantic babble. "I'm...I don't think I have all the details straight, but I think she was just here for a meeting with the Marshal! And then it suddenly turned into a sparring match, one on one!"

One on one...? But if it's just that, then why does it sound like the entire Officio's going to war back there?

Also, Takamachi of the First...? Was that what Midori meant when she said 'one of her blades', or something? You barely recognize the name, but you briefly remember one of the First having some sort of weird nickname. The Black Angel, or something like that...there's a good chance you got it wrong, but it's something along those lines!

"I...um, I think Miss Takamachi also challenged our entire Sword Order," Astolfo said. "Ourmost experienced Eversors, second only to our Marshal and High Marshal in terms of combat capabilities." The both of you wince as you hear a particularly-loud crash echo from the courtyard, sounding very much like an armored body being pummeled through a brick wall.

"And...and I think they're losing." The pink-haired girl adds. "Really, really badly."

How do you react?

[]Immediately leave for the courtyard, leave Astolfo behind. This you gotta see for yourself! Maybe even see just how good someone from the First actually is!

[]Have Astolfo show you to the courtyard. This way, she doesn't get in trouble, and you can decide whether you want to step in or not.

Funtime Kyoko is losing it. Seriously losing it! Yeah, alright, you don't think the First is all it's cracked up to be, and honestly you think there's something really strange about them and how they've been acting - especially when taking certain events into consideration - but you've always wanted to see one of them fight, even if it's just in a sparring setting. It's said that such a sight is not really something you see unless you're either completely lucky, or utterly SOL - as not only is it a rare occurence, but the fact that it's happening within sight most likely means that you're the one about to be on the receiving end of a First Officio member's wrath.

But that only made the concept of it all the more exciting, if only to answer the many questions bouncing around in your head. Just how did they fight, anyway? What kind of techniques did they use? Did they use weapons at all or just used raw magical energy to fight? How do they conduct themselves in combat?

You know, that kinda thing. Of course, you've seen Vintage spar once or twice, but...well, and this is something you had to censor yourself on, especially when Sayaka expressly forebade you to express it anywhere else, but - you don't really think that sending an entire zoo's worth of shadow creatures, animals and monsters at someone counts as 'fighting'. Not even if she calls it 'Lair of the Beast King Technique' or 'Waku Waku Animal Land'.

But yeah, Funtime Kyoko would have absolutely left Astolfo in her dust while dashing off to jump into the fray, spear in hand and grin on face. And you would have followed immediately, too, if you hadn't committed yourself into playing Serious Kyoko, at least for now.

So you ignore Funtime Kyoko for now. Instead, you tell Astolfo to lead you to the courtyard, or wherever it is that they're doing the sparring. This way, she won't be getting into too much trouble, while also giving you a chance to decide on whether you want to actually crash the party or not.

Which sounds...yeah, okay, that's boring and watch-wearing dildo as all get out. But you're not the dildo here, really, when you think about it. You're just acting like one. You're not ACTUALLY one.

Thankfully, Astolfo is much more cooperative this time around, leading you through what appears to be a labyrinthine procession of corridors. The sound of the fighting growing more intense as you turn each corner and pass through each corridor.

But even before the courtyard itself comes into sight - even before you round the last bend that would bring into view the smoking rubble such a loud and violent melee would have reduced any training or sparring facility into - it's here that you feel it.

The teeth-itching whine of magic. So raw, so untamed, so unrestrained that it infected the very air, turned it thick and charged with its own energy.

And so...so bloodthirsty. That was it. Bloodthirsty. Making your own mouth water through sheer sympathy alone.

"Here we are--" Astolfo says, but you immediately shush her, thrusting Kyuubey's luggage into her arms while you step forward quietly on your own. Peeking out from behind the corner to see just what you might be missing - and what you might be up against.

What you do see makes you freeze in place. Not in fear, but through sheer force of willpower, summoned up in a split-second. Every molecule in your body begging - no, SCREAMING - for you to jump in there, transformed, dual-wielding spears at the soonest opportunity.

It wasn't a sparring match at all. Something so one-sided, so brutal, couldn't be called that.

In the broken courtyard lay the bodies of forty black-armored knights, each one either completely and utterly knocked unconscious or trying to pick themselves up and utterly failing. Their suits of armor in various states of disrepair, with some of them even lying in pieces. Each component glowing orange-hot, scorched and carbon-scored.

The culprit responsible for this wanton devastation standing right in the middle of it. Her auburn hair, tied into two elaborate twintails, gently flowing in the wind as she smoothly and almost casually parries a black-bladed sword with her staff. Her Magical Girl costume - a simple and uncomplicated affair of a pure-white tunic with a barrier jacket worn over it, accented with blue and emblazoned with the sigil of the First on the back - barely sports any damage at all, in complete contrast to the ruined armor of her downed opponents.

She blocks the black blade again, a placid - if bored - look in her blue eyes. The action performed so insultingly effortlessly that it gave the entire scene an air of absurdity it didn't deserve. Moreso with the sword itself being nearly twice as big and tall as she is, and wielded by a Black Templar with what appears to be oversized, wholly robotic arms rather than flesh-and-blood ones encased in armor plating. The multiple servos in the blocky manipulators screeching, whirring desperately as they tried to output the incredible amount of force needed to strike through the First Officio member's guard.

"Yield, Marshal Enyo Karasawa." Says the murderess in white, in the quietest voice you've ever heard anyone speak during a fight. "Surely you must see how pointless it is to keep on fighting like this. We're only sparring, after all - you don't need to adhere to your Officio's crude but admirable ways this much. Take the loss as it's given to you. You don't need to be so dramatic about it."

"A tempting offer, but I will unfortunately have to decline." Comes the equally-calm, equally-composed reply, the robot-armed Marshal smiling faintly through a mask of her own blood. Her black hair, cut in a short and severe bobcut, framing cold crimson eyes. "One of the Black Templars' eternal vows: Accept Any Challenge, No Matter The Odds. I'm sure you're familiar with it."

"...Oh, yes. I nearly forgot about that." The white-garbed staff wielder returns the smile. "You know how easy it is to just glaze over once Kiryuin starts talking. And she does like to talk about this particular branch of the Second in particular."

That seems to get a rise out of the Marshal, with the massive black sword whirling in the air once, before smashing right into the crimson staff that had - presumably - soundly defeated forty other swords just like it. The sudden blow seemingly pushing its wielder quite a few feet back.

"We ARE the Second," The Marshal corrects her opponent. "We are not just a mere 'branch'. Please keep that in mind next time, Miss Takamachi."

"Duly noted." The one addressed as Takamachi returns, just as she steps forward, raising her staff. The crimson gem embedded at its tip blazing with a hellish light as the weapon itself seems to shift, lengthening and unfolding. Encasing the jewel in what appears to be a triangular, spiked speartip of bronze and gold and silver. "Raging Heart. Shooting Mode." The weapon seems to speak, in a harsh machine voice akin to that of a Culexus' vox - but smoother, much more human.

"Since you're proving to be much too stubborn to simply see sense, then I suppose I'll have to force you." The weapon's massive speartip is then leveled right at Enyo, with what appears to be a massive gunmetal slide working its way down its shaft - before being pulled harshly back, ejecting a smoking shell. And then another. The action making the jewel grow brighter. "Pity. You only needed to answer my questions, Enyo. We could have had a wonderful breakfast, you and your Sword Order."

"I did answer them," Enyo says simply as she steps back from this, a single sweatdrop tracking down her cheek, etching a dirty line across the caked blood there. Seemingly bracing herself for what's to come. "But we're still here, regardless. If you wanted more satisfactory answers, you could have at least waited for the High Marshal's return."

"I'm not a patient woman, Enyo. But that's neither here nor there." Takamichi replies, the small smile still on her face. "One last chance, though, and that's it. Yield, and let this tiresome charade end."

"Never." Comes the immediate and instant return.

A sigh. "Suit yourself. Raging Heart?"

[TWO SHELLS LOADED. DIVINE BUSTER CHARGED UP. READY TO FIRE.]

That teeth-itching whine comes on again, just as the digitized voice issues from the weapon. Just as a circle of neon-pink light etches itself underneath Takamachi, its perimeter filled with unknowable sigils and ominous-looking pentagrams. The ground shaking as the jeweled speartip seems to be accruing energy - energy to be sent flying across the courtyard and crashing into Enyo. A blow that even the robot-armed Knight may be too injured to actually tank in any kind of capacity.

How do you react?

[]Interject. That's cheating! You're not supposed to be using magic during a melee sparring session, dammit!
[]Keep yourself hidden, let things play out the way they should. It's not your problem - not right now, anyway.
[]MAXIMUM FUNTIME. LET'S SEE WHAT THIS BITCH CAN DO.

All of these choices seem like bad ideas.

We should follow Midoris advice and keep our secret mission secret.

Let's just ruin the mood completely. We're good at that.

Also probably gonna have to skip on this one, thanks for running anyway, Decu!

My brain says
[]Keep yourself hidden, let things play out the way they should. It's not your problem - not right now, anyway.

but my inner Kyoko says
[]Interject. That's cheating! You're not supposed to be using magic during a melee sparring session, dammit!

Considering we haven't even delivered the package proper and we can be somewhat sure of what topic the bitch's questions were about, I'm opting for the former.

If this isnt magic at least we'll know who we might be up against later.

Yeah, we need to not draw attention to ourselves. First lady probably won't kill anyone, so we shouldn't have to intervene.

Serious Kyoko would realize that revealing herself to stop this admittedly BRAZEN and UTTERLY BLATANT case of OBVIOUS CHEATING here would only cause bigger problems for everyone later on.

That said,
